Child Needs A Spiritual Uplift Today

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Last summer I attended a Sunday school in a rural area where 96 children were present. This is about the average attendance the year round. Except for one small room for the tots, all the classes meet at different places in the main auditorium. Yet they do not disturb one another much. Often such Sunday schools are far more alive than those with expensive and numerous separate rooms. One of the most pathetic visits to a Sunday school I ever made was to a large city church, several months ago. It had facilities for 1,500 persons, but fewer than three hundred were in the building. I am convinced that this rural Sunday school and community church (where my wife attended as a child and later was teacher and superintendent) has had a most wholesome effect on this fine rural neighborhood.

Spiritual Education Imperative

Perhaps there has been no time in the history of our nation when church and Sunday school should prove of so great value for mental health, moral growth and spiritual uplift as right now. Looking about us at the world's woes from materialism, some of us at least see, in contrast, rich promise in things spiritual.

Year after year I grow more convinced of the abiding values in religious exercise and education.

Parents who see values in Sunday school will not just send their children. They will go with these children. In doing so they make the children feel that going is worth while. Besides, these parents get their own spiritual dynamos recharged. See, furthermore, the values to the family relationships when all together participate in this enterprise. When the whole family go together and go every Sunday, the child even in his teens rarely objects.

Need Better Teachers

I wish there were more good teaching in the Sunday school, with more opportunities of expression from the children and less preaching by the teacher. I wish there were more appeal to youths who play in bands and orchestras and sing in choirs at school to share in the music program of the Sunday school and church. I am often inspired by the wonderful teachers I have met who are constantly educating their boys and girls to serve the community and enjoy doing so.

No Magic in a Beauty Aid

By HELEN FOLLETT

Women expect cosmetics to perform miracles. They do a world of good, but one must be patient and persevering. At the sight of a display of toiletries the lady is glowing with enthusiasm. She fancies she has not been buying the right beauty goods and that is why the report from the mirror is not thrilling. She takes cash from her purse, trots home with the wet and dry cosmetics and in a week she is off the whole kit and outfit. Unreasonable, she is. If facial lines have been forming for years, how can she hope to efface them in a fortnight? Silly!

There is no quick magic in jars and bottles. There is help, yes. With perseverance there will be changes for the better. You have to work, have hope and faith, keep going.

Daily Care

One can at least standardise one's looks, stay as is, defy the old man with chin whiskers and the scythe. That is a woman's duty to herself and to her family.

Do be consistent, dear paper friend. Get high grade beauty aids, stick to them, give them a chance. You won't need many. A good cleansing cream, a massaging cream and a skin tonic will fill the bill. Use the light cream for removing make-up, the heavy one for massaging at night, the tonic for freshening when you haven't time for a good old face washing.

Wrong Room Accessories Tasteless As Wrong Dress Accessories

It has always been an enigma to me why some women who have good taste in the accessories they choose for their clothes have no vision when it comes to the choosing of home accessories.

We meet Mrs. Smart sallying forth from her home. She is definitely a "well-dressed" woman, every accessory perfectly chosen. Yet too often this well-dressed Mrs. S. has a blind spot when it comes to choosing — or discarding —accessories for her home.

Let's look at the living-room from which she has sallied forth. We smother when we enter it. Although we see that it has a good basic dress — the pieces of furniture are in good taste — the ensemble is spoiled by the wrong accessories, and, most disastrously, by too many accessories.

Apparently Mrs. S. has never had the courage to discard one of the knicknacks or gewgaws she has collected. Every available space on every available table or shelf is covered with tasteless gimcracks—funny-looking ash-trays and cigarette boxes that could so easily have been replaced with inexpensive, simple, good-looking ones. A handsome lamp-base looks mighty uncomfortable under a battered shade loaded down with worn fringe and rosettes and with a tassel attached to the light-pull.

The piano is gasping for breath under a piece of material voluminously draped over its lovely walnut frame. And, as if this weren't enough, cluttered on the folds of the material are a heterogeneous collection of unattractively-framed photographs of the "family and friends."

Mrs S. had a few scatter rugs that she thought shouldn't be discarded. So she smothered her plain-colored wall-to-wall carpet with them, and, making her floor look more topsy-turvy, she placed two of these rugs at angles to the wall.

And the mantel shelf! Mrs. Smart's two simple white vases, interesting in design and in excellent proportion to the mantelpiece, would have been perfect decorations. But they weren't enough. So we see the rest of the shelf laboring under its load of nondescript little figures.

Mrs. Smart's pictures are ornately framed, and are suspended from the picture molding with large picture-hooks, and brown silk cords with brown silk tassels. The last thing you are able to see is the picture!

Mrs. S. once bought a good-looking sofa. But it's smothered too with "fancy" cushions that are more appropriate for her bed-room chaise lounge than for the living-room.

If this lady had the same seeing eye about what the well-dressed room is wearing as she has about what the well-dressed woman is wearing, she'd take a firm hand to those accessories in her living-room.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Here's a Grand Hallowe'en Party

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Our crowd tried out several of the "Quaint Parties" we read about in your column, and one engagement actually resulted from the alphabet party. Now we want to give these two lovers a Hallowe'en party and help along two more couples who seem to be dangling on the verge of an engagement.

Unless the weather is going to be particularly warm, I think we'd better make it an indoor affair. A boy friend of one of the girls has borrowed a barn from his uncle for the occasion. What would you suggest?

E.B.

The decorations should consist of pumpkins, sheaves of wheat and autumn vegetables. Arrange these along the wall and on the trestle table on which the supper is to be served. Pumpkin lanterns are in keeping with the celebration. It is important that every lantern be properly shielded so that you won't have a fire on your hands.

There's a wide latitude as to costume for Hallowe'en parties—witches hats for girls, hobgoblin clothes for boys or peasant costumes, if you happen to have any on hand.

Fortune-telling is the great stunt for a Hallowe'en party. Fortunes may be told with cards, palm reading or tea leaves. You don't have to be very accurate. Everyone is interested in hearing of nice things about himself. Music can be furnished by a couple of country fiddlers and a guitar.

Bobbing for apples is watery, but "good, clean fun". At midnight, the real fun begins. A girl walks backward out of doors, and looks in a mirror to see the face of her future husband. A young man with serious intentions should manage to be on hand to look over her shoulder.

Wind up the evening with country dances, such as the Virgina Reel. The eats suitable to the occasion are pumpkin pies, doughnuts, cider, popcorn, and candied apples.

When a Lady Isn't a Lady

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I come from a part of the country where we do not allow ladies to stand in streetcars, but sometimes, when I give a lady my seat, she doesn't even say "thank you", though I notice she usually takes it. Again, the men who see me do this act of common courtesy smile. Do they think I'm a boob?

George.

Any "lady" who accepts a seat in a streetcar and doesn't say "thank you" isn't a lady. It is certainly a very courteous gesture, whether it evokes smiles or not.

In Love With Brother-in-Law

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married only a few months to a man I never loved and knew it before we were married. I thought I had to go through with the wedding rather than cause a lot of gossip if I broke my engagement.

And now, since my marriage, I find myself in love with my husband's older brother. I know my husband loves me dearly, and I don't want to hurt him, but must I sacrifice all my life's happiness for this foolish mistake? What can I do, Miss Fairfax? Please help me.

Unhappy.

To tell you now you should have turned back even at the altar, if you weren't in love with the man you married, would be like locking the stable after the horse is stolen. But as long as you made this mistake, I hope you are not going to add another misstep to it by going on with an affair involving your husband's brother.

You haven't said whether this man loves you, but for all your sakes I hope he doesn't. Take up something which will interest you —some work or study. And please do not live so exclusively on your emotions

For Saturday, October 26

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

PROGRESS and advancement in certain directions are indicated by this day's planetary operations, although it may demand the most astute and cautious procedure in order to reach such auspicious circumstances. There is sign of a possible disruptive and radical force at work threatening to undermine and destroy not only with drastic precision but with much subtlety and craft, working from within as well as without. But by careful plans, self-restraint, strategy and the assistance of those in power and influence the worst may be sidestepped if not definitely routed. Be particularly alert to frauds through writings, contracts, etc.

Those whose birthday it is may not be surprised to have a sudden and strange force drastically descend upon ambitious projects, disintegrating and uprooting with whirlwind efficacy, unless more than unassailable plans are sagaciously worked out and also unless such threatened projects have the substantial support of those in unshakable prestige and dependability. Many subtle as well as open attacks may menace, especially through the misconstruction or fradulent purpose of writings, documents or contracts. Be wary and cautious every step and this devastating situation may be annihilated, and progress ensue.

Fashion Flashes

EASY DOES IT when it comes to dinner costume, since the casual skirt and blouse idea seems to result in the smartest models. A new number has a shirtwaist type blouse in pale pink sheer trimmed with bands of pink and gold sequins on the yoke above the tucked front. The long slim black crepe skirt has a fan-pleated godet in front.

the new frocks. For daytime, a black wool dress has broad bands of black velvet tied with tiny velvet bows across the bust and over the hips.

IF YOU LIKE FEATHERS, you'll find many of the nicest hats so trimmed. A high felt hat of pinky beige with a high, pointed crown and dipped brim has a shoulder-length sweep of coq feathers in iridescent green, bronze and blue.

ALL DONE UP BROWN just about describes many of the new ensembles. A soft shade of pinky-beige teams up beautifully with brown and is used for a big suede bag and elbow length slip-on gloves, both trimmed with touches of gold thread.

FINISH OFF your outfit with a smart bag. A beauty is of dull black antelope made with a broad bracelet handle of the antelope held by a stone-studded broad gilt metal band.

THERE'S INTEREST in the new shoes, for never were shoes less bizarre and more attractive. A delightful black suede pump has a broad saddle of black grosgrain ribbon and a huge pleated bow of the ribbon. Nice for important afternoon wear.

CHATTERTON W. I.

The October meeting of the Chatterton W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Nathan Reid. Mrs. Leonard Prest, the vice president, capably took charge of the meeting. Nine members and one guest were present. The meeting dealt with "Peace, Education and International Relations". The Roll Call was well responded to by "What Peace Means to Me," and the thought was carried out in a hymn. The business was then attended to and Mrs. B. Bleecker, Red Cross leader of the Institute asked the ladies to respond to the call of the Red Cross Society for more funds. It was decided to have a 25c supper and program in the Baptist Church on Oct. 15th, the proceeds to go to the Red Cross.

Rev. E. M. Cook was the guest speaker of the afternoon and gave a very interesting and helpful talk on "Peace, Education and International Relations". Mrs. Gerald Frederick then read a poem and the meeting closed with the benediction. The hostess then served a very tasty lunch

Chatterton W. I. Supper

The supper at the Baptist church on Oct. 15th was enjoyed by all present. The proceeds of the evening were $11.65, $10 of which was given to Mrs. Bleecker to give to the Red Cross Society.

Mr. Arthur Duncan of Stirling was the chairman for the evening and left with us a few serious and helpful thoughts as well as his usual fun and joke. The music for the evening was a solo by Miss Marjorie Parks and a duet by Miss Aleita Horton and Mrs. Gerald Frederick. Rev. E. M. Cook was the guest speaker and gave a splendid address on Red Cross Work, explaining why we need the Red Cross and what it is doing. He compared the medical help the Red Cross now helps to provide for the soldiers with the very poor medical help and nursing provided only a few years ago. Mrs. E. B. Pinkle, president of the W. I. thanked those who took part in making the evening a success and all joined in singing "God Save the King".

JEALOUSY AMONG CHILDREN

I was unwilling spectator the other day to a happening in a home where there is a new baby. It aroused me so much I felt impelled to speak sharply to the person responsible This person was an uncle of the new arrival, and he had just paid his first visit to his nephew. He paid elaborate compliments to the parents, within the hearing of the other child in the family. Then, he turned to this older, his nephew, and twitted him in such words as, "Well, Tommy, you're not the lord of the manor anymore."

The child, already very solemn and unlike his usual self, ran from the room on the verge of tears. The uncle laughed. It seemed to him a good joke that Tommy "couldn't take it."

He had, however, unwittingly, cruelly hurt a child. He had always been a hero to his nephew. Heretofore, whenever he visited the home, he brought Tommy presents, talked to him and played with him. This time he had given all his attention, except the few twitting words, to the newcomer. Tommy had been having similar experiences with his other adult relatives. Consequently, it took no great power of observation on my part to see that Tommy was going to be a problem in the home, because of his jealousy of his new brother.

Frequently the joy of the arrival of a new baby in the home is marred by an outburst of jealousy on the part of the older child. Parents often discover this problem with a good deal of surprise and annoyance. Yet it is perfectly natural that a boy or girl, who has had the whole home revolve around him for a few years, should be jealous of the little stranger who is sharing the affection and attention he once had all to himself.

Parents who expect a new arrival should realize how the event may affect an older child and take the proper precautions. If they are, there is no reason why this jealousy can't be prevented. If it isn't, it is bound to cause a lot of unhappiness in the family

Naturally, when a new baby arrives, the mother's time is almost completely taken up for a while. She hasn't the time she formerly had to spend with the older children. At the same time the newcomer's arrival causes a lot of confusion and inconvenience in the home. The older children naturally look for someone to blame for this unpleasantness — of course, it is the new arrival who is blamed.

They observe, too, that when visitors come to the house it is the new baby who gets the attention. So the older children get to feeling more and more neglected. Often, they get the idea they are no longer loved nor wanted at home. Particularly is this true if they are unusually sensitive by nature.

Thoughtless visitors will often compare the baby with the older child and remark that the infant "has a nicer mouth than Jimmy". Or a remark like this may fall on Jimmy's ears: "Yes, we're glad it's a girl. I wanted a girl when Jimmy was born". These are the days, too, when Jimmy finds his freedom restricted. He is admonished: "Keep quiet, baby is sleeping". And since babies sleep a great deal of the time Jimmy begins to feel that the house is run entirely for the benefit of the newcomer.

Now, this whole picture can be changed if parents will just be a bit thoughtful. If the older child is a boy, the father can do a whole lot to make Jimmy feel better by joking with him about the way "we men" are neglected when a baby arrives. He can point out to his son that he isn't the only one who is being forgotten in the general excitement. He can compensate for the mother's lack of attention by giving more of his own.

If the older child is a girl, then she can nearly always be appealed to by being given a share in the responsibility of looking after the younger one. All parents have to do is to show the older child that instead of resenting the newcomer, it is his or her duty to make the little stranger from the other world at home

Newspaper Says Negotiations Have Been Postponed

London, Oct. 25—(CP)—"Frij Nederland," The Netherlands newspaper published in London, said last night that negotiations between Netherlands East Indies authorities and the Japanese have been postponed pending reports by economic experts.

The semi-official publication in a dispatch from Batavia said "The view of well-informed sources is that the Japanese feel it would be better first to work out more details about trade negotiations."

"In the meantime," it added, "there are discussions between different oil groups which are taking the closest interest in the various moves."

New British Democracy Being Born in Hail Of Bombs-Thompson

New York, Oct. 25—(CP)—Dorothy Thompson, New York columnist, told the closing session of the Herald Tribune forum Thursday that she believed democracy could only be saved by democratic men and women—not by soldiers, tanks and airplanes.

"Today the new British democracy is being born in a hail of bombs," she said. "I believe the English - speaking peoples, with their air and naval bases throughout the world are invincible."

Referring to the United States, she said that "We must not close our eyes to warnings, external and inner, that bid us beware. Americans are not held together by geography. Americans are held in union by devotion to a common idea and faith in the common man. There is a surge across the world today, but it will not obliterate civilization."

Richard G. Casey, Australian minister to the United States, said that if Australia was ever called on to make its contribution to a general war effort in the southwestern Pacific, that contribution would be far from negligible."

He described the natural resources of Australia and the spirit with which Australians would enter any struggle to defend their freedom and independence from an aggressor who sought to dominate the southwestern Pacific.

He said Australians were alive to the real nature of the moral issues at stake in the world and that they were determined to see the war through to the end.

"We do not admit the possibility of defeat, for the struggle is, to us, a second fight for freedom," he said.

Hayman Forced to Use Same Backfield for the Entire Game Due to Injuries of Regulars

Quiet Confidence Brewing in Argo Camp That Toronto Will Win Contest

GOLAB IS OUT

Balmy Beach Has Chance to Cinch First Place by Defeating Sarnia

By SYDNEY GRUSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

It seems that everybody but Toronto Argonauts believe that Ottawa Rough Riders are the best team in the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

After what the Riders did to them last Saturday, it might be expected that the Argonauts would want no more of Ross Trimble's mighty machine. Yet here it is on the eve of the return game in Toronto and the Argos can hardly wait.

For a week a strange confidence has been brewing in the Argonaut Camp, until it has spread among the team's followers that one or two breaks might change the whole complexion of the picture painted after Ottawa's 41-6 triumph last week. The mystery of it all is that there's nothing concrete on which to base their hopes.

There's still the same weak line that Tony Golab, Dave Sprague and Bob Hazal ripped to shreds; there's no kicker to stand up to Sammy Sward and there's no indication that Lew Hayman has brought his attack to a point within a week where it might be expected to match the Ottawa offensive.

Hayman may be forced to rely on a five-man backfield for the full 60 minutes, six of his regulars being reported on the sidelines with injuries. If the injury jinx catches up to any of the backfielders Saturday, the coach will call on linesmen to fill the breach.

Golab Won't Play

Golab won't be available for the Riders, but Hazel has shown that he can fill Tony's shoes capably and the host of Rider reserves give Trimble a margin seemingly unassailable. The Argo plan undoubtedly is to go all out for a quick touchdown, then to settle back and attempt to hold the East's greatest plunging and running squad. This corner doesn't think it can be done.

On the day, Ottawa appears to be the best bet. The program is a complete turnabout from last Saturday with Hamilton Tigers at Montreal and, in the Ontario Union, Toronto Balmy Beach at Sarnia and Camp Borden at Hamilton against the Alerts. It promises to be every bit as exciting a football afternoon as last week.

Running on a three-game winning streak, including a 14-5 triumph over Sarnia, Beaches are primed for the battery with an open attack they showed for the first time in Toronto last Saturday. Frank Seymour, suffering from a broken cheek bone, will be rested and the emphasis will be placed more than ever on the pitching of Bobby Porter and Art Walker.

Tackling Brigade Ready

The Beach tackling brigade showed they could handle the Sarnia Aces—Hank Galloway, Gus Schelers, Ralph Perry and Joe Woodcock—and there's no reason to presume that they can't repeat tomorrow.

Still hoping for a play-off berth, Montreal's unnamed entry should be able to score their second victory over the Tigers. They won handily in the Tiger lair last week and if the Montreal standbys such as Ray Mullins, Tommy Burns, Gord Noseworthy and Pete Jotkus continue to battle for every inch, they'll become increasingly hard to stop.

The Tigers, so far, have been the season's disappointment. They have improved under Art Massucci and George Wright and some of the others are doing everything one man can, but it isn't enough for the Big Four competition. What they need is more young fellows to give Wright and Al Lenard some support on the front line.

The soldiers from Camp Borden and Hamilton Alerts played a 10-10 tie last week. Both tossed away chances to win it, and if a call has to be made, it goes to Camp Borden.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

(By The Canadian Press)

Look alikes: two of the Rookies in Montreal Canadiens' Training Camp at St. Hyacinthe, Que.—Jack Adams of Vancouver and Elmer Lach of Moose Jaw Sask.,—could almost be taken as brothers.

"Ike and Mike, they look alike", is the way other players in the camp refer to them. Adams met Lach for the first time when the latter boarded the train at Moose Jaw en route to St. Hyacinthe. Now they chum around together, can be found together at training table, play on the same line and even form a pretty fair softball battery, with Adams doing the pitching.

Two promising former Oshawa Junior stars appear likely to sign contracts with Toronto Maple Leafs. They are Buddy Hellyer, a former Montrealer, and Nick Knott. Gossip at the St. Catharines, Ont., Camp of the Leafs has the youngsters slated to put in their apprenticeship with Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League. Knott comes originally from Kingston, Ont.

BLAKE GUNNING FOR GOAL RECORD

Ace Left Winger of Canadiens Promised Nice Bonus if He Makes Grade

(By Robert Clarke, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Oct. 25—A piece of information for the netminders in the National Hockey League to mull over is that Hector (Toe) Blake, ace sniper of Montreal Canadiens, intends to gun for the group point-scoring championship this season with a vengeance.

Blake has been promised a nice, fat bonus if he makes The Canadian Press all-star team this season and the left wing star considers that the most certain way to attain this goal, something he has managed for the past two seasons, is to win the individual championship.

Toe talks about his chances quietly but confidently, readily admitting the difficulties that lie in his path.

Here is what Blake says about the debit side of things:

"I won the league scoring title two seasons ago. How many men ever win it more than once? Sweeney Schriner (of Toronto Maple Leafs) did it twice in a row when he was with New York Americans and Howie Morenz certainly must have done it. But then everybody isn't a Morenz.

"Then there is a certain amount of luck attached to it all. You have to go through the entire season without injury. In addition, maybe some young fellow will come along and smack in goals all over the place this season."

Blake figures that his hardest fight for the left-wing spot on the all-star team will come from Woody Dumart or Roy Conacher, both of Boston Bruins.

SMYTHE DEPENDS ON YOUNGSTERS TO LIFT TROPHY

Manager of Toronto Leafs Has Made Few Changes in Squad Since Last Winter

A NEW COACH

'Happy' Day Replaces Dick Irvin and Smythe Appears Well Pleased With Change

By Dick Sheridan Canadian Press Staff Writer.

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 25 (CP)—When you're riding a winner the tendency is to stand pat, which no doubt explains why Conn Smythe has made so few changes in his Toronto National Hockey League Club this year. The Leafs haven't won the Stanley Cup in eight years but they came so close last year they could see their reflections in it.

Smythe got a new coach—Clarence (Hap) Day—retired Reginald (Red) Horner from his hot spot on the defence to one of club goodwill ambassador and sold two players, Pep Kelly to Chicago and Murph Chamberlain to Canadiens. Otherwise the club is destined to be the same as that which faded before New York Rangers in the cup finals last spring.

Day succeeds Dick Irvin who coached the Leafs for nearly a decade before going to Montreal Canadiens. The new coach played on the Toronto defence for eight years and was a league official for the past two.

Smythe is depending on a mixture of seniors and sophomores to bring the Leafs home in front. He may switch his lines but it is doubtful if he'll sell his players.

The club veterans are goalie Turk Broda; defencemen Bingo Kampman, Reg Hamilton, Jack Church, Bucko McDonald and forwards Syl Apps, Gordie Drillon, Bob Davidson, Sweeney Schriner, Gus Marker, and Nick Metz.

Look Great in Workouts

These sophomores have been dashing about in great fettle during workouts and Smythe believes Stanowski and Goldup are two of the best younger players in the league. After watching the six-foot Goldup split a defence and then draw out the goalie, the Toronto manager exclaimed:

"There's my idea of a real N.H.L. player. That lad can do everything and do it better than most players."

Smythe has several promising defence prospects. Two of them, Frankie Eddolls and Ernie Dickens, are juniors and ineligible for pro hockey. Dick Kowcinak, Johnny McCreedy and Blink Bellinger of last year's Kirkland Lake Allan Cup winners, are the amateur forwards striving for a contract. Bas Bastien of Timmins, Port Colborne and Atlantic City, is bidding for a job in goal.

The Drillon-Apps-Davidson line is expected to operate as a unit again but Smythe is experimenting with Schriner by shifting that left wing veteran to a centre spot between Chisholm and Heron. Schriner, who led the league in scoring when playing for New York Americans, is a natural playmaker.

Taylor and the two Metz boys comprise another line while Langelle centres Marker and Goldup for a fourth forward unit. Kaupman and Stanowski are paired off on one defence with Church, Hamilton and McDonald striving for a spot in the other rearguard.

Smythe won't say so but the consensus around the training camp is that one high-scoring defenceman could convert the club into a Stanley Cup champion.

The first casualty at the Chicago Camp in Hibbing, Minn., is Art Wiebe. The veteran N.H.L. defenceman suffered a gash over the right eye requiring seven stitches and also a slight brain concussion in yesterday's workout. Manager Paul Thompson of the Black Hawks believes Wiebe will be ready to play again by Saturday.

Three thousand fans turned out at Detroit last night to watch their Red Wings go two games up in the annual city series with their farm club, Indianapolis capitols of the American Association. The N.H.L. Club dominated play in the first and third periods for 6-4 victory. The veteran left winger, Syd Howe of Ottawa, led Detroit scorers with a pair of tallies.

B. C. I. and Albert College Win Respective Rugby Games

Collegians Down St. Mikes 35 to 15, Mott, Rogers and Goyer Accounting for All Points Scored

SIX-MAN STYLE

Albert College Wins 11 to 7 Over O.S.D., After Deaf Lads Knot the Score Once

Belleville Collegiate and Albert College registered wins in the city junior six-man Interscholastic football conference yesterday when the Church Street "Collegians" downed St. Michael's Academy "Irish" 35 to 15 on the B.C.I. campus, while the Albert College kids won 11 to 7 on their home gridiron. In winning the Belleville Collegiate remained undefeated in two starts, while Albert College pulled up into second place, tied with St. Mike's, with a win and loss each leaving the O.S.D. kids trailing in the cellar slot, having lost their initial two games.

At the B.C.I. campus the speedy "Collegians" ran up 19 points before Jack Doran's "Irish lads" realized Coach Cliff Yerex's shifty power machine had swung into action. Doug. Mott opened the scoring by booting for a safety and one point. Mott came back to skirt the Irish left end for a touchdown which was converted and Graydon Rogers carried the pigskin over for two successive touchdowns and converted both to give the Collegians 19 big points before Vern Goyer swung into action for St. Mike's and cracked the homesters' line for two substantial gains and plunged for a touchdown to make the count 19 to 5 at the halfway mark.

Play More Even

Play was more even in the second half, although Doug. Mott ran back a returned kick to make the count 24 to 5 and Rogers scored his third touchdown and converted it to give the Collegians six more points. Trailing 35 to 5 the Irish dander was up and Goyer was worked overtime, but in a prolific manner, and he scored two touchdowns in the last five minutes of play to make the final count stand at 35 to 15.

Strangely enough nine touchdowns were made by three players, each getting three tries. Doug. Mott and Graydon Rogers each scored three touchdowns for B.C.I. while Vernon Goyer scored all of the points gained by St. Mike's.

The line-ups: Belleville Collegiate—Snap, Rogers; wings, Thomson and Bray; quarter, Carson; halves, Mott and Cunningham; subs, Keegan, Brown, Gannon and Welch. St. Michael's Academy—Snap, M. Callaghan; wings, Shepherd and Power; quarter, Goyer; halves, McQuaid and Wilson; subs, Pigeon, Bunton, D. Callaghan and Forrester. Referee—Homer Townsend.

Many Fumbles

Although the game was not as wide open as the former and more fumbles were seen, Albert College scored early and were never headed to tie for second place by beating O.S.D. at home by an 11 to 7 score.

Albert scored the initial points when Dobbin took a forward pass for a touchdown in the initial quarter. Teddy George booted a point for Coach Jim Rickaby's O.S.D. kids a few moments later and Albert made it 6 to 1 as Buster Donnan punted for a point in the only scoring seen in the second quarter.

Roy Cork knotted the count after he intercepted an attempted Albert College forward pass and ran it back for a touchdown in the third stanza, but the tie was quickly broken as Pringle crashed over the Deaf boys' line for a touchdown to have the count stand at 11 to 6 as the last stanza opened. Ted George booted another O.S.D. point for the only score in the last frame, giving Albert an 11 to 7 victory.

Game Statistics

Albert made eight first downs to the O.S.D. five. Albert College attempted six forward passes and completed three, while the O.S.D. went to the air on an even dozen occasions, but completed but four.

The line-ups: O.S.D.—Snap, Wedge; wnigs, Conlon and Wilson; quarter, Cork; halves, Calder and George; subs, Thibault, Styles, Hood and Owen. Albert College—Snap, Pringle; wings, Ardiel and Dobbin; quarter, Anderson; halves, Donnan and Bailey; subs, Christian, Kennedy, Wright and Chatson.

TO COACH EAGLES

Armand Mondou, veteran of a dozen seasons with Montreal Canadiens, has been signed as coach of the New Haven Eagles. Mondou will act as playing-coach, likely retiring as a player at the end of the season.

Six Amateurs Bind Selves to Boston Bruins

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 25—(AP)—Six promising amateurs bound themselves to the Boston Bruins for 1941 tryouts today when Manager Art Ross made the first cut in his National Hockey League squad.

Among those signing agreements to return here next year were the Regina Kid line of Alf Kunkel, Frank Mario and Grant Warwick, Johnny Webster, a centre from Toronto, and Defencemen Chuck Millman of Calgary, and Clare Martin, of Kitchener.

The Bruins were scheduled to play their third exhibition game with the Hershey Bears, their American Hockey League farm-hands, here tomorrow night.

Ross said that Bill Stewart of Boston will referee the game if he straightens out his officiating differences with League President Frank Calder in time. Stewart, a National League baseball umpire, has an appointment to discuss his salary affairs with Calder today in Montreal.

There are one or two outstanding American football players now stationed at the R.C.A.F. Manning depot Toronto, one of whom Coach Lew Hayman, of the Toronto Argonauts is seeking to bolster his floundering Big Four squad. The player in question is George Dailey, formerly with the University of Alabama "Crimson Tide" raiders of the south. The Alabama "Crimson Tide" is always in the top rank of U.S. football ranks and recently Dailey played with the Alabama squad in the annual Rose Bowl game. The acquisition of Dailey and other Americans now training with the R.C.A.F. near Toronto might help to bolster the Argos sufficiently to give the Ottawa Rough Riders at least some competition this year.

The steady influx of Americans into the R.C.A.F. would almost lead one to believe there may be several outstanding American gridiron stars now training at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base. We do know, however, the "Flyers" are anxious to arrange an exhibition football game versus the Belleville Collegiate senior Interscholastic squad and providing the "Airmen" did not take the exhibition too strenuously the idea might prove not only beneficial to the "collegians," but interesting to the local football patrons, especially if the Air Force squad trotted out several American College gridders. Ordinarily we are not in accord with mid-season exhibition games by a team possessing the potentialities Coach Baker's local "collegians" enjoy today. Too many injuries usually follow such exhibition tilts, but no doubt if the Flyers are anxious to engage in a friendly rugby football exhibition the Collegiate squad would welcome the opportunity to scrimmage versus the Airmen later in the season.

We do hear that Coach Morley Baker's line has been training religiously for their first meeting with Albert College today, but we also hear the same cannot be said of the Collegians' backfield, as a couple of Coach Baker's backfielders have been habitual absentees from practice this week. With the possibility of getting into the senior C.O.S.S.A. finals practically within their grasp, there shouldn't be a case of truant at a single football practice from now until the old bunting is nailed to the flagstaff. We do believe the Collegians have the best squad today old B.C.I. has boasted since the days of Jimmie Follwell, Wally Hilton, "Tarzan" Rigby, George Ostrom and the others, who brought the last C.O.S.S.A. grid pennant to Belleville. Such opportunities come seldom and it is good practice to make the best of them when the opportunity presents itself. However, the Collegians aren't going to have the push-over they expect in Des Partridge's Albert College squad today.

Do you remember when Tony Conzoneri decided to "stop kidding himself" a year ago today. The former holder of feather, light and junior welterweight titles, decided that one fight—with Brooklyn's Al Davis—would decide his ring future. If he lost, he'd retire, if he won, he'd continue in the profession he had adorned nearly 20 years. He lost.

Both wrestling and fight fans will have their inning over the week end. The Max Baer-Pat Comiskey fight pictures are being shown this week end at the Capitol theatre and despite the fact it only took "Slappsie Maxie" only a few moments to dispose of Comiskey, additional shots of their training camps make the picture interesting for the leather-pushing fans. As for the grappling business, the grunt and groan boys will hold forth at the Hume arena again on Monday with what appears to be a fairly good card, that opens with Jimmie Allen battling Pedro Valdez. Now Allen gave the Mexican a sound and physical trouncing in their last meeting, which left Valdez smarting with chagrin and ever since seeking revenge. There'll be no punches drawn here. In the main scrap on the card Al Dunlop meets the Masked Marvel and as neither have been defeated locally this season keen rivalry will mark this bout, as the loser will be elimated from further local appearances.

It appears as though Cliff Yerex's junior B.C.I. six-man football aggregation has a little too much oomph for their rivals in the city interscholastic abbreviated rugby loop. Last week the "collegians" trounced O.S.D. 68 to 0 and yesterday they kept in their winning ways to win 35 to 15 over Jack Doran's St. Mikes squad. The B.C.I. team proved too fast and tricky for the Irish, although only three players entered into the scoring column. Doug Mott and Graydon Rogers scored three touchdowns each for the Collegians, while Vernon Goyer scored all of the Irishmen's counters. Actually Goyer was worked into a new state of exhaustion. In the other game scheduled Albert College beat Jim Rickaby's youthful O.S.D. sextette 11 to 7 in a more closely contested match, despite the fact more fumbles were seen in a slower game.

SPORT SHOTS—Nick Knott, Kingston's gift to hockey, may sign with the Leafs before nightfall...... Knott played junior in Kingston and Oshawa, but may be sent to Pittsburg for seasoning...... Local lovers of the "sport of kings" will regret to hear of the death of Douglas David Eppes, well-known Toronto race horse authority and writer, whose selections were always observed closely in Belleville ......Art Ross says he'll stand pat and use the same 15 players who did so nobly for the Bruins last year...... That's like gambling with aces back to back,... Jimmie Follwell is to be a sure starter in the Ottawa at Argo game on Saturday...... Referee Bill Stewart and President Calder met to reopen a discussion on terms, after Stewart rejected the N.H.L. offeer recently, but it's still no dice...... The University of Chicago school paper is trying to compare the conventional grid game with this new-fangled six-man style...... It just can't be done, that is if they play 6-man football as we see it locally.

CHAPTER XXV.

Audrey Swan opened the door leading into Judge Castle's outer office, and seeing no one was about to leave when a gruff voice called from the private room. "Who is it?" It was the Judge himself.

Audrey walked to his door. "Good afternoon. Judge Castle. I was looking for Mr. Quinn."

"Why, bless my soul! Come in, Audrey, come in. I haven't seen you for a long time." He brought a chair to the side of the desk with a courtly gesture. "Sit down, my dear and let me look at you."

"Mother asked me to stop in with some papers that Mr. Quinn wished to see. He has been very kind about looking after things for her."

"Of course. He should be." Judge Castle's face grew suddenly grave. "My dear, this is the first opportunity I have had to express my sympathy to you and your mother and I do most sincerely. I was out of town at the time of your bereavement. Your father was very much of a gentleman and a good citizen, the sort of man our town can ill afford to lose."

Audrey made no reply. But she was thinking to herself that the words she had just heard would have been more welcome had the speaker ever evidenced any sign of friendship for her father while he was alive.

"I hope that you and your good mother will continue to be our neighbors," he suggested in his courteous fashion.

"We will keep the home for the present, at least," she told him. Evidently Vic had said nothing to his employer about the new plans, and she was grateful.

"We did not have a very happy holiday season, ourselves. Mrs. Castle had not been feeling very well and I took her south to see if the change would benefit her. She is still at White Sulphur and I am keeping bachelor's hall. I find it rather lonely." There was a bleak tone to the words.

"I expect you do," she said sympathetically.

"We had planned things very differently," he mused, staring absently past his visitor. "But so had you, of course. Life brings bitter trials to all of us. Do you mind if I speak of your father, my dear?"

"Of course not," she replied in some surprise.

"Since you have been sitting here, a thought has come to me. I know that you are mature enough to comprehend my meaning when I tell you that I was wondering if your father was not a far more successful man than I. In fact, Audrey, I am wondering if I have not been somewhat of a failure."

"I can't understand why you should think that." Audrey leaned forward, everything forgotten but the strange statement she had just heard.

"Do you know anything of Miss Annie Dodds' life?"

"Why, no, sir. Very little, that is."

"For years I didn't, either. She is old now and does not expect to live a great while. I know that you will respect my confidence when I tell you this. It is a case in point. She has devoted a life of hard work to educating two nephews. Both young men have done her great credit and she is perfectly happy to pass on. But I started to speak of your father. He had one child, the same as I. I have watched you grow up, my dear, and I am confident that your father would tell me that you never had caused him an hour's grief. There are two cases of success."

"I hope that's true," Audrey said softly. "About my father."

"I had one child, too," the Judge remarked grimly. "I said that before, but you can draw your own conclusions."

"Aren't you just a little hard on Jeffrey?" Audrey asked, astonished at her temerity. "After all, he married the woman he loved. I will never believe that he willingly gave up his prospects here with you."

"Nevertheless," said the Judge stubbornly, "his place is here. I have been reminded of it daily by seeing young Quinn in the place that should be Jeffrey's. Not that I grudge him his opportunity. Not only am I exceedingly fond of him, but I have found him invaluable. He is a very remarkable young man, Audrey."

"He is nice."

For the first time, the Judge's face relaxed. His eyes twinkled under their shaggy brows. "Is that the best you can say of him? You should be nice also . . . to him. And you should find it easy. By the way, did you notice the door as you came in?"

"The door?"

"Yes. The outer one. There's a rather new sign on it. It says, CASTLE AND QUINN, ATTORNEYS AT LAW."

"Oh! Isn't that splendid!"

"He's earned it. I need someone here who can take complete responsibility of the local practice, and it did not take Quinn long to show me that he could do that to my satisfaction." The Judge chuckled.

"I am very glad for him," Audrey remarked quietly, getting to her feet. "I wonder if I may leave the papers here. I must be running on."

"Certainly, my dear. I expected him back before this. But we might not have had our visit otherwise. I hope I have not been too garrulous . . . I'm growing old, too." He extended his hand and held hers for a moment when she gave it to him. "To prove that last, I might say, Audrey, that I wish very much I might have had a daughter like you. If I can ever be of any service to you or your mother, you have only to let me know. Please convey my respects to her."

"I will. Thank you very much," And Audrey made her escape in some confusion.

As the memory of the interview lingered with Audrey, there came a sudden desire to see Miss Annie. It had been quite a little while since she had called at the cottage and she would drop in for a few moments on her way home. When she entered the small living room, after a thin-voiced "Come in" answered her rap on the door, she found Miss Dodds in a low rocking chair drawn close to an open fire.

"Audrey I'm so glad! Sit down and warm yourself."

"But I'm not cold, Miss Annie," the girl laughed. "It's nice and cozy here."

"There's nothing like a clean wood fire, I've always thought. And it's so much more companionable than an ugly stove." Miss Annie was still holding Audrey's hand as she spoke. "I'm sorry, child. Not that words mean much."

"Oh, but they do!" Audrey gave the frail fingers a slight squeeze. "Mother appreciated your little note very much. And so did I."

"I'm glad. I didn't know your father very well, my dear, but I know that he was a good man. And a father is . . . a father. Now tell me about yourself."

"There isn't much to tell, Miss Annie. Mother and I are living very quietly. And how are you feeling?"

"Why, I'm really better." She rapped on the arm of her chair with a quiet smile. "Confidentially, Audrey, my rest seems to be doing me good. In fact, Doctor Bardsley accuses me of trying to ruin his reputation a bit. I think he quite gave me up as a bad job and it must have roused my spunk. At all events, I'm having a really marvellous time here by myself."

"What do you do?" was the amused question.

"Read. Thank Heaven my eyes are good. It's the first time in my life I've been able really to keep up with things. And, if you ask me, it's quite a job these days. If I do have to leave this world, I'll be in a position to tell the next one pretty much the condition here. I like to think I'm still making myself useful."

"That's an idea," Audrey laughed. "But I hope it is a very long time before you take over your new job."

"You never can tell, my dear. But, speaking of jobs, have you heard about Mr. Quinn?"

"You mean his partnership with Judge Castle?"

"Then you know about it? I hadn't seen any mention of it in the paper yet."

"I just found it out," Audrey smiled. "I had an errand at the office and was chatting with the Judge. He called my attention to the sign on the door and said it was new. It's quite an honor for Mr. Quinn, don't you think?"

"No more than he deserves," Miss Annie stated positively. "He is a brilliant young man who is going to make his mark in the world, Audrey. You'll see. I wish you could get to know him as I have."

"But I do know him quite well, Miss Annie. He has been very kind about looking after mother's affairs and it has brought him to the house very frequently."

"He never mentioned that. He doesn't talk a great deal, anyway. And maybe I shouldn't talk so much. But let me tell you something, my dear. There is only one girl in this town that is half good enough for Victor. And that's you."

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy, toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in London, Canada. Sold by all grocers, in two convenient sizes.

CANADA'S INDUSTRIES in Action AT BRITAIN'S SIDE

THE RIGHTS OF MAN
BUY CANADIAN POWER FOR FREEDOM

CANADIAN Industry is the anvil on which Canadians are forging mighty weapons and mechanized armaments for their fighting forces now defending our homeland and England. In times of great danger Canada finds herself blessed with organization, skilled man power and technical equipment needed to fight this war against barbarism.

But Canadian industry was not built by Canadians for war. Canada developed her heavy industries to build railways, machines, bridges, ships. Textile industries for clothes and fabrics. Automotive Industries to supply the increasing domestic and foreign demand for motor cars, trucks and tractors.

Now, war has locked these industries together to form a huge armament assembly line. From this line is now flowing an endless supply of armoured cars, gun carriages and other motorized war equipment, as well as planes, guns, munitions, ships, engines and all the sinews of war needed by Britain and our fighting forces in the terrific battles ahead.

Our first job is to win this war. When we've done that, as with God's help we will do, then we can begin building a new Canada. And then, once more Canada's Automotive Industries, along with their sister industries, war-toughened and efficient, will proudly take their place in the New Peace and stand prepared and ready to carry on the dynamic progress of a greater and happier Dominion.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRIES OF CANADA

1006 Lumsden Building Toronto, Ontario

KEEPING CANADIAN PLANTS WORKING

We do not feel that we should go into a deep discussion of economics or attempt to harmonize the various schools of thought that deal with the problem of how best to serve our country—whether to spend or save. But this we believe we can say—money spent for necessities produced in Canada is of help to our government.

Take the purchase of an automobile. In the first place it is obvious that a Canadian-Built car should be chosen and for two reasons: the American-Built car, with the tariff and the present rate of exchange, does not give the Canadian purchaser quite the value afforded by a Canadian-Built car—and, still more important; such purchase money would go out of Canada and not help Canadian workmen and women. This is true of any goods not made in the British Empire.

Now the automobile manufacturer deals with fifteen other vital industries, so by buying a Canadian-Built car, the purchaser is helping to pay wages to many Canadian workers and to purchase Canadian raw materials.

These wages, in turn, furnish the means whereby many thousands of our men and women are able to subscribe to War Loans, Savings Certificates and pay war taxes. And in the movement of this money from buyer to seller, various taxes are imposed that go into the coffers of our government, affording additional revenue. No matter which spoke you start with, it always leads to the hub.

This group of automobile manufacturers distributes over one hundred million dollars every year in wages and salaries and in the purchase of Canadian raw materials.

Speeding Motorists May Expect Driving Permit Suspension

Magistrate Butler Says Warnings and Pleadings Have Failed to Bring Reduction in Speeding on City Streets

COMPLAINTS POUR IN

Crown Attorney Robertson Refers to Riding of Bicycles in Violation of Traffic Rules

Without reservation motorists convicted of speeding their motor vehicles on the streets of Belleville will be subjected to the cancellation of their driving privileges for one month, warned Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., following a meeting of the Belleville Police Commission today.

"Previous warnings and pleadings to the motoring public have failed to bring about a decrease in motor car racing on our streets. Stiff fines were tried and apparently that type of punishment is not severe enough for the present generation to realize that speeding on our city's streets must be curbed. I intend to cancel license of every driver who is convicted of fast or wanton driving in this city. Perhaps this system will prove more prolific and bring about more safe and sane driving on our streets," His Worship, Magistrate Butler stated to The Ontario-Intelligencer in his private office prior to the opening of police court today.

Complaints Received

"If the suspension of individual driving privileges do not minimize the alarmingly increase of speeding on our streets, we'll have to resort to more rigid and drastic measures. Through my office it is a daily occurrence to receive several complaints regarding the prevalence of speeders in Belleville and the sad part of the picture, is that such drivers do not even observe our restricted school zones, where caution signs are clearly placed," added His Worship.

Commenting upon the matter Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson asserted it was appalling the number of complaints regarding speedsters which reached his office also. "I am perfectly in accord with His Worship in this matter and might add that the same disposition will be made when boys riding bicycles are apprehended in violation of the traffic regulations. These youthful cyclists wander all over the streets and are a distinct menace to traffic," stated Crown Attorney Robertson as he intimated that bicycle licenses would be cancelled in a similar manner also.

Month's Trial

"The newly proposed punishment of the cancellation of driving privileges will be tried out for one month in our local courts, simply as the result of the driving public failing to adhere to previous warnings. I might add that if necessary the police department will be asked to employ plainclothes constables to apprehend these speedsters who are a menace to traffic and pedestrians alike," warned Magistrate Butler as he stated that double parking on Front St. and the downtown area would be more severely dealt with in the future in Belleville's latest drive to provide safer and saner driving conditions on city streets.

GERMAN TORPEDO BOAT, ITALIAN SUPPLY SHIP SUNK

British Destroyer, Venetia, Reported Lost, Victim of German Mine

British Sub 'Swordfish' Gets Nazi Boat While 'Regent' Sinks Italian Craft

London, Oct. 25 (CP)—The Admiralty announced tonight the loss of a British destroyer, victim of a German mine, and the sinking of a German torpedo boat and an Italian supply ship by British submarines.

The submarine Swordfish was credited with sending the Nazi torpedo boat to the bottom while the sinking of the Italian supply ship of 6,000 tons was credited to the Regent.

These victories were cited as "examples of the continuous pressure which British naval forces maintain on coastal communications in enemy waters."

The lost British destroyer was identified as the Venetia, 1,090 tons, completed in 1917 and carrying a normal complement of 134 men.

Stubborn Refusal To Sing Anthem Brings Punishment

Kitchener, Ont., Oct. 25 (CP)—Three unpatriotic school children are in solitary internment in one of Kitchener's public schools in an effort to break their stubborn refusal to sing "God Save the King".

According to Principal W. G. Hunter of Margaret Avenue School, the children have had one day of confinement, each in a separate room with instructions to write, "I must sing God Save the King."

The children did not write and again today they are languishing, each in his solitary confinement.

One 12-year-old son of an admitted Jehovah's Witness had reversed his decision regarding singing and is now taking part in the patriotic exercises and regular class work of his mates in Victoria School.

There was no discussion on the matter at the meeting of the Kitchener Public School Board last night.

Following the meeting Chairman Fred Schneider said that the board's ruling remains as it has been. If the children refuse to take part in patriotic exercises they will be excluded from class.

Kirkland Lake, Ont., Oct. 25 (CP).—Three children, whose parents are members of the Jehovah Witnesses, an illegal religious sect, have been suspended from school in Kirkland Lake, it was learned today. The School Board has decided that they must remain suspended until they agree to participate in patriotic exercises.

Vichy, France, Oct. 25 (AP)—Maynard Barnes, American Charge D'Affaires in Paris, was reported today to have been arrested Oct. 21 while seeing friends off at Austerlitz station and held for two hours, allegedly for talking English.

German soldiers said to have made the arrest were reported here to have been dissatisfied with his credentials and held him until Embassy officials could intervene.

15,000 OUT ON STRIKE

St. Louis, Oct. 25—(AP)—Fifteen thousand building trades workmen of the American Federation of Labor went out on general strike today in a mass drive to obtain 100 per cent unionization of the construction industry in St. Louis and St. Louis County.

The strike was voted yesterday by business agents of 26 unions as an aftermath of a fight Wednesday between A. F.L. pickets, one of whom was killed, and non-union workmen employed in the erection of bungalows at a county subdivision.

YOUNG AIR HERO BACK TO THE WARS

SMALL BUT DEADLY ARE U.S. TORPEDO BOATS

PHEASANT SHOOT OPENS IN ONTARIO

Weather is Fine and in Lincoln County Over 1,000 Hunters Take Part —Birds Plentiful

(By The Canadian Press)

The roar of shotguns echoed over the Ontario countryside today as hundreds of hunters opened a two-day pheasant shoot.

Generally the weather was fine, but in some townships near Toronto and in Wentworth county, overcast skies threatening rain cut down the turnout.

Ideal weather prevailed in Lincoln country where it was estimated that more than 1,000 hunters would participate in the shoot. The bag is limited to three pheasant cockbirds to each person and the birds must be brought down before five o'clock in the afternoon.

A number of birds were reported taken early in Barton and Ancaster townships in Wentworth county, but several townships in the county reported the sale of licences as negligible.

Many farms in Vaughn, King and Markham townships had "no hunting, no shooting" signs posted on them. There were 20 townships in the counties of York, Peel, Halton and Ontario in which the shoot was legal.

Reds Speed Up Army Commands To Cut Confusion

Moscow, Oct. 25 (AP)—Red army and navy officers must drop "Please" and "Comrade" in their orders, and give quick, clear commands.

These are the latest additions to the Soviet military reform.

It began with the creation of general, admiral and other officers' ranks, adoption of dazzling decorations for them, abolition of political commissars, institution of the tical commissars, institution of the pline" and intensification of training.

"Red Fleet," organ of the Soviet Navy, has found this not enough, and points out that during recent manoeuvres officers were giving long-winded, ambiguous orders.

It took one lieutenant 10 minutes to order his troops to fire, the newspaper said. Meanwhile, the "enemy" was firing.

In another case, Red Fleet reported, the "enemy" approached on two sides, the defending officer ordered his men to fire, but didn't say in what direction, and in the confusion, the "enemy" gained the position.

Gifts of Tobacco To Troops Overseas Given Free Entry

Ottawa, Oct. 25 (CP)—Revenue Minister Gibson announced in a statement today that arrangements have been made with British authorities to permit free entry into the United Kingdom of gifts of tobacco and cigarettes to Canadians serving with the United Kingdom forces.

Previously such gifts were allowed free entry only when sent to Canadians on Active Service with the Canadian forces.

The Minister's announcement said the senior officer of the Canadian auxiliary services has established a 'centralized scheme" which has been approved by British customs authorities under which such gifts may be sent to Canadians serving with the British forces.

All parcels should be addressed with Regimental Number, Rank, Name and Unit of the individual and forwarded care of the Canadian Auxiliary Services, 6 Dilke St. Chelsea, London, S. W. 3.

FRENCH PAINTER KILLED

Vichy, France, Oct. 25 (AP) — Fernand Sabatte, 66, French painter and head professor of the National Beaux Arts School, was killed last night in an automobile collision at Meaux, near Paris, dispatches received here said today.

PROUD MOMENT FOR PRIME MINISTER

The hearts of Prime Minister Churchill and Mrs. Churchill, must have been beating high when this picture was snapped in London recently. The Churchills are seen with their son, Lieut. Randolph Churchill, when they left No. 10 Downing Street for the House of Parliament where Randolph took his seat as an M.P., from Preston. For the first time, the Prime Minister acted as his son's sponsor.

LUCKY OMEN?

It was a strange bit of coincidence that brought them together from opposite sides of the Atlantic ocean, but the American destroyer W. C. Wood was turned over to none other than Commander D. E. Wood of the Royal Navy. Commander Wood is shown as he stands beside the bell of his ship shortly after he had taken it over at an east coast port.

Roosevelt Says He Will Serve Entire 4 Years If Elected Nov. 5

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP) — President Roosevelt told a press conference today that he intended to serve out the whole four years if he is elected to a third term in the Nov. 5 election.

The President made the statement in reply to a reporter's question concerning his speech in Philadelphia Wednesday night in which the President said his objective in the next four years would be to make work for every young man and woman "a living fact."

The President was asked whether he considered the French Vichy government still a friendly power in the light of recent conversations between Premier Petain and Hitler.

The President replied certainly. He added that the United States still had diplomatic relations with the Vichy government

Boys After Taste of Army Life in Camp Take First Opportunity to Sign Up

North Bay, Ont., Oct. 25 (CP)—A taste of army life at No. 22 military training centre here led 12 northern Ontario youths to join the Canadian Active Service Force today. A score of others also offered their services at the same time.

"I don't think any of us had considered enlisting for Active Service before we went to camp," said N. C. Fulmer, North Bay, spokesman for the new recruits, "but the two weeks we have been at camp opened our eyes to what army life really is. So we signed up at the first opportunity."

The opportunity came when the Canadian Foresthy Corps began recruiting 60 men in the district. The men undergoing compulsory training at camp were informed at parade of the openings. Approximately 30 volunteered at once and 12 were accepted.

Says Action is Typical

Ottawa, Oct. 25 (CP)—Action of 12 northern Ontario lads who joined the Canadian Active Service Force after getting a taste of army life at No. 22 military training centre at North Bay, Ont., is typical of reaction to compulsory training all over the country, Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche, Associate Deputy Minister of National War Services, said today.

"I cannot supply figures because they are not yet available but all across the country boys who have gone to training centres are showing a desire to enlist in the C.A.S.F." said Gen. LaFleche.

Recently several lads from the training centre at Cornwall, Ont., joined the C.A.S.F. because they found military life to their liking. When compulsory military training was first announced the feeling was expressed by high defence department officers that many young men, introduced to army life through their training period, would find it so desirable they would enlist for active service.

HEARING OPENS ON MURDER COUNT

John Buck, Indian, Charged With Slaying of Six Nations' Comrade

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 25.—(CP)—Preliminary hearing on a murder charge against John Leonard Buck, 27-year-old Indian from the Six Nations Reserve, opened here today before Magistrate R. J. Gillen.

Buck is accused of slaying another Six Nations' Indian, Fred House, 32, on the Reserve on the night of Sept. 29. House's body was found in a lane leading to his father's residence from the main road on the reserve. A trail of blood wandered back 150 yards from the body nearly to the main road. An old sedan was also found in the lane, one front fender being bloodstained.

In court today Dr. W. L. Robinson, Univerity of Toronto, pathologist, reported on the autopsy he performed. Death, he said, was caused by a skull fracture, apparently the result of a heavy blow with some instrument. The face and other parts of the body were bruised. Death probably resulted an hour after the blow, he estimated.

Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of the Attorney-General's department, testified that tests of House's blood indicated some alcoholic content but not sufficient to say the man had been under the influence of liquor at the time of his death.

CZECH GENERALS HELD IN RUMANIA

Alleged They Took Part in Sabotage and Espionage Plot

Bucharest, Oct. 25.—(AP) — Government agents arrested two refugee Czech generals today for allegedly taking part in what government sources described as a Polish sabotage and espionage plot.

Both were charged with implication in the operation of three secret radio stations said to have been broadcasting "foreign propaganda" from Bucharest.

Identity of Girl Now Established

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—A young woman whose identity has been a 10-day mystery at Bellevue Hospital while she lay in a drug-induced stuper changed her name today and said she was Winifred Rutz, 29, of Chicago.

Previously, rousing briefly from her sleep, she described herself as Marian Nevins of Chicago, and said she had tried to end her life because she considered herself a social failure.

Hospital authorities said Mrs. Elizabeth Rutz, of Chicago, described by the girl as an aunt, had confirmed as correct the last name given by the patient.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The war in the air was intensified today while the world waited to find out what developed at yesterday's meeting between the aged Premier Petain of the French Vichy regime and Adolf Hitler.

London suffered considerable damage and numerous casualties as bright weather facilitated Nazi hit-and-run bombing. More than a score of persons were killed when a stick of bombs fell across parallel street car tracks, one dropping between two cars and wrecking both.

Heavy Raids Over Germany.

London did not suffer alone, however, for the Air Ministry announced the second night raid in succession over Berlin and the Germans themselves acknowledged a number of casualties and fires had been caused by the Royal Air Force. British planes struck also at the usual large number of military targets in western and northern Germany and objectives in German-occupied territory.

Marshal Petain, wearing the horizon blue of his obsolete first great war uniform, was reported enroute home to Vichy to report to his cabinet what he got from Hitler and what France must give.

It was rumored in many continental circles that Petain agreed under extreme pressure to limited collaboration with Germany in establishment of Hitler's "new order in Europe", and possibly to permit German naval and air bases access to bases in unoccupied France and French colonial possessions.

Hitler, apparently, was seeking to impress the French with a willingness to negotiate for what he probably could take from wounded France with little or no force. The Berlin Chancellory, meanwhile, poured out stories of the "new order" and asserted that the meeting between Hitler and Petain was "new evidence that we are trying to put Europe back on her legs under Axis leadership."

Theorizing on Hitler's Motive

There was little sign of any Axis leadership other than Hitler's, however, and the theory was advanced that the Nazi leader might be rushing his diplomatic moves to consolidate his position on the continent in the belief that his fight with Britain would result in a stalemate.

Persons advancing this theory believed Hitler would hasten to establish control over as much of Europe as possible and gain as many concessions as possible in the hope of hanging onto them when the war ends. Their belief was strengthened by the announcement that a Russo-Axis Danubian conference will be held Monday at Bucharest. Participants will be Russia, Germany, Italy and Rumania.

German authorities, perhaps characteristically delaying in order to excite curiosity and give maximum publicity value to whatever they have to say, expressed doubt if any announcement would be made before Monday concerning the Petain-Hitler conversations.

Protection of Colonial Possessions

Washington reported the United States ready to protect French Colonial possessions in the Caribbean Sea and the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, south of Newfoundland, if it appears necessary under terms of the Havana Act for defence of the western hemisphere. Americans also viewed with distaste the possibility the Axis might gain bases along the South Atlantic African coast from which they could, perhaps, menace South America.

Former Victim of Rumanian King Turns Tables on the Ex-Monarch

Under virtual arrest in Spain, subject to possible return to Nazi-controlled Rumania, are former King Carol and Magda Lupescu, his companion of many years. Should they be returned, they would face as second in power in the country Horia Sima, who escaped Carol's executions of Iron Guardists in 1938 and 1939. Here follows a personality sketch of Sima, heir-apparent to Premier Antonescu.

(By Daniel De Luce)

Bucharest, Oct. 25.—(AP)— In his green shirt and Sam Browne belt, a great shock of black hair carelessly brushed back from his high forehead, Horia Sima looks more like a poet than the leader of Rumania's once outlawed Iron Guard.

Sima today is Vice-Premier of Rumania because he is the elected captain of the Iron Guard. He is captain because he was lucky enough to survive when at least 2,500 elite guardists were meeting execution.

In his feud with the Iron Guard, King Carol had most of the identified leaders arrested and slain during 1938 and 1939. Only those who escaped across the border were sure of their lives; Sima, a 36-year-old university professor, went to Germany.

By the time Sima returned secretly to Rumania this year, guardists who might have had stronger claims to the captaincy were dead and buried.

Now the Iron Guard is no longer the official enemy of the State, but the State itself, so proclaimed by Gen. Ion Antonescu, who engineered Carol's abdication. Antonescu continues to head the formal Government; but if he has an heir apparent it is Sima. Carol is in Spain in exile.

Was Minority Party

At best the Iron Guard in its career outside the law, is authoritatively estimated to have had less than 50,000 active members. Many others were sympathizers, but prudence dictated their remaining anonymous. The most votes an Iron Guard party ever polled in a national election came to 478,378—or 15 per cent of the total—in 1937.

This minority movement has become the all-encompassing political machine of the new state. Horia Sima, with fiery eloquence, must try to convert the Rumanian masses. His only experience in public office before he became vice-premier was a brief period last July as Minister of Cults and Arts.

Sima frequently eulogizes Codreanu, founder and "martyr" of the guard. Two years ago, Codreanu and thirteen lieutenants were garrotted by gendarmes; the bodies were later riddled with bullets and a statement was issued that the men were shot while trying to escape.

Hates Jews and Communists

"Rumania for the Rumanians, only the Rumanians, and all the Rumanians", was Codreanu's favorite slogan. Sima claims this will be partly fulfilled by exclusion of Jews from many economic pursuits and the ousting of British interests from the oil fields. The guard cordially co-operates, however, in the expansion of German investments here.

"Clean Government" was another Codreanu doctrine. Sima promise to effect a big-scale clean-up of corruption in national and local adminitsration.

A third tenet of Codreanu's, "Bolshevism is the enemy of Rumania", is soft-pedalled since Germany is preserving polite relations with Moscow.

Apparently shy, Sima does not go in for personal glorifications. Aside from his name on Government statements and his occasional appearance in a parade, he is little known to the public. A foreign journalist, failing to get an interview, asked the foreign office to obtain for him Sima's picture.

"Tell him", said Sima, "that my picture is the only one you haven't

CRAWFORD'S FATE HANDED TO JURY

Judge Tells Jurymen Sympathies Must Not Distract Them From Duty

Stratford, Ont., Oct. 25—(CP)—"You are entitled to your sympathies but you must not let those sympathies interfere with or distract you from your duties" Mr. Justice J. C. Makins told a Supreme Court jury today as the members were about to retire to decide the fate of James Crawford. The 41-year-old Prospect Hill general merchant, is charged with the slaying last Feb. 29, of Amber Carter, 39, Blanshard Township cattle buyer and farmer.

Mr. Justice Makins told the jury the defence had brought out the question of grounds for provocation and said if the jurors considered there was sufficient provocation for the crime then they could reduce the charge to manslaughter.

The defence of Crawford which lasted from Wednesday morning until Thursday afternoon, stressed the fact that there was an affair between Carter and the accused's wife. Mr. Justice Makins said the law looked upon provocation as such only if the crime were committed in the heat of passion. Evidence was that Crawford was aware of the relations between his wife and Carter for some time and Mr. Justice Makins said the series of incidents might be construed by the jury as provocation.

Crawford swore on the witness stand yesterday that he never had any intention of shooting Carter and no recollection of the events of the night of Feb. 29. He testified that the first recollection he had of the occasion was stumbling along the road home and of finding a gun in his hands.

MUSSOLINI

(Government circles in Berlin were non-commital concerning the purpose of the Hitler-Petain meeting, but informed quarters in neutral Switzerland expressed strong belief that France had agreed to limited co-operation with Germany in the war against Britain in return for easing of the Nazi yoke.) So fast have events moved already that observers here believed an announcement of France's new place in the European order being planned by the axis powers would be forthcoming quickly.

Informed sources, however, said that while Petain had authority to make an agreement with Hitler it was likely he would explain the situation to his cabinet before making a definite commitment.

Excitement at Vichy

Vichy was almost breathless with excitement over the rapid-fire trend of events and speculation was increased by imposition of new and more stringent censorship in connection with the current negotiations.

The negotiations which culminated in the first interview between the Nazi leader and the Vichy premier began only five days ago when Laval left Vichy for Paris apparently to discuss with German officials the possible return of the French Government to Paris.

Two days later the French Government broke its silence on Laval's visit to announce his meeting with Hitler.

On his return to Vichy, Laval on Wednesday conferred for several hours with Petain and later attended a meeting of leading cabinet ministers. He left them several times to confer again with the marshal. Fog halted his scheduled return that night to Paris so he started out early yesterday morning—but with him went France's highest official, Petain.

Part of Series of Meetings

Rome, Oct. 25—(AP)—Further meetings between officials of the axis powers and other countries were forecast today in the Italian press without identification of the persons expected to be involved.

Il Popolo Di Roma said Hitler's conferences with Vice-Premier Laval and Marshal Petain of France and Franco of Spain were part of "a series of international meetings which, according to every indication is not yet completed."

Il Popolo said "According to all probabilities the chain of these meetings does not yet seem closed."

Talks of 'New Order'

(By Louis P. Lochner)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Authorised German sources said today the meeting between Hitler and Marshal Petain of France is "new evidence that we are trying to put Europe back on her legs under Axis leadership and independent of exterior influences which have been trying to stick their noses into affairs which don't concern them".

Asked to define these "ramfremde" influences (those not indigenous to the European living space), the same sources said: "For the present it is England".

Nazi Foreign Office Silent

The Foreign office was silent on details of the Hitler-Petain conference or even the subject discussed by the two chiefs of state.

Continuing their observations on general axis aims, present diplomacy and strategy, authorized sources said:

"Our fight is against whoever opposes European peace, harmony and co-operation. The nightmare of interference will be dispelled.

"The Axis powers are fully conscious of the responsibility they assume toward all European peoples. In the Europe of the future the question of who was a friend or enemy yesterday won't play any role. The sole determining factor will be the whole-heartedness wherewith every state in that new order co-operates.

"No humiliation of anybody within this order is intended".

These sources pointed to "the chivalrous treatment accorded the venerable and Honorable Field Marshal Petain" and contrasted it with the attitude of the Allied powers toward Von Hindenburg in 1918.

They also recalled that the German delegation at Versailles sat behind barbed wire.

STRING OF BOMBS

fighters were lost, the pilots of four of them landing safely.

The Nazi raiders stabbed twice at London in quick succession during the forenoon after a comparatively quiet night.

One of the street cars hit in the morning rush hour raid was crushed like a concertina and the others had windows and wood work blown out. Broken seats were flung into the roadway.

The driver of one car was killed. Casualties included some women.

The sunlit morning sky was blotched with anti-aircraft bursts as formations of the German aircraft sent the capital's defences into action.

The wail of the sirens sounding the all clear after the first raid at the rush hour had hardly died away when another alert shrieked through the city. The second all clear sounded not long after but ground guns still could be heard in the outskirts.

No General Alarm

A one-plane dive-bombing attack preceded the two alarms, coming so swiftly in a suburb that no general alarm was sounded.

The "Lone Wolf" was reported to have dropped six high explosive bombs, wrecking a portion of a commercial building. Five persons were reported injured.

Early risers going to work saw the plane plunge through the morning mists to a level of about 2,000 feet, unload its bombs and roar away. The attack damaged several houses.

While London was held under its rush-hour alert, other attackers were reported in the vicinity of a South Wales coast town apparently in continuation of the new Nazi strategy of spreading bombs over a wide area of Britain by small group or single plane actions.

Aerial assaults on London slackened considerably during the night but squadrons of Nazi bombers blasted at the industrial Midlands furiously.

Two public air raid shelters were hit in one town in that area, but the loss of life was reported to be small and a government communique said the number of persons killed and injured throughout the country was "exceedingly small".

Respite Between Two Brief

The capital had two raid alarms during the night, the 48th since the total air warfare began. The respite between the two was brief, but the second ended comparatively early—about 4.30 a.m.

In an unidentified midlands town, the same one in which the shelters were struck, a motion picture house and a theatre were hit and a fire bomb fell on a drug store. Other commercial and business properties also were reported damaged.

Although reports early in the night said the raiders were coming over in greater numbers than in the past several nights, the government said "There was comparatively little enemy activities over the country last night."

A number of persons were caught in debris in London and rescue squads labored to free them.

Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert, taking official note of gossip that British anti - aircraft guns were wearing out and that ammunition was running short, said last night these reports were untrue and that the system of barrage fire had been abandoned when the raiders began their dodging tactics.

Mists on Channel Lift

"If the enemy can be lulled into a sense of false security so that he will fly straight for a short time, a salvo from several guns has a good chance of bursting near him," Sir Philip said in a broadcast. "Hence the pauses in firing, —we are waiting the opportunity to get in a good burst. . . . I can assure you that the situation is quite normal."

At Dover the mists lifted today and the French coast could be seen across the channel. The sea was fairly calm with a cold northeast wind blowing. The more favorable weather brought German planes across the coast this morning in small formations which split up to attack London from different directions.

Watchers in one town reported British fighter planes tackled a group of returning raiders. One German plane appeared to be losing height as it bolted for the coast with a Hurricane on its tail.

Woman Saved by Newsman

In London, K. C. Boxall, Associated Press traffice chief of the London Bureau, reported he had to hurl a woman downstairs into an air raid shelter to save her and himself when he heard bombs falling while he was cycling to work.

"I heard the rush of bombs and dived for the shelter", he said. "The woman was blocking the entrance calling to her dog. I literally had to throw her down into the shelter. We just made it.

"The entrance to the shelter was splattered with broken glass and debris. A building beside the shelter was a shambles, with injured lying all over the street".

During one of the day raids a bomb fell near a London police station, wrecking a laundry van and damaging a water main.

The London Transport Board announced a new system to facilitate travel during raids. In the future buses and street cars will carry on during raids with road spotters at 123 vital points to keep watch and notify the drivers and passengers when to take cover.

Demolish London Shop

One stick of bombs in the day raiding demolished a London shop with flats above it. Rescuers recovered one body from the debris and continued digging.

Three other bombs fell near another building and sent showers of glass flying in the street. Several persons were believed killed.

An oil bomb fell in a working class district killing one person and injuring three.

Watchers saw a dogfight on the city's outskirts as British fighters struggled to keep the attackers from slipping through. One group of Spifires was seen to drive off a formation of 20 raiders.

Another battle was fought in the clouds over the Thames estuary and observers reported one German plane appeared to have fallen out of control.

Hoover Accuses New Deal of Creating 'Bank Panic in '33

Columbus, O., Oct. 25 —(AP)—Former president Herbert Hoover accused the New Deal last night of creating a "bank panic" in 1933.

He told a radio audience that "we were on the way to recovery" when Franklin D. Roosevelt succeeded him as president.

Then, he added, "Mr. Roosevelt violated a promise not to tinker with the currency and created a bank panic in the United States.'

Hoover criticized the president for "smearing" the preceding Republican administration in Wednesday night's speech.

"Mr. Roosevelt said the leaders were willing to let the people starve in 1932," he asserted. "Mr. Roosevelt denounces falsification. So do I."

Hoover declared that the president's address "seemed to indicate that I was his opponent and this still was the 1932 campaign."

"Well," he added, "he is mistaken. I should think it would be ill-advised to raise the memories of promises that won that campaign."

While not suggesting that Mr. Roosevelt aspires to be a dictator, Hoover said the president has built personal power to a "dangerous point" and "there are forces and men around him who are implacably pushing further and further in that direction."

Every dictator in Europe has risen as legislative bodies yielded powers in the name of emergency, Hoover asserted.

Meeting is Called To Settle Strike At Collingwood

Collingwood, Ont., Oct. 25 (CP)—Union leaders and officials of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company marked time today in a strike of 500 shipyard workers which has held up work on several government contracts. A conference between the strike leaders and company officials has been arranged for next Monday.

Confident Men Will Return

Ottawa, Oct. 25 (CP)—The Government has every hope that a strike at Collingwood, Ont., shipyards will be settled soon, it was said at the Department of Labor today.

Labor Minister McLarty was said to be confident that the men who walked out yesterday in a wage dispute will return to work and that a meeting between employers and employees called for Monday will bring a settlement.

Action of the men, it was said, while perfectly legal, was "prejudicing their case."

If the strike which involves stoppage of work on war supplies, is not settled, it was intimated, action might be taken by the Department of Munitions and Supply and the Department of Labor.

The Munitions Minister has wartime power to take over a plant where a strike is in progress if the strike means a tie-up in production of war supplies.

Claims Members 'Locked Out'

Montreal, Oct. 25—(CP)—Arthur Paquette, president of the recently-formed Independent Industrial Union of Shipyards Workers, said today 300 members were "locked out" of the Canadian Vickers Company shipyards when they reported for work this morning.

J. Edouard Labelle, president of the Vickers Company, said some of the Company's employees were not working today, but declined to comment further. He said the Dominion Department of Labor had been informed of the situation and he preferred to make no statement before he received some word from Ottawa.

ITALIAN UNIT PUT TO FLIGHT

Italians, However, Attempt to Minimize Effect of British Raids in East Africa

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 25 —(AP)— A British patrol inflicted casualties on an Italian unit and put it to flight in an engagement outside Kassala in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, British headquarters announced today.

It was the second success for the British forces in this region in as many days.

Rome, Oct. 25 —(CP)— The Italian High Command attempted today to minimize the effect of British raids on an Italian motorised column in East Africa. At the same time the Italians admitted British air raids an Asozo, Kassala and on three towns in Italian Somaliland.

"In East Africa clashes in our favor took place between motorized elements in the Kassala zone and at Setit," the Italian communique claimed.

(British commanders told of inflicting "very heavy casualties" in a surprise attack on the Italian column. No British cosualties were reported.)

The communique also admitted British airplanes had carried out raids on Tobruk and Bengazi. It claimed Italian advanced columns "put to flight enemy mechanized forces east of Sidi Barrani" in Egypt.

meeting, which would have an effect on specific American interests. For example:

1.—Any new disposition of the French fleet which, if turned over to Germany—a possibility mentioned in several reports from European capitals—might become an actual or potential menace to American security. The United States has been vitally interested in what was to become of France's navy and this question is understood to have been discussed with the Petain government and its representatives on a number of occasions.

Committee Formed

2. Any change in the status of France's colonies, especially the possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

A 14-nation committee was established yesterday which, under authority of the Havana Pan-American Conference, has emergency powers to assume control of any European possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

The United States, acting in cooperation with the other American republics, was reported authoritatively to have plans ready to assume protection of such French territory if French collaborations with the Axis made it advisable as a measure of Western Hemisphere defence.

The United States also is vitally interested in Dakar, French naval base in Africa which might be utilized by the Axis for submarine attacks in the south Atlantic sea lanes between Europe, Africa and South America.

Negotiations in Progress

3. Negotiations which the French Government is understood to have in progress for release of part of the $27,000,000 French gold hoard and other millions of French credits "frozen" by President Roosevelt's order.

4. Negotiations aimed at securing the friendly co-operation of the United States Government in obtaining Great Britain's permission for food to be sent through the British blockade to unoccupied France.

5. The United States Government's efforts to repossess the 100 or more American-made war planes now at Martinique, French island in the Caribbean, where they were taken by the French aircraft carrier Bearn at the time of France's collapse.

The United States seeks to repossess the planes for defence purposes but negotiations to date have been unsuccessful, the French Government insisting it can take no action without approval of the German-French Armistice Commission.

Rabe's getaway is the 17th escape of a German war prisoner or civilian internee since the war started but only three are at large at the moment—two who escaped from a prairie internment camp near Calgary yesterday and Rabe. Of the remainder, 12 were recaptured, one was shot to death in a mix-up with a guard in northwestern Ontario, as the prisoner was about to be recaptured, and the other is held by United States immigration officials at International Falls, Minn., pending negotiations for his return.

Desert Working Party

Calgary, Oct. 25 (CP)—Military Guards, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Forest Rangers, game wardens and volunteers today combed the area surrounding a prairie internment camp for two German prisoners who deserted a working party seven miles from the camp yesterday.

The escaped prisoners are Harold Herman Laage and Richard Engel, both 31. The area tracked by searchers is thick bush country but the leaves have fallen from trees and visibility is good. The searchers are aided by a R.C.M.P. dog.

Distinctive camp uniforms — blue-grey overall outfits with large red circles in the centre of the back of the tunics, red stripes on the front and red stripes down the sides of the trouser legs are worn by both escapees. The fugitives speak good English and both claim to be United States citizens. Military authorities believe they may try to reach the international border.

(Internment officials at Ottawa, however, expressed confidence that the men would be recaptured soon because "all routes of escape are cut off at once by setting up a widespread guard in the form of a circle.") crossed and recrossed the city for an hour and a quarter despite fiercely blazing German guns.

While both men are described as sailors, military authorities here beleive they are civilian internees. In Eastern Canada, Laage was known as a good yachtsman.

Gaps in the cloud bank later made it possible for the bombers to attack from a higher level, "somewhat easing" the menace of the gunfire, the news service said.

"Poor visibility" in all areas hampered detailed observation of the damage done, it added.

Oil Plants and Other Territory

The Ministry said oil plants, docks, shipping facilities, rail communications, goods yards, power stations and German airdromes were raided in other parts of Germany and German-occupied territory.

A communique announced docks and shipping, oil plants and a power station were hit at Hamburg, indicating that important port was a major objective in the night's raiding.

Oil plants at Hanover and Gelsenkirchen and docks and shipping at Cuxhaven, Bremerhaven, Wilhelmshaven, Rotterdam, Le Havre an Lorient were attacked, the communique disclosed, as well as railway communications and goods yards at Emmerich, Munster, Hamm, Bottrop and Duisburg.

One British plane, the ministry said, failed to return.

Air Ministry Communique

London, Oct. 25.—(CP) — The Air Ministry issued the following communique today:—

"Yesterday (Thursday) R.A.F. bombers carried out armed reconnaissance of the French, Belgian and Dutch coasts. The ports of Ostend and Gravelines, a factory and goods yards near Calais and a convoy off Zeebrugge were attacked.

"During the night aircraft of the bomber and coastal commands carried out widespread operations over Germany and enemy occupied territory. Objectives in the Berlin area were bombed.

"Oil plants at Hamburg, Hanover and Gelsenkirchen, docks and shipping at Hamburg, Cuxhaven, Bremerhaven, Wilhelmshaven, Rotterdam, Le Havre and Lorient, railway communications and goods yards at Eemmerich, Munster, Hamm, Bottrop and Duisburg, a power station at Hamburg, the channel ports of Flushing, Ostend and Dunkirk, and several enemy airdromes were attacked by strong forces of aircraft which operated throughout the hours of darkness.

"One of our aircraft has not reported to its base".

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

AT THE McCARTHY

"South of Pago Pago"

Life in the South Seas in the old swashbuckling days when a man's life was not worth a penny if it stood in the way of the white man's greed for pearls, is graphically portrayed in the film "South of Pago Pago" currently showing at the McCarthy theatre.

The story laid in the islands south of Singapore is tense with action and brings out the finest acting ability of Jon Hall, as the young native chief, Victor McLaglen, as the hard-boiled schooner skipper whose love for pearls dominates his human instincts. and Frances Farmer as the tough dance-hall girl who finds her real self in the romantic setting of a tropical island.

Photography at its best is one of the features of the picture with the undersea diving sequences in which real native divers are seen plumbing the ocean depths for the rare pearl oysters, being outstanding. There are some distinctly beautiful sea-shots while the South Sea island foliage in all its natural beauty is brought out in a fine picturization.

The story is one that will hold the sustained interest of the audience from start to finish. It brings out the white man's treachery and utter disregard for human life in their search for pearls. Jon Hall is exceptionally good in his portrayal of the young chief whose father is brutally murdered by the white men. The love and marriage ceremonies of the natives are vividly shown, while the ultimate vengeance of the native population of Manoa is a climax that is novelly different to the usual run of such films. "South of Pago Pago" is recommended to those who love sustained action, a delicate love thread and throat-clutching beauty of the South Seas.—G.H.C.

AT THE CAPITOL

Pastor Hall"

Esquire Films' release of James Roosevelt's production, produced in England by Charter Film, directed by John Boulting, with the following cast as reviewed by Roly Young:

Christine Hall ...... Nova Pilbeam
General von Grotjahn .... Sir Seymour Hicks
Pastor Hall ...... Wilfred Lawson
Fritz Gerte .... Marius Goring
Warner von Grotjahn .... Brian Worth
Herr Veit .... Percy Walsh
Lina Veit .... Lina Barrie
Pippermann ...... Elliot Makeham

It is difficult to write a review of "Pastor Hall" (coming to the Capitol) firstly because it is different from any picture I've ever had to review, and secondly because it has left me in a state of emotional turmoil which makes it difficult to put an evaluation on the production. "Pastor Hall" is not entertainment in any sense of the word. It is rather an emotional experience. It is not propaganda in the accepted sense of the word. We do not need to be sold on the righteousness of our side of this war, and "Pastor Hall" does not attempt any such sales talk. If it is propaganda, I would say it was propaganda for religion and a return to God. It is also, probably the strongest drama the screen has ever presented.

"Pastor Hall" obviously paraphrases the true story of Pastor Neimuller who is still in a German concentration camp. It brings out all the brutality and cruelties of National Socialism as a creed. It doesn't miss a trick in exposing the whole rotten set-up, and yet it never descends to the level of a sensational penny-dreadful horror picture. You may experience horror when you see it, but it will not be from what you see, but from what it makes you think.

The story is a simple affair about a village pastor who can't line up his religious faith with the teachings of the new National Socialism. Eventually he talks too much and is sent to a concentration camp, from which, after sampling the tortures and brutal cruelties, he escapes and returns to his native village to preach one last sermon before being shot down "in the act of escaping."

Wilfred Lawson was an ideal choice for the title role, and turns in a profoundly moving performance. The balance of the cast represent nice type casting. The production is effective, and the direction excellent.

Few people will come away and say that they liked "Pastor Hall," but no one will leave the theatre and say he or she was not tremendously moved by it.

There will be a daily matinee during the showing of "Pastor Hall."

PROHIBITION POLITICAL PARTY IS ADVOCATED

Moose Jaw, Sask., Oct. 25 (CP)—A resolution appealing to all Christian church groups and anti-liquor organizations to subscribe "to the idea" of a new political party with prohibition as its cornerstone was passed yesterday at the Saskatchewan convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. ARMORED UNITS BETTER EQUIPPED THAN EVER BEFORE

Britain Has More Tanks and Other Vehicles Than When Army Went Into Flanders

BETTER TRAINED

(By Ross Munro, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Oct. 25—(CP)—British armored units that make up the army's spearhead in advances and counter attacks now are better equipped than when the British Expeditionary Force went into Flanders, where large numbers of armored vehicles were lost.

During a visit to armored units tank officers told The Canadian Press that the Flanders loss has been made up completely and improvements made in equipment. At no time since British cavalry regiments were mechanized several years ago have the new armored units been so strong.

"Flanders and Dunkirk were bad blows to the armored regiments," said one officer. "We've recovered fully and we're pushing ahead to new developments in this line. Flanders taught us many lessons and they weren't forgotten in reforming the regiments.

"Many of our men are trained better now, too. This past summer in England has given us what we needed to round off our tactics with the new equipment."

Canadians Operating with New Equipment

Some Canadian regiments now are operating with British armored units and if they go into action together, the men from the Dominion will have some of the world's most efficient war machines supporting them.

They also will have the staunch support of the Britons themselves. Every one this correspondent spoke to in five hours with the armored units had a good word for the Canadian troops.

"We've every confidence in those Canadian lads," said one major. "I remember how their fathers could fight and the men over here now seem to be just as good."

Constant manoeuvres keep the armored troops ready for immediate action. Every few days the roads of the encampment area are crowded with snorting tanks and rumbling vehicles as entire regiments and sometimes a brigade moves off on an exercise. Infantry, aircraft, artillery and divisional supporting troops frequently take part in attack are evolved to bottle up the these broad schemes as methods of Nazi panzer units.

"I RETURN WITH PRIDE AND CONFIDENCE IN OUR COUNTRY," DECLARES PRIME MINISTER

"I return with pride and confidence in our country" declared Premier King upon completion of his inspection of east coast defences. Stories of Buried Treasure Keep Hunters on Qui Vive

K. B. Thomas of Toronto to Take Up Search in the Spring

OTHER ITEMS

Picton — Stories of buried treasure ever hold their lure and not a few persons continue the search in the hope of finding it. There are several places in Prince Edward County where buried treasure is reported to be, but as far as is known, none has ever been discovered.

This week, K. B. Thomas, of Toronto, was a visitor in Picton, trailing down stories of buried treasure. He was particularly interested in the gold said to be located in the Outlet river.

Mr. Thomas did not believe he would be able to make a search this fall but if he can secure more details will proceed in the spring. He has an ore detecting machine which he uses.

He spent eighteen days on Proctor Island at Presqu'Ile last summer after the search for treasure there was discontinued. The story of the Outlet treasure is an interesting one.

It was during the Seven Years war in the middle of the 18th century, which resulted in the conquest of Canada for the British. In 1758, the British General Brodstreet organized a fleet of vessels and proceeded for an attack on Kingston. On their way across Lake Ontario they fell in with a French vessel and chased it around Salmon Point and into Sandy Bay. The Frenchmen succeeded in reaching shore and buried a keg of gold in the sands of the Outlet Creek which joins East Lake and Lake Ontario. This gold became the object of much searching and as recently as forty years ago a small group of men organized for the purpose of searching for it. They built a caisson and sank it in the water and began their operations. During the night one of their members of a more zealous and grasping nature than the rest, put a large stone where it is thought the treasure would be. The following day, upon striking the stone with their rods, the shares in the partnership were immediately at a premium and the conceiver of the plan sold out his share for several hundred dollars. The gold, of course, was not found, and has not been to date, as far as is known.

Temperance Banquet Held

The annual banquet of the Prince Edward Temperance Federation at Picton United Church was featured by an address by Rev. G. W. Demille, the new general secretary of the Federation for Ontario who explained the aims and objects of the work. Miss Rosamond Duff, field secretary of the W.C.T.U., Toronto, brought greetings from the Provincial W.C.T.U.. Mrs. J. Grimm extended greetings on behalf of Picton W.C.T.U. and Mrs. Farnsworth of Belleville, president, from the conference W.C.T.U. Rev. R. A. Whattam, Toronto, introduced Rev. Demille. Fred Walden, Jr., sang, accompanied by Mr. Walden, Sr., Mrs. J. F. Reycraft gave a reading. President Don Baxter presided and was returned to office. The only change in officers was that of secretary, Mrs. R. Hobson being elected to succeed Don Walters. Attendance was the best in some years.

Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Stricker are marking the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on Monday next when they will be at home to their many friends from three to five-thirty, while in the evening at seven o'clock dinner is to be served near relatives who will honor the esteemed couple.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Stricker have a host of friends, made during the many years they have been active in the life of the village. Mr. Stricker still operates a lumber business. Mrs. Stricker is active in the organizations of the United Church and generously give their support to all community endeavors. Both enjoy good health which permits them to continue the good work which has featured their lives.

Mrs. Stricker was formerly Netta Gertrude Cahoon, a daughter of Nelson Cahoon and Celia Ann Welbanks and was born at Lansdowne March 6, 1870. She resided near Picton prior to her marriage in 1890.

John Stanley Stricker was a son of Vincent Stricker and his wife, Sophia Cooper. They were married at the home of her parents by Rev. Mr. Briden and there were no attendants.

Their family consists of two daughters, Mrs. Vernon Smith and Miss Celia Stricker. Joan Smith is a granddaughter. Mrs. Stricker has two sisters and a brother living, three brothers and two sisters having predeceased her. Mr. Stricker had two sisters, both of whom died some years ago.

Enjoy Party

The Reycraft juveniles held a jolly Hollowe'en party in the United Church S. S. hall Wednesday evening with fifty present and the program in charge of John Walton, Mary Spencer, Ruth Roblin, Jack Ward and Jean Kerr. A sign directed all to the rear entrance and it was necessary to pass through a "trail of horrors" in the basement before reaching the main floor, then to the balcony, only to descend to the S.S. room by sliding down a table top. Candle light was the only illumination. The S. S. hall was decorated with black and orange streamers and Woodrow Blakely, the president, had charge. After "O Canada," Jack Ward read the secretary's report. George Vanskiver offered his home for the next meeting and program is to be in charge of Mary Sharpe, Betty Way, George Vanskiver, Bill Wills.

Program included a quiz conducted by John Walton; costume parade in which Joyce Kemp won the prize for the best costume and Douglas Burrows and Barbara Pope, those for the funniest. Miss Huddleston gave a humorous reading. Ruth Roblin conducted a backward spelling bee. Fred Walden won the prize in musical chairs. Frances Yarwood, dressed as a witch, told fortunes, a singsong and the National Anthem closed the program. Refreshments included sweet cider and doughnuts.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, How do I look, Willyum, dont I look perfectly gastly?

Quite the contrary my deer, you look as fresh as a rose of next summer, pop said, and ma said, Then it's one of the 7 modern miracles, because my night's rest was shattered to a thousand atoms. If that telephone rang once it rang 8 times between 2 and 4 in the morning, and each time it was the wrong number, she said.

Do you mean the same wrong number? pop said, and ma said, I dont know what wrong number it was, but I know it was the right number to make a perfect shambles of my night's sleep.

Why didn't you merely ignore it, the way I did? pop said. If you take those things in the right spirit, they merely act as a lullaby, like the soothing roar of the surf on a sand beach, he said and ma said, Well of all the unheard of announcements. Here I was giving you credit for inhuman iron nerves to stay asleep through all that din, and you were just shamming with the lowest possible instincts so you wouldn't have to get up yourself. Well I must say that's the worst trick a man ever played on a mortal woman, she said.

You wrong me, my deer, but I'll make public amends, pop said.

And he got up and went to the telephone and dialed the operator, saying, Hello, did you ring this number? What's that, I rang you? Nonsense, there's some mistake and you made it, he said.

And he hung up and dialed the operator again, saying, Well, what is it, please? What's that, how rediculous, please try to be more careful. And he hung up again and started to dial once more and ma said, Willyum, do you want the company to disconnect our phone, stop that, the idea, and pop said, I'm going to keep on punishing myself in this manner till you tell me honors are even.

Ma quick telling him they were.

Vichy Fr. Cabinet Summoned to Hear Petain's Report

Axis "Peace Drive" May be Directed to President Roosevelt Shortly Before Election Day, November 5

Vichy, France, Oct. 26 —(AP)— The Vichy French Cabinet was summoned today to hear a report from Premier Petain and Vice-Premier Laval on new negotiations with Germany and Italy the nature of which remained hidden by a curtain of official secrecy.

The meeting was set for 5 p.m. (noon EDT).

The aged Marshal Petain appeared in no hurry to commit France to any new agreement with the Axis, for upon his return last night from a rendezvous with Hitler he calmly followed his usual routine and left his ministers waiting to know where France stands.

Officials who had been issuing statements that the whole future of France depended upon the Hitler-Petain conversations changed their tune and tried to cool down the public. The results, they said, would be less important than expected and would settle only immediate problems between France and Germany.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Movements of the air and ocean! There is a likeness between the movements of ocean and air. The movements of ocean waters are restricted by large land masses, while the air is much more free. In general, the surface air moves toward the equator from the south and from the north, rises and flows away overhead. On the other hand, the deep waters of the ocean flow toward the equator, rise and flow away, north and south. Ocean currents are motivated by the wind, and by differences in density which is caused by differences in temperature and salinity. These factors are sufficient for relatively fast speeds. For instance the Gulf Stream at the Florida Straits flows at the rate of 121 miles per day.

PLANE CRASHES INTO SPRUCE TREE

Two Members of R.C.A.F. Killed and Machine is Wrecked — Enquiry is Opened

Larder Lake, Ont., Oct. 26—(CP)—Investigation started today into a crash near here in which a Royal Canadian Air Force training plane was wrecked, killing two Western members of the force—Sgt. Harry McDonald, 34, of Winnipeg and Aircraftman W. J. N. Studds, 39, of New Westminster, B.C.

The plane, an American-made Harvard trainer, was being ferried from Winnipeg to Camp Borden, Ont., and was flying with difficulty through a thick mist in this northern Ontario mining area when it struck a big spruce tree on top of a hill seven miles from here. Scene of the crash is far from the beaten track in rough forest and rock land. Search parties had to cut a trail through woods for three-quarters of a mile to reach the tangled wreckage of the plane.

The wreckage was discovered by Pte. Jack Granger, home from Camp Borden on leave from his tank unit, who has a commercial pilot's licence and took off when the mist cleared. Story of the tragedy reached here when a trapper brought word from the bush that he had heard a plane crash.

The plane was one of two Harvard trainers being ferried to the east. R.C.A.F. officials at Winnipeg said the other plane was forced down at Porquis Junction in Northern Ontario because of bad weather.

63,265 Tons Shipping Sunk by Enemy in Week Ending Oct. 14

(By the Canadian Press)

Neutral sources reported the loss by enemy action of only one merchant ship in the week ending Oct. 25—the 3,971-ton Norwegian vessel Norne. An other sinkings that might have taken place did not become public, in accordance with the Admiralty's policy of not announcing individual sinkings.

The Admiralty's summary for the week ending Oct. 14 showed that seven British, three Allied and three neutral ships, with a total tonnage of 63,265 tons, were sunk in that period, some 10,000 tons above the weekly average since the war began.

Newsmen Amazed at Vitality Wit and Serenity of President

By C. R. Blackburn Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Washington, Oct. 26 (CP)—Newspapermen visiting Washington who are privileged to attend White House press conferences are amazed at the vitality, wit and serenity of President Roosevelt.

Even the old-timers among Washington correspondents marvel at the fact that in these strenuous times when the President is deeply preoccupied with momentous events abroad and at home, and has the election fight in hand, he can still find time for his bi-weekly session with the press.

Every Friday morning about 10.30, and every Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock, if the President is in Washington, he receives the press. Often more than 100 correspondents attend.

Yesterday morning he had numerous important callers and a cabinet meeting in the afternoon. But he received the press as usual, made some more or less important announcements, revealed some off the record facts, and sent them away roaring with laughter.

AXIS AIRCRAFT SUFFERS REVERSE IN BOMBING BASES

ROSYTH ATTACKED

Convoys of Both Countries Heavily Shelled in English Channel

London, Oct. 26 (CP)—Striking at intervals of approximately 90 minutes, German air raiders gave London five alarms today from daybreak to early afternoon. The attacks followed a long night alarm.

None of the day's first alarms lasted long.

Bombs dropped in the fourth alarm exploded in the central city district. One fell into a shopping crowd. Two shops were damaged.

Several persons were believed to have been buried beneath the debris of a tenement block hit by a high explosive bomb just after noon.

One hundred and twenty persons crowled out of one damaged air raid shelter through an emergency exit. They were unharmed.

Machine-Gunned Town

Reports from the southeast said a German plane machine-gunned a coastal town and dropped several bombs.

Visibility across the Strait of Dover was described as the best since the war began, with every detail of the opposite shore clearly visible. The sea was choppy, with a cold, northwest wind blowing.

The series of rapid-fire day attacks followed a fierce night raid in which British defences were said by unofficial sources to have functioned with a new-found efficiency.

The defenders were credited with shooting down eight Nazi night bombers, and the Evening Standard said anti-aircraft fire and fighter squadrons had given the Germans the "most devastating reverse" yet suffered in their night attacks.

With the hours of darkness lengthening, the overnight attack, which started furiously and dwindled into fitful gunfire shortly before daybreak, was one of the longest of the war for London.

The first daylight attacks were brief, but London had three separate alarms before noon. One at daybreak and another in mid-morning lasted only a few minutes each. The third came just before noon, and one heavy explosion was heard before the sirens sounded.

As the pre-dawn assault fizzled out over London, waves of warplanes hit hard through wintry storm winds at the industrially-important midlands, the big naval base of Rosyth in the Firth of Forth and Liverpool on the Mersey River.

Spectacle of Another "Battle of Oran" is Probable Say British

London, Oct. 26 (CP).—The spectacle of another "battle of Oran", with the British Mediterranean fleet swooping down on Toulon to trap French naval units there before they could put to sea, was envisioned today by informed quarters should France agree to co-operate with the axis powers against Britain.

Strategists also predicted that units of the British navy would attempt to take over French island bases in the Indian and Pacific Oceans, while Martinique and other French possessions in the western hemisphere would be left to Pan-American attention.

There was no doubt in British minds that Hitler's principal purpose in his conferences with Marshal Petain, aged leader of the Vichy regime, was to get his hands on the French fleet, which even after the battering the British gave it July 3 at Oran, Algeria, would be a valuable addition to axis naval forces.

Government Is Silent.

The government, of course, kept official silence on Britain's probable course should the French ships pass to Hitler, but experts cited a feeling, which is general in informed quarters, that the powerful Royal Navy would immediately try to bottle up the French fleet at Toulon.

Such an attempt probably would produce a much hotter fight than the 10-minute engagement at Oran, the strategists admited, because of added opposition which might be expected from the German air force and the Italian navy.

But the British Mediterranean fleet is "quite capable of handling the situation", the experts said, recalling Prime Minister Churchill's announcement in Commons several weeks ago that great reinforcement was in progress.

Just how strong the fleet is remains a naval secret. Britain has lost some Mediterranean warships, the majority of them destroyers, but she is building heavily. Vessels coming off the construction line regularly, plus fifty former United States destroyers, make the fleet stronger than at the start of the war, despite losses, the Express declared.

LABOR DIVIDED AFTER LEWIS GIVES WILLKIE SUPPORT

Head of C.I.O. Says He Will Resign of Roosevelt is Re-elected

Washington, Oct. 26 —(AP)— A showdown fight for the millions of United States labor votes developed in the presidential campaign today after John L. Lewis, the Congress of Industrial Organizations Leader, gave his unqualified support to Wendell L. Willkie with the assertion that "re-election of President Roosevelt for a third term would be a national evil of the first magnitude."

The Republican nominee, who was campaigning in the heart of the Pennsylvania anthracite fields at Wilkes-Barrie, as Lewis declared his position, immediately welcomed the statement of support. "I am glad to have the help of Mr. Lewis—a valiant defender of labor who puts his country above all," Willkie said.

U-BOAT OFFICER SAFE IN CUSTODY AT TORONTO

Carl Rabe, Escaped German Prisoner, Captured Near Lake Front Friday Night

Toronto, Oct. 26 (CP).—Carl Rabe, a German U-boat warrant officer, was safe in custody here today after a bid for freedom from internment in Canada which took him out on the waters of Lake Ontario in a rowboat. He had escaped from the Christie street military hospital and was making his way to the United States shore when driven back by heavy fog.

Rabe was captured late last night by two civilians at suburban Long Branch after he beached the boat he had taken several hours earlier.

He offered no resistance when he was captured, readily admitted his identity in good English and told his captors: "I was going to row across the water and reach the United States but it became foggy and so I decided to put into shore. I don't like it here."

Rabe was object of an intensive manhunt in which police and military were taking part. He left the hospital early yesterday morning in his naval uniform in which he was to have returned to internment camp. "It was not hard to do," he remarked to his captors.

Let's Make Germany Understand What New Tactics of Air Warfare Their Rulers Employ Means

London, Oct. 26 (CP)—A plea for "heavy, merciless, incessant, destructive" counter strokes against Germany was made today by John Marchbank, General Secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, in "Railway Review", Union publication.

"What moral difference is there," he asked, "between our use of sea-power to maintain a hunger-blockade and our use of airpower to stun Berlin with the heaviest loads of high explosive bombs our airmen can carry?

"If frightfulness is the Nazi argument, why should we not use it to convince the German people their rulers lie to them and deceive them with promises of early victory?"

Mr. Marchbank suggested that to refrain from punishing German cities is "sheer weakness and imbecility."

"Let's make them understand in their streets, their homes, their shops and factories, their schools, hospitals and shelters," he wrote, "what the new tactics of air welfare which their rulers are employing against us really mean."

GERMAN CONVOY NEAR BOULOGNE ATTACKED BY RAF

HUGE GEYSERS SEEN

In Germany Proper, Naval Bases, Oil Targets and Airdromes Attacked

London, Oct. 26 —(CP)— Bomb hits were made on the power station at the big German naval base of Kiel and fires were started in shipbuilding yards there when the Royal Air Force made numerous raids on Germany last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

The Neuhof power station at the port of Hamburg also was "heavily bombed" and many fires were started among the docks at Bremen and Cuxhaven.

Observers on the English coast reported this afternoon that Boulogne was still blazing from last night's furious attack on channel bases of the Germans. A pall of smoke overhung the area, and other fires were to be seen on the French coast at Wimbereux, a Boulogne suburb, and at Cap Gris Nez, site of German artillery batteries.

Anti-aircraft batteries also were attacked at Hamburg and more havoc was wrought in the Netherlands harbors of Amsterdam and Den Helder and the Belgian harbor of Ostend.

Oil targets at Hamburg, Hanover and Reisholz came in for their nightly hammering, as did various war factories.

As the R.A.F. bombers flew away from the channel port, the light of the huge fires lighted their way back to England, the pilots said.

Today big fires were still blazing fiercely from Boulogne to Calais and clear visibility across the strait allowed watchers on this side to see tall pillars of smoke rising from Boulogne.

The attacks on the channel ports were only part of the R.A.F.'s offensive work. In Germany proper, naval bases, oil targets and airdromes were bombed.

Huge Geysers Seen.

This morning the R.A.F. attacked a Nazi convoy in the channel off the French coast some miles west of Boulogne. From Folkestone huge geysers of water could be seen as the bombers dropped their loads. Columns of smoke were also seen.

King George VI Sends Message To Marshal Petain

London, Oct. 26 (CP)—Authoritative sources said today that the King has sent a message to Marshal Philippe Petain at Vichy.

The message was understood to have been one of encouragement coupled with sympathy for the sufferings of the French people.

The King also expressed complete confidence in ultimate victory, in the benefits of which France would share.

Enemy Fliers Smart, Well-Trained But Seem to Be 'Fed up' With War

Somewhere in England, Oct. 26 (CP)—British officers who come in contact with German airmen almost as soon as they are taken prisoners say the enemy fliers are smart and well-trained but generally speaking seem to be "fed up" with the war.

"I have talked to six of them, three officers and three sergeants," one British officer said, "and considering they had just been forced down or parachuted we found them with their wits about them. They were most surprised at the opposition they met here."

"Their ages ranged from 23 to 51. Most wore Iron Crosses and ribbons from either the Spanish or Polish wars."

"Most of them seemed weary of war. They had been flying a long time and were sick of it."

"They generally seemed to think the Messerschmitts dived faster than our Spitfires but conceded the British fighter was more manoeuvreable."

Asked about reports that German pilots believed the Nazis already held parts of the United Kingdom, the officer said, "that may be true of some but not of those I have met."

"However," he said, "they seemed ignorant of events. For instance it would be impossible to find a member of the Royal Air Force who did not know London had been bombed. These did not know Berlin had been bombed and would not believe it when told."

British Admiralty Declines Comment On German Story

Defence Dep't., Ottawa, Says it Has No Knowledge of Report—No Canadian Troops on Vessel

Berlin, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Informed quarters reported the Canadian Pacific Liner Empress of Britain had been attacked by German combat planes north of Ireland this morning. The ship was reported sinking after the crew had abandoned her.

(The Admiralty in London declined comment. Authoritative sources of information said they had heard of the reported sinking only through a Berlin broadcast.)

The Empress of Britain, 1931, displaces 42,348 tons. She is rated one of the world's ten largest vessels.

The Empress was reported at Sydney, Australia, on April 29, with the Maurenania, the Queen Mary the Aquitania and the Empresses of Canada and Asia. All were believed engaged in convoying Australian and New Zealand troops.

In peace the Empress of Britain operated between Quebec and Southampton in the summer and on world cruises in the winter.

She carried the King and Queen back to England in 1939 after their visit to Canada and the United States.

British Communique

London, Oct. 26 (CP).—The following communique was issued Saturday by the ministries of air and home security:

"Enemy activity was on a somewhat larger scale and more widespread than during recent nights. A large number of incidents have been reported, but the great majority of them were small and do not call for special remark.

"In very few cases was any substantial damage done. London and a midland town and several points in one district on the east coast of Scotland were the principal areas affected. Elsewhere in England and Wales, there was little damage and few casualties. In London, the damage was almost entirely confined to private houses and minor damage to some roads. Although a large number of incendiary bombs were used only three large fires were caused, and these were brought under control.

"Reports indicate that casualties were not heavy, but a few persons were killed. A number of fires were caused in the midland towns. All of these were brought under control, but some houses and industrial buildings were damaged.

"The casualties reported are not large, but a number of persons were killed.

"In the attacks on Scotland, several coastal towns were affected, buildings and services being hit by high explosives. Some searchlights were machine-gunned. Casualties in Scotland were very few.

"Our defences were in action throughout the night, and anti-aircraft fire was widespread over the country. As a result, the enemy aircraft flew at a considerable height.

"It is now known that two more enemy aircraft were destroyed yesterday, making fourteen in all.

"Ten of our fighters were lost, but the pilots of seven are safe."

SECOND PLAN FOR GERMANY

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP)—Hitler has decreed a second "four-year plan" for Germany, specially ordering Goering to adapt the plan to the demands of the war.

The first four-year plan was completed successfully, Hitler claimed in a letter to Goering, who directed the plan.

The decree, dated Oct. 18, placed the same legal facilities at Goering's disposal which obtained during conduct of the first four-year plan.

A.R.P. MESSENGER AWARDED MEDAL

Given for Unusual Courage, Determination and Pluck in Air Raid

Swansea, Wales, Oct. 26 (CP)— William Joseph Jenkins of Cwmbwrla, Swansea, A.R.P. messenger who was twice blown off his motorcycle by bomb blasts, has been awarded a George medal "for unusual courage, determination and pluck in an air raid."

Jenkins was stationed at an A.R.P. post during a raid in which some 250 high explosive bombs were dropped.

Carrying a message to the central control two miles distant he rode through a rain of falling shell splinters. En route he ran into a pile of debris tossed into the road by a bomb and was thrown off his machine. He picked himself up and went on.

Then two high explosives burst on a street along which he was riding. Jenkins was hurled from his motorcycle and knocked unconscious. After receiving first-aid he finished the trip on two flat tires and delivered his message.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

SHORTAGE OF HICKORY NUTS REPORTED

If what a market vendor said today about the shortage of hickory nuts in this district is true it is going to be a tough winter on the squirrels as well as the fudge-eaters of the city for, according to the vegetable salesman this year is the "off one" insofar as the hickorey nuts are concerned. They will have charge of the music at both services on Sunday and give a sacred concert at the close of the evening service. In the afternoon they visit Picton and give a sacred concert there under the auspices of Mr. Lockyer's band of musicians.

Reductions in Major Fruit Crops Reported by Dep't.

Toronto, Oct. 26 (CP)—Heavy reductions in the major fruit crops in Ontario this year were reported by the Ontario Agriculture Department today in a preliminary estimate of production.

Apples were 37 per cent less than last year, grapes 34 per cent less, peaches 25 per cent less, pears 1.5 per cent less. Plums and prunes showed an increase of 11 per cent, the report stated.

The apple crop was estimated at 626,600 barrels, compared to 1,010,500 last year. Grapes were 35,640,000 pounds, compared to 54,000,000. Peaches dropped from 758,000 bushels to 568,00; pears from 256,400 bushels to 252,700. Plums and prunes increased from 54,300 to 60,200 bushels.

Heavy night frosts in most parts of the province during the period Oct. 15-21 caused considerable damage to the fruit and vegetable crops remaining unharvested. Grapes were seriously damaged for fresh fruit market purposes but it was considered too early to estimate frost damage to apples. In the eastern part of the province 20 to 25 per cent of the apple crop was on the trees during the freeze.

Yield and quality of tomatoes over the province was greatly below average, although the yield in eastern Ontario was considerably higher than was expected a month ago. There processors had 70 to 75 per cent of average pack.

The potato crop was spotty, ranging from very poor to good in various areas, generally heavy losses from rot being experienced. Many growers, especially of late varieties, reported only 25 to 50 per cent of average yield.

Red Cross Officials Pay Tribute to Willing Gifts of Chinese Residents

Loyalty of Belleville's Chinese residents to the land of their adoption was exemplified in contributions to the Red Cross in the campaign just past, according to an official of that organization today.

Described by Mr. J. O. Herity in a recent address "as one of the finest types of populations of foreign nations who settle in Canada; a type which has yet to apply for city relief an who live their own lives in a manner that is not only a credit to themselves but an example to other foreign elements", the Chinese of this city have proved themselves willing and ready to contribute to any cause beneficial to Canada or social service work in the community in which they live.

Red Cross officials paid tribute to them today. "They gave what they could", one stated, "but the important feature of their donations was, that monies were given willingly an of free accord".

LEWIS' SUPPORT IS WELCOMED

Republican Candidate for President Wants Roosevelt to Answer Certain Questions

Aboard Willkie Train en route to New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Before returning to New York today for a swift round of campaigning, Wendell L. Willkie welcomed the support of John L. Lewis as "a great stride toward bringing the spontaneous unity" which he declared his election as United States President would create.

Following a radio talk last night in which he asked President Roosevelt to answer questions about the defence program, unemployment and the federal debt, Willkie issued a statement calling Lewis "a valiant defender of labor who puts his country above all".

The Republican Presidential nominee making a speech at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., did not hear the address of the Congress of Industrial Organizations head denouncing Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy. However, he listened later to a transcription in his private car ,and said he was "naturally gratified."

"As I have said many times of late," he added, "if American democracy is to survive, the people of America must unite themselves in a great voluntary movement to strengthen this nation.

"We must have an end of group and class warfare. Mr. Lewis' eloquent and unqualified enlistment in our crusade is a great stride toward bringing the spontaneous unity of action and purpose that will follow soon as we are elected.

Saying extemporaneously that he wanted President Roosevelt to reply to several queries in his "next political speech", Willkie declared in his prepared text that he wanted the President to repeat his pledge to keep the United States out of foreign wars.

False Information Scribbled on Bulletin Board of This Paper By Unknown Person

For the benefit of the general public and to keep the citizens of the community advised of the latest world developments, The Daily Ontario-Intelligencer provides bulletin board service in front of the office every day in the week. This service is considered a duty to the community by the publisher and The Ontario-Intelligencer hopes this effort is being accepted as such.

However, Friday evening some person with a rather distorted sense of humor roughly printed an erroneous announcement on the bulletin board. The supposed information was crudely scribbled and read as follows: "London—Premier Churchill died here tonight."

Fortunately, before too many persons had an opportunity to read this false bulletin, employees of The Ontario-Intelligencer were notified and it was quickly erased.

It may have only been intended as a prank of perverted humour on the part of the guilty person, but there must have been a degree of premeditation as the guilty party apparently carried chalk in their pocket with which to scribble the message on the bulletin board. Had the responsible party been apprehended in the act a serious subversive charge could easily have been preferred and a jail term imposed upon conviction thereof, as provided under the Defence of Canada Regulations, which covers thoroughly the spreading of false information or rumors regarding war activities.

As was previously stated The Ontario - Intelligencer bulletin boards are provided as a service to the community and it is desired that they be accepted as such, as this war is no comedy.

Average Score for All Cheese Graded in Madoc, Campbellford Areas Over Ninety-Three Points

INCREASED PREMIUMS

Madoc and Campbellford areas have between 85 and 90 per cent first grade cheese scoring 93 points and higher, and the average score for all the cheese graded is over 93 points. This indicates good records and an increased amount of premium, Joseph Burgess, Chief of Marketing Services, Ottawa, told cheesemen and patrons of those districts at their annual banquet recently.

The total increase in Canadian high scoring cheese this year is 268,159 boxes, a quantity that will necessitate additional payments of the government premium amounting to $310,000 over 1939 payments on cheese graded up to Sept. 30.

The total 93 and 94 score cheese graded in the Dominion was 731,708 boxes equivalent to 59.7 per cent of the entire amount graded.

Ontario's contribution was 137,061 cheese 94 score and 436,251 cheese score 93, equivalent to 66.8 per cent of all cheese graded in this province, Mr. Burgess said. The increase in 94 score is 102,771 cheese, or an increase of over 300 per cent. The increase in 93 score cheese is 62,198 or 23.2 per cent over the 1939 record.

Good Showing in Quebec

Quebec also made a good showing the speaker pointed out, with 9,993 cheese scoring 94 points and 127,712 cheese scoring 93 points, equivalent to 48.6 per cent. of the total gradings of that province. The increase in Quebec is 7,702 cheese scoring 94 points and 59,859 cheese, 94 points equal to 336 and 88.2 per cent respectively.

The total exxports to the British Ministry of Foods at the end of September was 69,649,543 pounds. The total at the end of the season should approximate 92 million pounds, an increase of 14 millions above the agreement.

Premium payments and cheese factory improvement policies adopted by the government have created more interest and co-operation among factory owners and milk producers than any other plan adopted Mr. Burgess declared. Up to Oct. 9th. 159 factories had completed curing room improvements and 87 are under construction. Of these 166 are in Ontario, 75 in Quebec, two in Manitoba and three in Alberta. He urged any factory which has not a suitable curing room to take advantage of the government's policy.

Referring to the premiums, Mr. Burgess stated that last year, Parliament voted $750,000 for this purpose, and to cover assistance to factories. Up to the end of March, 1940, close to $600,000 was paid in premiums and $96,000 in improvements. The 1939 results indicate that a larger grant would be required, and consequently the government set aside one million dollars for the purpose.

He voiced the hope that the recent advance in butter prices would not have a depressing effect on cheese production during the late fall and early winter months. Despite this decrease, he said, storage stocks were well over those of last year, and consequently there was nothing to indicate the possibility of a Canadian butter shortage this winter. He stated that milk producers would be well advised to keep factories open as long as possible with the object of producing cheese in the largest quantities for shipment to Britain.

Moose Waives Dues To Members Who Join Up For Service

Mooseheart, Ill., Oct. 26 — The Loyal Order of Moose, international fraternal organization with nearly 1,700 lodges and a half million members has waived dues of all its members who enlist or are conscripted for military service. Each Moose member called will remain in good standing without paying dues throughout his period of active service.

This action has been taken by the Moose supreme council to line up the entire organization of 100 per cent. in support of the National Defense program. Supreme Secretary Malcolm R. Giles states that members in active military service will be eligible to enjoy all the social and fraternal benefits of the Moose.

Children of Moose members, who might die while engaged in active military service, will be given a home, a high school education and training in a trade at Mooseheart, the "child city" located near Aurora, Ill., if they otherwise qualify and are left dependent.

Recent decisions of the Moose, however, are international as well as national in scope. The supreme council headed by U.S. Senator James J. Davis, director general of the Moose, will provide a home at Mooseheart for 50 evacuated children of Moose members in Great Britain. Fifty children will be taken immediately and more will find a home at Mooseheart as facilities become available. This in no way affects the 200 other Moose children from Great Britain who are to be cared for in homes of Canadian members. Sufficient funds have been voted to cover the cost of transporting these children from the port of arrival to homes in Canada and to Mooseheart.

Food Situation in German-Occupied France "Very Bad"

London, Oct. 26.—(CP)— The British Broadcasting Corporation Friday reported German authorities are admitting that the food situation in German-occupied France is "very bad".

The German reports indicate the 1940 wheat crop is only about 70 per cent of normal while the sugar crop is 30 per cent below normal, the BBC said.

Quoting reports from other German-occupied countries, the BBC said there is a shortage of potatoes in Bohemia, Moravia and Norway, because large shipments have been sent to Germany. In Danish towns the price of potatoes had doubled.

The BBC also reported rumors of unrest, sabotage, and underground resistance to the Nazi Regime in the conquered countries, especially Belgium and Holland.

History of Queensboro United Church Features 50th Anniversary Service

The following historical sketch was read by Rev. E. D. Snelgrove at the morning service of the 50th anniversary of the Queensboro United Church in which the congregation is composed of former Methodists and Presbyterians. The Methodist Church was removed in 1936 to Bowmanville for building purposes and the present church was the Presbyterian Church built 50 years ago.

(The Pioneer Church of Queensboro to the date of the first anniversary service.)

It is a well known fact that when two or three families settled near each other in the days when Canada was in the process of building, one of the first organised institutions to gain a strong foothold was the Sunday School. The beginning was small. Loyal and devoted women gathered the children around them usually in some home, to instruct them in the way of upright and religious living.

Cotesoczie, later called Queensboro, was no exception to the general rule and in the 1850's, Mrs Gowdie and Mrs. Lingham were teaching the children in the home of the latter, who was the wife of the store-keeper and lumberman.

Apparently the Orange Association was next to be organized in Queensboro, for written in the records of St John's Anglican Church of Madoc we read that "on the 19th day of January, 1863, the Rev. Mr. Whitmarsh held divine service in the new Orange Hall in Queensboro." The hall had been built the year previously. For nearly ten years it was used by the three church organizations for religious services and we are told that the two Methodist Churches then existing, the Wesleyan and Episcopal Methodists held regular church services as did the Anglicans with the Presbyterian church holding an occasional service. The hall was crammed at every service for though nominally there were denominational differences all the people attended all the services regardless of the fact. When services were at night some one took candles to light the place for lamps were unknown at those first church services. These were advertised as early candle light.

Sunday School Begun

The Rev. Whitmarsh started the first regular S. S in the hall and Mr. Bauder was the first superintendent and a splendid singer. Mr. Daniel Thompson was a very painstaking librarian, his daughter and Mrs. Lingham were teachers and Mrs Thompson loaned her melodian when special music was required.

Though Mr. Whitemarsh came from Madoc the Methodist ministers came from Bridgewater and when the people of Queensboro decided to build a church it was through that charge they began for we read that "at a meeting of trustees appointed by the Quarterly Board of the Wesleyan Church at Bridgewater, Mr Daniel Thompson, Mr. Thos. Lingham, Messrs. Wm. James and John Jeffs, Mr. Jas. Cornell, Mr. Samuel McCoy and Mr. Alex Wright were appointed trustees for the village of Queensboro

On the 27th day of February, 1872 these gentlemen met at the call of the pastor of the Bridgewater Circuit (Mr. Dingman) in Queensboro and appointed Thos. Lingham, John Jeffs and Alex. Wright a committee to proceed immediately with plans for the building of a church in Queensboro. The original minutes of this meeting are still in existence and are signed in fine penmanship by S. J. Dingman.

Cost $975 to Build Church

Tenders for the building were posted and on the 6th day of March — just a week later — the committee again met to consider the three tenders received. Davy & Clothier was $1125; Wm. Breakells $1075 and Wm Wiggins $1000 The latter, the lowest tender was accepted and Mr. Wiggins offered the first building subscription of $25 which was deducted from the contract price making the actual contract $975. The contract was signed by the builder and the committee of three and was witnessed by Wm. Davy and H. Breakell.

Copy of Specifications

A copy of the original specifications is also in existence. On the 4th day of Dec. 1872, the trustees met to make arrangements for opening the new edifice and dedicating it to the worship of God. The business of this meeting is copied verbatim from the original minutes and gives a very complete record of the activities of the growing community.

Queensboro, Dec 4th., 1872.

A meeting of the trustees was called to transact the following business at which the pastor of the circuit presided and the following trustees were present — Daniel Thompson, Thos. Lingham, Alex. Wright and John Jeffs. The minutes of the former meeting were read and adopted.

Moved by Bro. Thompson and seconded by Rev. A. Wright that the church be opened on the 5th day of January 1873 with three sermons Mr. Bland to preach at 10½ a.m Mr. Dingman at 2½ p.m. and Mr. Bland at 6½ p.m.

The Methodist congregation of Queensboro had a new church home.

John Jeffs First Superintendent

The church trustees have been named and the first Superintendent was Mr. John Jeffs, Mr. Alex Wright was secretary-treasurer, Mr. Daniel Thompson, librarian, Miss Breakell, Mr. Cornell, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Lingham, teachers. Dr. Vandervoort was instrumental in having an organ placed in the Church and was the first organist with Miss Annie M. Thompson as his assistant. When the Doctor left Queensboro after his resignation as secretary of the trustee board (in 1887) and S. S. superintendent, his place as organist was filled by Miss Maggie Wiggins, later Mrs. Armstrong and Mr. Tom Jeffs, a son of Mr. Wm. Jeffs, one of the original trustees filled the Doctor's other church offices. The Anglican Church had been built at about the same time as the Methodist Church and the Presbyterian Church was built in 1890. Mr. Dan Cornell was teaching the Bible class and Mrs. John Breakell the primary class. Mr. Charles Cox, Miss Irene Eagleson, Miss Grey also were teaching though the two latter went to the Presbyterian group after their own church was built. Very few of the old pioneers remain. They builded better than they knew and though "they rest from their labors" truly their works do follow them."

History of Presbyterian Church

Previous to the building of this Presbyterian Church the people worshipped in the Cedar schoolhouse, and later in Queensboro school house. Students from university preached at these services. They also supplied at Cooper and St. Paul's Church near Eldorado.

Mr. Madill who attended Queen's College, Kingston, was supplying at the time the church was built.

It was quite an undertaking for there were very few Presbyterians in and around Queensboro. This means that everyone must do his part. The trustees were Mr. John Nicol, Sr., Mr. William Grey and Mr. John Eagleson. These men with the help of others, even members from other churches worked faithfully.

It was built during the summer of 1890. Mr. Clothier, who was a carpenter in Queensboro at that time did the carpenter work. The brick was laid by Mr. Langman. His brick was hauled with team from Mr. Rollins' brick yard in Madoc.

It was dedicated Sept. 7th, by the Rev. Mr. Ferguson. Members of the choirs of other churches very kindly helped out with the singing with Mrs. Robert Wiggins of Vancouver, then Annie Mary Allen of Cooper at the organ.

Besides being carpenter, Mr. Clothier, who was a wonderful singer, led the singing for years.

Shortly after a call was given to the Rev. Stephen Childerhose, who previous to the building of the church had been a student in the vicinity. Under his ministration the work grew from a Mission field to a self-sustaining charge.

S. S. Organized

Also an organ was bought and paid for and a shed built. A Sunday School was organized and Mr. Hark Rollins, Sr., who is still living in Cooper acted for the first few months as superintendent and taught the Bible Class. After that Mr. Thos. Leslie was superintendent for 18 years. The secretary was Mr. John Nicol, Jr., Primary teacher, Miss Irene Eagleson. Others taught the different classes.

Soon after Mr. Childerhose received a call to Parry Sound. The Rev. A. Claxton, who is now at Medicine Hat came next. He was pastor here for 8 years. During his ministry here a Woman's Missionary Society was started and a Christian Endeavour organized. At this time two elders were ordained, Mr. John Grey and Mr. Thos. Leslie. Owing to ill health, Rev. Claxton had to resign and went out to the Western Provinces.

The Rev. Mr. J. A. Leach followed and was here 3 years. Owing to the people moving away and a great many older ones passing on the church began to diminish. The Presbyterian Church was again put on a Mission Field. Rev. Mr. Robinson then became pastor, followed by Rev. Mr. McClung, Rev. Mr. Thompson and the Rev. Mr. Sinclair. Then again students supplied until Church Union came into effect in 1925.

Tenants in Rent Control Areas Not Obliged to Pay More Than Paid in January

Ottawa, Oct. 25 (CP).—Rents in excess of those prevailing last January should not be paid or collected in areas under rent control until some authority authorizes a higher rental, Mr. Justice W. M. Martin, rentals administrator, said in an interview Friday.

He said it had come to his attention that some landlords were collecting higher rents and telling the tenants they could secure rebates if and when the rent was dealt with by authority. This, said the Judge, was wrong.

"Tenants have their rights under the rent control order," he said, "and those rights should be observed until somebody in authority authorizes an increase."

"The sooner landlords realize that, the better. They have all got the right to apply for a review of their rentals."

The administrator hopes to visit Kingston, Windsor, and Trenton, in Ontario next week. He will hear complaints and representations from the public at Kingston and Trenton but at Windsor will hear onup representations from public bodies.

Owing to the volume of work piling up in connection with complaints about rents, Mr. Justice Martin said, he hopes to establish local boards in some localities. The first local board likely will be set up in Ottawa within a few days.

Number of U. S. Planes Shipped to Britain Will Not be Disclosed

New York, Oct. 26.—(CP)—The New ork Herald Tribune says today the United States government has imposed an "official censorship" on all its agencies forbidding the disclosure of figure describing the export of American-made fighting planes to Great Britain and other friendly nations.

Saying the reported new move was learned yesterday, the newspaper adds:

"From now on it will be impossible to find out how many military aircraft are being shipped abroad and how many American planes ordered originally for the army and navy have been or are being diverte to other sources.

"A publication of the department of commerce known as "Nautical World News", which during the last year has published accurate details on plane exports, has been ordered to discontinue this practice, and all other government bureaux which would have these figures have been notified to keep them confidential . . . .

"Since the last figures announced by the department of Commerce on shipments abroad went only through August and would not take into consideration the rapid acceleration in shipment during the fall, the exact figures in planes shipped to Britain this year are not known. It is estimated, however, that more than 1,800 planes have been shipped to Britain, with more than twice that number delivered to British representatives in this country for shipment".

EMPIRE AIR PLAN GOES INTO PRODUCTION

The first flying gold from that great crucible of Empire aerial science and instruction, the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, emerged ready for combat in the flaming skies of Europe the other day when a group of stalwart young air observers received their gold-threaded wing, emblematic of their positions in air-crews of the fleet bombers of the Empire's air forces.

"Forerunners of a great host of young men" as Deputy Minister of Defence for Air, J. S. Duncan called the eager keen-eyed youngsters, the observers form the first graduating class under the Air Plan. Others will follow. In graduating steps, new classes are swiftly climbing the ladder of training under the cream of the Empire's instructors, and in ever increasing numbers will swell the ranks of the gallant chaps who are steadily building up the mastery of the air.

This flow of young men under the Empire Air Plan starts at a very significant time in the course of the war. Hitler has failed to conquer Britain, despite his boastings, his airmen finding it impossible to quell the courage of the British people and his barges and transports having proven the butt of fierce R.A.F. attacks in the invasion attempt which failed. The Nazi chief has dashed to meet Mussolini, now he has been talking with General Franco of Spain, with what results are not revealed. He has thrust Nazi aggression into Rumania and has started Middle Europe talking of his new plans for a new order and the usual German-fed propaganda which means nothing. Italy has seen her drive upon the east met with lack of success which daunts even a "warrior bold" like Mussolini, whose vessels dodge where they can the certain destruction which is their fate if a section of the British navy gets anywhere near them.

Events in Northwest Europe have been the most thrilling in all the history of war. The Teuton hordes of Adolf Hitler's armies have been forced into martial inactivity after a dash through France. To the Royal Air Force in Britain, to the navy and to the army and the people the frustration of Hitler is due. The R.A.F. has held the greatest fortress, the most precious citadel of the world, Great Britain, against the gangster's airmen.

Now comes the time for the Empire School Plan to come into the picture, which means the steadily mounting aerial strength of Britain with the approaching result of a paramount air force in numbers as well as in spirit, and the carrying of the war against the enemy in a land offensive, which has been hinted by British leaders.

It is no wonder that Hitler is nervous, that he is trying to do some welding of his polyglot aggression-held new empire, of smaller nations seized by the arch bandit of the modern world. He knows the sands are running against him, that time and steadily growing power of Britain in the air, on the sea and on land mean doom to the curse which is named after himself, Hitlerism.

When he went to war against Britain, he sealed his fate for he started into play the greatest forces and powers of all time, those of the British Empire. One of these great forces is the ability of Britain to mobilize the men and the materials and the engineering skill. Britain and the Empire have the men, they have the materials and they have the engineers and they have the friends among the democratic nations, particularly the United States. Hitler madly thought to quell the stubborn hearts of oak before the Empire could marshal her forces. But he failed. In short, what he has done is to pull upon his head and Germany and upon his pompous ally, sooner or later the greatest military strength and economic power the world has ever seen brought into battle against aggressors.

The British world and their Allies and friends, wish these young dauntless "eyes" of the air force the greatest victories and successes in their efforts as they play their heroic part in the skies above Europe. The hum of the motors in the planes in which they ride across the heavens will be the sweetest music a stricken Europe has ever heard, the first notes which signify the coming victory. In their hands and in those of every airman, soldier, sailor and marine, and of every citizen rests the safety of the world and the guarantee that ever right and nobility of cause will conquer the sinfulness and crime of aggressor nations.

SYMPATHY FOR FRENCH NATION

Prime Minister Churchill in his appeal to the French people the other day revealed his personal sense of tragedy in the situation in which France finds herself under the German Nazis. Mr. Churchill has been an admirer of France all his life and the blow which fell when France collapsed was felt by the British leader not only as a tragic international event as far as the great French ally was concerned but also as a personal shock.

He knows that the friendship of the two peoples, the British and the French, must endure and will endure for their ideals are largely the same while Germany is the foe alike of Britain and France. Despite promises in the armistice agreement, Germany, everyone knows, will break every promise made to France, if it pleases Hitler's will or sense of punishment.

France is almost mute and Mr. Churchill's message was the expression of his faith in France and what she will be when she again becomes strong. He knows, as he said, that the Nazis intend to crush the body and soul of France. France's silence is itself vocal of her sufferings under the Nazi oppressor. She must know that if Hitler had his way in crushing Britain, France would likewise be the loser as well as Britain for there is no hope for the Gallic spirit in a world where Germany would be paramount. It is that which makes German success impossible.

Britain to Make Great Mistake By Banking too Much on Russia

A tall, greying soldier-diplomat who is one of the greatest authorities on the Near East, told The Ottawa Journal it would be a mistake for the British to bank too much—if at all—on Russian assistance.

Captain Tracy Phillips, friend of Lawrence of Arabia and for years a member of the staff of the British Colonial Office, who is in Canada on an educational mission, recalled Stalin's statement of a few months ago that "the Russians have no intention of pulling chestnuts out of the fire for the British Empire."

May Be Jacking Price

"Admittedly," he said, "Russia's interests are nearer to British interests than they were, but we must regard this with great reserve. There is always the possibility that Russia, in emphasizing that her interests are close to our own, may be jacking up the price she hopes to be paid by Japan and Germany for closer collaboration and for giving more raw materials."

"Do you think Japan will come into the war?" he was asked.

"Japan is not anxious to fight, but rather to gain by blackmail. Blackmail, after all, was Hitler's great virtue. It was what he got by threat, rather than scarifice.."

Captain Phillips holds the view that Turkey, both as regards the Government and the people, is on the side of the Allies, and will not permit the Germans to cross their country without a fight.

"And Turkey," he said, "has a first-class army, and a small, but efficient air force — an air force with British instructors — to back up this determination."

"How about Egypt?"

Already in War

"I don't think it matters very much, from the point of view of declaration, whether Egypt comes into the war. In point of fact, Egypt is already in the war. It has declared a state of martial law, and enemy subjects are no longer able to act as Fifth Columnists."

He praised Egyptian troops as being "able to fight well with good leadership."

"Do you see many favorable things for the British?" he was asked.

"A number of them. For instance, there is the friendliness of the Moslem world in which the war in the Mediterranean is now being fought. Mecca, the spiritual centre of this world, has the allegiance of 200,000,000 people."

The Moslems held a vast area, and while they wanted to gain their independence, they preferred British liberalism and tolerance to being under any other European power. Of tremendous value were the information, provisions and other assistance they would give to Britain.

Fleet's Reputation

Moslems of the Mediterranean had been disappointed with the British when Italy was permitted to invade Ethiopia. "But today they have seen in Moslem territory the action at Oran—that highly distasteful task the British fleet had to do. They saw the annihilation of the powerful French fleet which was there, with those French vessels which escaped running away. The reputation of the British fleet went up 100 percent. These people do not believe the newspapers or radio, but only word of mouth, and they saw with their own eyes.

"They also remark on the fact that all along no Italian ship has put into any port, and no German ship has dared show its nose, while the British fleet patrols at frequent intervals."

In Africa the Germans could expect no support from the natives because Hitler is Mein Kampf, 'his bible" had said that the dark races were destined forever to be hewers of wood and drawers of water for the "lordly Germanic blonds."

Having Difficulties

Italians, in their present campaign, were having difficulties. They had to travel on the crisp hard sand of the shore because the sand of the interior, while it would support light trucks, would not carry tanks. The result was they were vulnerable to fire from the British Navy, and had to stretch out in a long line. The longer the line the easier was the task of the British in defeating them.

Captain Phillips, who himself has been called the "Lawrence of Africa" for his work on that continent during 20 years in the colonial service, but who dislikes the title, told The Journal that Lawrence of Arabia was not a good Arabic scholar.

"Like most men of genius, he was very erratic. He turned on and off from one minute to the next the type of mind that threw up prodigious jets of ideas, like a fountain. If he did not like somebody, he just saw something dull. The Arabs loved him because he was able to adapt himself to their way of life."

"What was the secret of his success?"

His Celtic temperament, I think —a temperament that gives vision and immagination. If it is coupled with the temperament of the phlegmatic Saxon, it makes an ideal combination."

Captain Phillips also knew Mustafa Kemal, who moulded modern Turkey. Kemal's people had given him the title "Ghazi," or conqueror. Jealous foreigners called him the "gray wolf." He called himself "Astaturk," or "father of the Turkish people."

"His dead hand is still the hand that rules his country, and his policies are still the policies of Turkey."

Speaks 13 Languages

Captain Phillips, who was governing an African province when he retired from the Colonial Service to become diplomatic correspondent of a group of European newspapers, speaks 13 African languages as well as French, Italian and Turkish. During his colonial career he was frequently loaned to foreign governments, to report, among other things, on relief in Russia, labor conditions in Portugal, and to head special tribunals.

Eton's Five Centuries

It is nearly five hundred years since Henry VI of England expressed the hope that "The King's College of Our Lady of Eton, beside Windsor," should "be called the lady, mother and mistress of all other grammar schools." It is exactly five hundred years this month since the charter was granted. Eton has flourished for many generations, though, as one of its historians says, its "prosperity was temporarily checked by the Wars of the Roses." It has changed. Scholarships have opened its halls to some of the gifted sons of the common people of England. In the future it will certainly minister to an intellectual rather than a merely titled aristocracy which was, indeed, the original mission of a school founded and endowed for "poor and needy scholars."

The Britain that is in the making under German fire was suggested a few days ago by Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor. "If a boy from a secondary school can save us in a Spitfire," he declared, "the same brain can be turned to produce a new world." Eton's fields will no doubt see the sons of clerks, miners, laborers and mechanics at play. If so, they will inherit a great tradition, shining through the ancient veil of caste and privilege. At its worst, the old Eton bred the spirit of service into the hearts of some who were born to power. Wellington, Pitt, Fox, Canning, Gladstone—all were Etonians. The future Etonians, some with calluses on their hands and the sweat still damp on their foreheads, need not be ashamed of these predecessors.

All Britain has become, in one sense, a part of the fields of a vaster Eton, a more majestic Harrow or Rugby. Its blackboards is the sky on which searchlights write their messages. Its sentences are scanned and punctuated by bombs. There is no Mr. Chips who can look upward with a light heart for himself, for his boys, or for England. This is the school to which all England goes, without respect of rank or wealth, without mercy for age, or weakness or beauty. Day after day, night after night, the gold of ancient tradition is poured into the terrible crucible of a democracy in agony. When Britain celebrates again, this schooling will be remembered. Eton and all for which it stands will have entered into a different, a liberating glory. —N. Y. Times.

Continuous Hot Tub Bath For Excited Mental Patients

Four stalwart men, all six feet in height, called on the superintendent of a large mental hospital and stated that they had their father tied up lying in their wagon at the door and asked him to take charge of him as he had become violent and unable to manage. The father was a powerful man also, well over 6 feet in height. After listening to their story the superintendent had them leave their father in his care and asked them to come back in a week's time.

At the end of the week the sons returned and the superintendent had the smallest nurse in the hospital bring the father to the office. He came quietly, all ready to go home.

The sons looked at the superintendent in amazement and asked him how he had accomplished the cure in such a short time. "All we did", replied the superintendent, "was to put him in a continuous warm bath for a number of hours and he quieted down. If he gets excited at any time, don't try to hold him down; get him into a warm bath, keep the temperature up to about body heat, and he will quiet down in time".

While this happened some twenty years ago, this warm water bath is still an effective method of calming down noisy, excited patients.

Dr. Jay L. Hoffman, Washington, D.C., in Medical Record states that the most valuable method in treating mental cases is the continuous warm tub bath. It is particularly helpful for patients who are restless, noisy, excited, disturbed, tense, or unable to sleep. .... Some highly excited or frightened patients cannot always be treated satisfactorily by this method, but a certain proportion can be persuaded to accept this form of treatment if the reasons for using it are carefully explained to them. Temperature of water can be controlled by use of a bath thermometer and a "canvas" hammock can be made from a bed sheet. Temperature of water which covers entire body except head is kept at 94 to 96 degrees F. The first bath usually lasts an hour which usually brings on sleep. The excited patient may safely remain in the tub during the entire 24 hours, but a bed should be near should a little change be considered advisable. Plenty of water to drink and an ice cap or cold wet towel to head is usually applied.

But She Holds The Fort

Anything which seems to be critical of British diplomacy apparently is meat for the Saturday Evening Post. A series of articles has been appearing in that publication on the "Seven Mysteries of Europe," the fourth of which is published in the current issue, contributed by the French writer Jules Romains, on "The English Mystery" If we are to have an analysis of national characteristics, it is just as well, no doubt, that an outsider should present it—on the principle of "seeing ourselves as others see us." M. Romains indulges in much elaborate ratiocination, but it is obvious that, after all his brain-racking, "England" remains just as profound a conundrum to him as ever it was. Perhaps the conclusions—if they may be called such—of M. Romains can be most conveniently summed up in the remarks of another distinguished Frenchman, M. Charles Corbin, former French ambassador to Great Britain, with whom M. Romains discussed the problem which so greatly perplexed him: "I don't think there was any kind of premeditation on the part of the English....I think I know them fairly well....The English never foresee anything. That can be very serious in some cases. They rely on their instinct. But there instinct, though often clear-sighted, is also short-sighted. They not only don't try to see ahead, but when it's something bothersome, the later they see the better....The English always think things will shake down. Then they obviously tried to make the best use, or the least bad, of a situation they neither wanted nor foresaw....Even now I'm certain they don't know where they're headed."

It may be true that the Englishman acts on instinct, and that other shortcomings, which are so clearly discernible to foreign observers, justify their unflattering animadversions. One characteristic, at any rate, John Bull has—whether it merits praise or blame is a matter of individual taste—and that is that, in the eyes of a voluble people like the French, he is painfully inarticulate, especially when it comes to answering critics. Was it not carlyle who spoke of the English race as the slowest in speech, but the quickest in action? Whether he acts on "instinct" or calculating foresight does not so much matter, so long as he is prompt to act when the occasion demands. The France of M. Romains and M. Corbin, with all its prescience, is now, unhappily, out of the picture. John Bull, on the other hand, with all his muddleheadedness, is valiantly carrying on alone. That's the significant thing, Messieurs Romains and Corbin.

After all, it is deeds, not words, that really count. M. Corbin should know his native France even better than he professes to know "England"; it would be more interesting if he would undertake to tell us why it was that, in spite of all her intellectual brilliance, France failed to prepare sufficiently for the events so clearly foreseen, and why she collopsed when the crucial test came. It is probable that when this war is over there will be less mawkish reverence paid to the dilettante vapourings of the intelligentsia and their psuedo-science, and more to the unpretentious, common-sense judgments of individuals and nations who base their conduct on an instinctive and wholesome appreciation of what is right and what is wrong. Britain, at any rate, has no reason to apologise to France for her behaviour in this crisis in human affairs.—Hamilton Spectator.

CANADIAN MINING MAKES NEW RECORD

In the midst of the titanic struggle of a war which threatens to engulf the world, the Canadian mining industry will this year produce minerals with a value in excess of $500,000,000, a new record.

The value of this contribution to the Canadian and Empire war effort is undeniable; the details of the performance are reassuring in a period of stress. Canadian gold — truly a war munition—will reach in this year a record high value of approximately $205,000,000. These golden bullets are vital to the success of the Dominion's effort to maintain the level of the dollar and to purchase abroad essential machines and war supplies.

All of the base metals will make new records, and many of the non-metallics. The Canadian mining industry is keyed to a pitch never before approached.

Increasing Flow of Metalics

To feed the vastly stimulated industrial activity of the Dominion in war time requires an increasing flow of metals and minerals. The mining industry was asked by the government to bend its energies to that end and has responded to the limit of its capacity. Gold, copper, nickel, lead and zinc producers are now operating at rates never before achieved. Mine, mill and smelter labor is contributing its part to the final result.

The creation of half a billion dollars in new wealth annually by the mines has a natural and healthy reaction on the economy of Canada. There are more men employed in the industry than in any previous boom period. The exported metals and minerals are bringing into the Dominion much-needed exchange.

Gold Production

Gold production in 1918 was 700,000 ounces; it is now over 5,200,000 ounces. Canada occupies second place in the world in new gold output. It holds first place in nickel and platinum, third place in copper, zinc and cobalt and fourth place in lead. All of these metals are essential to the conduct of the war and it is notable that in the case of copper, lead and zinc the Canadian producers have contracted with the British War Supply Board to provide the bulk of output at prices ruling slightly lower than the world market at the outbreak of war. This patriotic gesture has helped to reduce the cost of war and has prevented the inflation of prices due to munitions demand.

In the non-metallics, such as asbestos, new records are also being created. Petroleum production has increased ten fold in the past few years and Canada has now achieved second place in the British Empire in the provision of this vital necessity. Coal ouput is climbing steadily.

Mercury Produced

In recent years the Dominion has added to the list of its metal production radium, selenium, cadmium, uranium, tellurium, iridium and rhodium. In 1940 for the first time in the history of the Dominion, a commercial production of mercury has been recorded. After a lapse of decades Canada is again producing iron and promises to increase importantly its supply of domestically mined ore within the next few years.

The outbreak of hostilities has brought many problems to the Dominion, including the necessity to control foreign exchange, to maintain the dollar quotation, to guard against inflation. It has been necessary to assume control of metals exports in order that they may not reach actual or potential enemies.

All these problems are interrelated with the production of the Canadian mines. ll of them are discussed in the October 24th issue of The Northern Miner which presents in its Annual Number, a complete review of production, policy and plans of the mines Articles by recognised authorities on financial and fiscal subjects are introduced and the vital phases of Canada at war are discussed. Interspersed are articles of an historical nature and a review of the 25 years during which The Northern Miner has been in continuous publication. The Annual Number runs to 152 pages, an indication, if any were needed, of the vitality of the Canadian mining industry at this time.

London, Oct. 26 — (CP) — The Daily Mail reported today a Berlin radio broadcast had disclosed that German troops were building lines of fortifications along the French and Belgian coasts to repel a possible British landing in force.

No authoritative British comment on the report was available.

The newspaper said the broadcast relayed a talk from a newly completed gun emplacement in France. It quoted the broadcaster as saying that guns of heavy calibre are used to defend the coast "as the German High Command are anxious to do everything possible to secure the German-occupied coast against any possible landing and attack by the British."

Parks in the Carolinas

By TEMPLE MANNING

VACATIONISTS forced to "discover America" this summer are discovering among other amazing things that one can travel South to keep cool. Travelers fleeing the heat of the city have made the new high-altitude Blue Ridge Parkway in the Land of the Sky near Asheville, N.C., a most popular haven.

Over 200 miles of the 500-mile parkway, threading its way over the top of the Blue Ridge Mountains, have been completed between the Great Smoky Mountain National Park in North Carolina and the Shenandoah National Park in Virginia. Although it winds up mountains over a mile high, it is as wide as a boulevard and is surfaced with a safe, skid-proof macadam.

For motorists who are weary of the unsightly signs which many times obstruct the scenery, the National Park Service has protected the Parkway for 1,000 feet on each side of the road. All commercial travel is barred and all sharp curves and steep grades have been eliminated.

Land of the Sky

Overnight accommodations are available to meet the needs of every motorist whether he wants to take a cabin in the woods or stay at the show place of Asheville Grove Park Inn, which like the highway is entirely hewn out of mountain stone.

In the Land of the Sky where the visitor seems on top of the world and where the mountains seem to be puffing blue smoke, there are beautiful natural gardens, forests, lakes, trout streams, hunting preserves, famous golf courses, bridal trails and tournament tennis courts.

The Land of the Sky claims several distinctions. Geologically, the mountains surrounding Asheville are the continent's oldest. In the range are 73 mountains over a mile high, equalled by no mountain region this side of the Rockies.

The Park Service claims that there are many portions of the Great Smoky Mountain Park where men have never trod. It also claims 50,000 acres of virgin red spruce as the largest stand on the continent. And there are no mosquitoes!

In North Carolina

The Parkway itself, under construction for nearly a decade, is now more than half completed and will cost approximately $30,000,000.

Side Trips

In the vicinity of Asheville, a link of nine miles has been completed which leads from Bull Gap, near the city, to the famous Great Craggy Mountains and the Craggy Rhododendron Gardens. This link is a favorite short trip for many of the society people and visiting tennis and golf headliners who play tournament matches at the Grove Park Inn.

In Virginia the route has been opened through the Shenandoah National Park and for some distance beyond the Park toward Roanoke. This makes it possible for the motorist to travel along sections of the Parkway in a tour to Asheville from the Shenandoah by utilizing short stretches of connecting roads which link together the completed portions of the noted scenic roadway.

Through Routes

Highways throughout the nation have followed trailways until at present Asheville is the junction of three through Great Lakes-to-Florida routes, and one Atlantic-to-Pacific route.

When the Blue Ridge Parkway has been completed it will make accessible to the motorist almost a million miles of National Parks in which to vacation.

CANADIAN PILOT DESCRIBES EPIC OF AIRMAN V.C.

London, Oct. 26 (CP)—An eyewitness detailed story of the heroic deed for which Sergeant John Hannah, 18-year-old Glasgow airman, won the Victoria Cross, was told by Pilot Officer Clare Arthur Connor of Toronto. Connor won the Distinguished Flying Cross for piloting safely home the damaged bomber in which Hannah was the wireless operator.

The Toronto-born pilot first explained the layout of his Hampden bomber to enable listeners to visualize the scene. The pilot, he said, sits in one cockpit, the navigator in another one in the nose of the machine. The rear-gunner and the wireless operator, the other two members of the crew, occupy the top and bottom gun positions but can crawl through the airplane if they wish.

Describing the flight, Connor said: "We left in fine weather in high clouds and in due course we were over Antwerp....as soon as we arrived we noticed that the anti-aircraft fire was fairly heavy but during the first run none of it came very close to us....as we came round for the second attack we met a terrific barrage. We were hit in the wing on the way down several times, and the aircraft shook so much that it was not an easy matter to keep control of it.

Busy Dodging Shells

"However, we released our bombs and it was then that I saw flames reflected in my windscreen, but I was so busy taking violent evasive action against the anti-aircraft guns that I didn't, at first, give it any serious thought. While I was avoiding the shells—as best I could—the wireless operator called me on the inter-communication system and announced 'the aircraft is on fire.' I asked him 'Is it very bad?' He replied, 'Bad, but not too bad.'

"I gathered from this conversation and from the fact that the reflection of the flames was getting brighter, that the position was fairly serious. Sergeant Hannah, cool, as he was, did not want to alarm me.

"I immediately warned the crew to prepare to abandon the aircraft. At the same time I was still throwing the machine all over the place in an effort to dodge the shells, some of which were ripping right through the fuselage...... After three or four minutes of more shells whizzing through us and past us I was relieved to find that we were at last out of range, and I think that it must have been about this time that my navigator and rear gunner jumped for it.

"The fact that the rear gunner did jump gave Sergeant Hannah more freedom for movement. Whilst he was fighting the flames with his log books and with his hands I could feel the heat getting nearer and nearer to the back of my neck.

Laraine Day clings to Joel McCrea after a harrowing experience at sea where their clipper plane was forced down in a tensely drama scene in the romantic melodrama, "Foreign Correspondent," now on the Belle screen.

"At first Hannah was wearing his oxygen mask but the fumes were evidently too strong and he found himself beginning to suffocate. So, without hesitation, he ripped off the mask and dashed through the fire heedless of the burns which he could not possibly avoid.

"After about 10 minutes, which seemed like hours, I noticed the reflection in the windscreen had died down and that in place of the heat at the back of my neck there was a welcome and refreshingly cool breeze. I asked the sergeant on the inter-communication system, which miraculously escaped damage, how things were going. He said in his cheery manner, 'the fire is out, sir.' "

Burned But Smiling

"He then brought me the navigator's maps so that I could steer a course for home. His face was badly burned, his flying suit was scorched all over, and altogether he looked a sorry sight.

"Through it all he was grinning and I then knew that although his injuries were severe they were not as bad as they looked.

"When I looked at the machine I got some idea of what he had gone through. The rear gunner's cockpit and half the interior of the fuselage were charred ruins. There was a hole in the fuselage large enough for a man to crawl through. There were holes in the wings, but far more serious were the holes in the petrol tanks and how the petrol didn't catch alight and undo all Sergeant Hannah's good work will remain a mystery.

To make matters even worse, while he was beating out the flames thousands of rounds of ammunition were going off in all directions and he had to fight his way through this fierce internal barrage to save the aircraft. He didn't give his own safety a thought. He could have jumped, but preferred to stay behind."

BEGIANS LIVING IN CANADA CALLED TO THE COLORS

First Class Called Are Those Between the Ages of 19 and 45

TO ASSIST BRITAIN

Ottawa, Oct. 26—(CP) — Notice has been given to all male Belgians between the ages of 19 and 25 years now living in Canada to expect a call for compulsory military service against the dictators' armies.

Baron Silvercruys, Belgian Minister to Canada, gave this notice yesterday at a press conference in the stately grey stone consulate here. He also said other Belgians up to the age of 35 years would be asked to register for future service in a Belgian legion formed in the United Kingdom.

Belgians in the United States between the ages of 18 and 35 would be invited to come to Canada to join the Belgian army, but no training would be done in the Dominion. Men who enlisted — he thought many would volunteer gladly—would be sent to Britain.

Similar conscription would be extended to all other parts of the British Empire, Baron Silvercruys said. It was impossible to estimate how many men would be affected by the call-up, he added. Because Belgians who had taken out naturalization papers in Canada and other Empire countries were not subject to the planned conscription.

Resources Behind Britain

Aside from assisting Britain with all available Belgian manpower, the entire natural resources of the Belgian colonies are now lined up solidly behind Britain, the minister said. A Belgian government has been established in the United Kingdom and four members of the Belgian government now were living there, Premier H. Pierlot, Foreign Affairs Minister P. H. Spaak, Finance Minister C. Gutt and Colonial Minister Vleeschauwer.

"Now that King Leopold is a prisoner and is treated as such, the government now in London is the only Belgian government with entire executive power," Baron Silvercruys said. "Belgium's diplomatic service throughout the world is under this government."

One of the most important features of the situation, was that the resources of Belgian Congo would be at the disposal of Britain. Not only would vast amounts of materials be available to the United Kingdom, but goods produced by the Congo and sold to other countries would provide foreign exchange that would be turned over to the Bank of England.

Proposals Made To Reduce Ontario's Heavy Death Toll

Toronto, Oct. 26 (CP)—Posting of rewards for the capture of hit-and-run drivers, increased educational work, lowering of speed limits in some municipalities and on some highways, and increased policing were proposals for reducing Ontario's heavy death toll from traffic accidents advanced at a safety conference yesterday.

At the end of the conference, Attorney General Conant said the government had to consider both the matter of costs and the effect of further controls.

"The government is reluctant to impose regulations. Goodness knows we have enough regulations now covering almost everything."

Rewards will be offered by the government for the apprehension of hit-and-run motorists where a person has been killed or injured, he said.

A committee will be set up to advise on improving highway conditions he added.

PROMOTED TO GENERAL

London, Oct. 26.—(CP)—Promotion of Lieut. Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander of Britain's middle east forces, to the rank of general, effective October 1, was announced today. The 57-year-old officer, who commanded troops in Palestine and Trans-Jordan in 1938, was appointed July 19, 1939, to the middle East command, which includes British forces in Egypt, the Sudan and Cyprus. According to War Office records, there are at present fifteen generals in the British Army.

AT THE BELLE

"Foreign Correspondent"

Said Alfred Hitchcock, the director:

"Build me a piece of Amsterdam, a good slice of London, an airplane as big as an Atlantic clipper, a few hotels, a Dutch windmill and a bit of Dutch countryside. And while you're about it, throw in the Soho district."

That wasn't all he wanted for the Walter Wanger production, "Foreign Correspondent" now at the Belle theatre, but it gives you a rough idea.

Before he got through, Alex Golitzen, the art director, had spent some $200,000, had made 800 sketches and had built seventy odd settings, the biggest job he ever tackled since he started designing film sets in 1929.

Golitzen's first step in the huge set-building job for the film which features Joel McCrea, Laraine Day and Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Albert Basserman and Robert Benchley, was to study the personality of the director, Hitchcock. Golitzen always does that. He finds out a director's technique, then builds the sets to fit it. Before he made a single "Foreign Correspondent" sketch he went into the projection room and looked at every picture Hitchcock has made during the last five years.

Golitzen believes that an art director's job demands more than creating settings. He feels that every camera set-up should be mapped out and sketches made. He believes sets should capture the mood of the film. So he sat down and made several hundred drawings of backgrounds, angles and perspectives and then surveyed the entire display with the director who visualized his production for the art director before building the settings began.

The biggest set was an Amsterdam public square accurate in every detail. It covered ten acres and took four weeks to build. With three crews of men working 24 hours a day. The set required an elaborate sewer system to carry off the rain water, for the scenes film in Amsterdam embraced a rain sequence. There were street cars that actually moved, a vast public building with a long broad flight of steps, shops, homes, offices—four blocks of the Dutch city in all.

But the set Golitzen liked was that of a Dutch windmill in which much of the suspenseful action takes place. On the back lot he created a colorful bit of Holland lowlands—fields and farms and swamps and right in the foreground was the huge windmill, towering 80 feet in the air On one of the stages, Golitzen built the interior of the mill with parts made out of apple-wood that actually ground meal. That setting, Golitzen feels, had mood—he likes mood in sets.

The huge airplane was Golitzen's first, and he hopes, his last. He says he is not an aircraft manufacturer. The plane cost some $50,000 and was built to scale—four motors, 120-foot wingspread and an 84-foot fuselage.

The famous hotel Savoy in London was copied for the picture—inside and out. So was the Hotel Europa in Amsterdam. Those were simple, Golitzen says. Anyone can build hotels, with sufficient technical help.

Ottawa, Oct. 26 (CP)—New openings for young Canadian pilots as civilian flying instructors under the British Commonwealth Air Training plan now are available, according to an announcement today by the Canadian Flying Clubs Association.

Air Minister Power recently announced changes in the training schedule under the training plan and this has accelerated intake of students, creating a need for more instructors, the announcement said.

"Under the scheme now in effect," it continued, "all civilian instructors enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force for the duration of their training. At the completion of their course they are promoted to the rank of Sergeant pilot and given leave without pay to take up duties with a civilian school."

Positions as civilian instructors at established elementary flying training schools and also those to open in the future were available for pilots who have private licences and a minimum of 30 hours flying experience.

Pilots were asked to forward applications to the Canadian Flying Clubs Association at Ottawa.

"Acceptable pilots with 150 hours experience are sent directly to the Central Flying School at Trenton, but pilots with less than that amount of experience, and with as little as 30 hours will be trained up to a total of 150 hours at a civilian flying club or company before proceeding to Trenton," the announcement said.

AT THE McCARTHY

"BEYOND TOMORROW"

Heralded by advance preview reports as one of the most unusual as well as entertaining pictures of the year, "Beyond Tomorrow" opens at the McCarthy Theatre next week with a brilliant all-star cast that includes Charles Winninger, Richard Carlson, Helen Vinson, Jean Parker, C. Aubrey Smith, Harry Carey and Maria Ouspenskaya.

This picture is said to be unusual from several angles; first, because, as critics have declared, in this film for one of the few times in screen history every member of an all-star cast gives an all-star performance. Second, because the story is out of the usual beaten path of film romantic-drama.

"Beyond Tomorrow" is a story of a young man's too rapid rise to success and the struggle of his charming sweetheart to hold his love against the wiles of a beautiful but selfish actress. And the unusualness of it all is the manner in which an elderly man, now departed who loves both boy and girl, struggles to set the young man on the proper path.

Jean Parker plays the role of the charming young girl. Richard Carlson who is rapidly becoming one of the most sought after leading men in Hollywood, is the young man to whom success and riches come too easily for his own good. Helen Vinson, famous for her roles as "the other woman", is the sophisticated actress who causes all the difficulties and heartaches that beset the path of the young lovers. Charles Winninger is the elderly man who after being killed continues in spirit to prove that love carries on its influence even after death. Winninger is said to give one of the greatest performances of his career in this role.

Winninger, C. Aubrey Smith and Harry Carey are partners in a construction engineering firm. On Christmas Eve, Winninger sends the stenographers home, declares a celebration, persuades his partners each to put a ten-dollar bill and his card in a wallet and toss them out of the window into the snow of New York's Fifth Avenue where they live. If finders return the wallets the three will have them as guests.

Carlson, a lone youth from Texas, broke and jobless, and Miss Parker, a worker in a children's clinic, return two of the wallets and remain for dinner. The young-people bring a new spirit into the lives of the lonely old men and their housekeeper, Maria Ouspenskaya. A band of street musicians are called in and all are amazed to discover that Carlson has a beautiful baritone voice.

A few days later the three elderly gentleman are killed in an airplane crash. Winninger, apparently anticipating something, had left $5,000.00 worth of government bonds for each of the pair in an envelope before starting the trip. Miss Parker and Carlson become engaged, Carlson gets a chance to sing on the radio, and what happens from then on results in a series of complications packed with pathos, humor and tense drama. An excellent array of short subjects, including latest Fox News Events, will precede the showing of "Beyond Tomorrow" at each performance daily.

"South of Pago Pago."

Jon Hall, Frances Farmer, Victor McLaglen and an excellent supporting cast in Edward Small's great romantic drama of the South Seas, "South of Pago Pago" is the current feature presentation at the McCarthy Theatre. It is a picture bigger than anything you've seen since "Mutiny On the Bounty" and twice as exciting as Jon Hall's last mighty starring production "The Hurricane"—therefore we urge you to put it on your "must see" memo pad for your evening's entertainment.

"PASTOR HALL"

Starting next at the Capitol Theatre with a daily matinee . . . powerful real-life drama based on Pastor Niemoeller's persecution at the hands of Nazis. Impressive unfolding of village life undermined by advent of storm troopers, and pastor's lone fight to defend right. Grim and horrifying depiction of internment camp tortures. Gripping escape scene and overwhelmingly impressive climax of impassioned sermon to people to retain faith, despite swastika terrors. Brilliant performance by Wilfrid Lawson, sound support from hard-working cast. Powerful and unquestionably sincere dramatic offering carrying tremendously inspiring message for British audiences.

This is strong meat. Many may find its relentless depiction of concentration camp brutalities harrowing, but there are no two arguments that this is a picture which had to be made, one which everyone ought to see, and a production deserving a place in the archives of the films as being a real-life document setting on record a period of modern history in which civilization was overshadowed by a return to the barbarism of the Dark Ages. In fact, it is difficult to believe that one is watching events which are only a few months old. As it is, the production carries an inspiring message of hope.

The background is a small German village. Pastor Hall is mentor to his happy, contented flock. Then the storm troopers arrive and, in their wake, is a burgeoning of trouble such as the community has never known. The Jews' shops are wrecked. A dying cottager receives a box containing her son's ashes and a grim note "explaining" his end. A schoolgirl who tries to be a good Nazi returns from labour camp disgraced and defiled, ruining her family's happiness and so forced to end her life.

The Pastor tries to comprehend, and contacts the youthful leader of the Brown Shirts. Rejecting suggestions he should modify his teachings to conform to the spirit of the Third Reich, he is sent to concentration camp, flogged, but, with the connivance of a conscience-stricken guard, eventually escapes. Despite the pleas of his daughter, he returns to the pulpit and, in an impassioned sermon, denounces the regime and begs his congregation to keep alive belief in a happier future.

Based upon the play on Pastor Niemoeller's life, by Ernst Tollor, the story not only has the ring of truth but provides Wilfrid Lawson with a part which demands a happy balance between reality and dramatic effectiveness. No praise can be too high for the capability with which he handles the role, brilliantly presenting a man crused by brute force, yet ultimately rising superior to his persecutors. The final scene, in which he preaches a sermon fraught with spiritual hope, knowing full well the firing squad waits in the church porch, provides an unforgettable emotional experience.

No children's tickets will be on sale for this performance. The picture simply will not be understood by children and their presence in the theatre will only spoil it for the adults. Under no circumstances will anybody be admitted to the auditorium during the last ten minutes of the feature.

Games, contests and dancing made the evening most enjoyable and a delicious supper was served before the party came to a close.

The committee of canvassers in connection with anniversary of Tabernacle United Church with their wives and husbands, were the guests of Rev. D. T. and Mrs. McClintock last night. The evening was spent in games and music, at the close of which the result of a very successful canvass, was announced. Dainty refreshment were served by Mrs. McClintock.

Mrs. M. Weir of Toronto, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Reid, William Street, and friends in this vicinity has left for her home.

WEDDINGS

GOYER—STAPLES

A pretty wedding took place at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel at 8.15 this morning when Eileen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Staples, became the bride of William Leon Goyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goyer. Rev. Charles E. Baker officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father wore a street length frock of heaven blue with wine accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses. Mrs. James Keegan, as matron of honor, was attired in sky-flyer gray with deep purple accessories, and corsage of pink roses. Mr. John Goyer, cousin of the groom, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride which was beautifully arranged with Autumn flowers. Mrs. Staples, mother of the bride, in wine crepe with matching accessories and Mrs. Goyer, mother of the groom, wearing navy crepe with black accessories received. Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to eastern points, the bride choosing for travelling a hunter's green suit with wine accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Kingston.

McCARTHY—POTTER
SINDEN—POTTER

Chrysanthemums in deep Autumn tones on the altar of St. Thomas' Church, made a lovely setting for a double wedding ceremony at four o'clock this afternoon when Helen Amelia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Potter, became the bride of Malcolm George McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. McCarthy, Toronto, and her sister, Eliza Ena, was marred to Reginald James Sinden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Sinden, Toronto. The Rev. Rural Dean A. Beauchamp Payne, rector of St. Thomas' Church, officiated. The musical portions of the service were beautifully rendered by Ernest Wheatley, Mus. Bac., A.R.C.O., at the organ, assisted by the choir of the church.

The brides who were given in marriage by their father wore their travelling costumes. Miss Helen Potter was in Windsor rose with mink trimming, with hat of same shade and corsage of Briarcliffe roses and bouvardia. She was attended by Miss Jean Saurie, Trenton, wearing a wine ensemble, with corsage of Johanna Hill roses. Mr. Robert McCarthy, Toronto, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Miss Ena Potter chose a wedding costume of iris blue trimmed with gray fox, matching hat and corsage of Talisman roses and bouvardia. Miss Alice Potter was her sister's bridesmaid and wore dove gray with wine accessories and corsage of Bettertime roses. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. P. Sinden, Toronto.

A reception was held at the home of the brides following which the wedding parties left for an eastern trip. Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy will take up residence in Port Arthur and Mr. and Mrs. Sinden will live in Belleville.

BRIDGE STREET W.A.

The October meeting of Bridge Street United Church Women's Association was held in the church parlors, Friday, October 25th. Mrs. Hyde, president, presiding. After the opening hymn "O Master Let Me Walk with Thee", followed by Lord's Prayer in union, the Secretary's and Treasurer's reports were received and approved.

Flowers were sent to several sick members and letters received. Mrs. Hyde and Mrs. May were chosen as conveners with the Unit leaders for a supper to be given at Presbytery meeting.

A generous sum was given as an anniversary donation to the church. Mrs. Finkle's Unit then took charge of the meeting. Hymn "My Faith looks up to Thee" was sung and Mrs. Hefkey gave the Bible Reading and Mrs. Davidson led in prayer. Mrs. Youdale gave an interesting talk on the Vacation School held in the different United churches and of the wonderful opportunity offered to the junior children as amusement as well as religious training. Meeting closed with the National Anthem and Mizpah Benediction. Refreshments were served by the Unit in charge with Mrs. Finkle playing the piano.

Energy Foods In Your Diet

Virginia Simms—Her arduous radio and screen tasks demand that energy foods be part of her diet.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Now and then the bakers of our fair land rise up on their hind legs and proclaim that there's no reason why white bread should not be eaten when a person is reducing. Well, it's only fair to listen to them.

White bread is an energy carbohydrate food. A chemical analysis will show that it contains only about two per cent of fat, and fat is the champion builder of adipose tissue. It contains some sustaining protein factors and other elements that are good to keep you on your feet and galloping.

Bread Energy Food

"Energy foods," explain the bakers, "as well as other foods, are capable of producing fat (or being stored away in the form of fatty tissue in a normal person if more is eaten or ingested than is converted into energy.) White bread is no more fattening than any other similar energy food. It may be included in all diets, including reducing diets, to maintain proper carbohydrate balance."

No mention is made of the starchy contents which is a fat creating element though not as active as fat. Fried foods and butter are the terrible bogies. Some starch is necessary for well being. The trouble with the ambitious reducer is that she desires to speed toward slenderness. And that won't do. The nervous system will suffer, the tissues of the face will lose tone.

"Hard water plays the dickens with the complexion and hands too, especially if the skin is inclined to be dry. A good water softener can be made by combining six ounces of alcohol, one-half teaspoonful of ammonia — remember, one-half teaspoonful, no more—and a few drops of oil of lavender water. Lavender supplies a fresh, sweet fragrance. Pour about a tablespoonful of this liquid into the washbowl.

Since hard water won't make a thick lather, a certain amount of soap remains upon the skin surface. Even the best of soaps should be rinsed away if makeup is to hold tight and the skin to function normally.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Jealousy Largely Responsible for In-Law Trouble

The root of all — or nearly all —In Law trouble is jealousy.

That unlovely hangover from our cave ancestry, or even an earlier ancestry, when we swung about jungles and bashed enemies with cocoanuts, is a form of fear. We're jealous because we don't want the other person, especially an In-Law, to get the better of us or appear to do so.

We don't want the In-Law to be more popular or display more worldly prosperity than we have. Also, we don't want the In-Law to interfere with our way of life, offer suggestions or receive confidences of In Laws who don't approve of us — hence the Green-Eyed Monster rampant.

Case History: That of young Mrs. X. Poisoned with jealousy not only of her mother-in-law but her own mother. Mrs. X offers no Dont's, but her case history offers plenty of them. She is 24, naturally pretty. Blonde, svelte, wearing her clothes like a fashion mannikin, Mrs. X regards the world as her oyster. Her husband was dumbfounded when she confided children were a nuisance and she didn't want any. Housekeeping bored her. She insisted on an apart ment hotel with a good diningroom attached. She doesn't like evenings at home, if she can go somewhere to dance, play bridge or go to the movies.

Mr. X., generally puzzled, sought counsel of his own mother, a Victorian type whose housekeeping was a joy and who had raised a family of six children successfully. Mr. X's mother suggested a baby as a solvent of marital difficulties. Young Mrs. X. raged, threw tantrums and was threatened with a nervous breakdown, because her husband went too frequently to see his mother.

So young Mr. X., distraught because his wife was jealous of his mother, dropped her as confidante and went to see his wife's mother. Surely Birdie wouldn't be jealous of her own mother, and the cruel talk about apron-strings would be dropped. What was the trouble with Birdie, and how did she get that way? What could have been in her past life that conjured up these hideous night mares about her husband's own mother? He didn't know anything about "mother fixation" or "maternal patterns" or any of the nonsense Birdie accused him of after attending lectures on psychoanalysis at the "Ladies' Leisure Hour Club."

His mother-in-law threw up her hands. "The trouble is Birdie missed a lot of spankings. Her father was a fool about her and wouldn't let her be corrected. Son, you have my sympathy. A baby would be a cure, but she's too busy running around to have one." Both mothers-in-law suggested a baby; there must be something in that . . .

The end of this domestic situation is hilarious. The young husband had so many interviews with his mother-in law that Birdie shifted her jealousy from her husband's mother to her own. She was furious. What did he mean by going there to call, talking to her mother about her? So, in her whole undisciplined outlook on life, she backtracked, formed a partnership with her husband's mother and temporarily went back on her own mamma.

But before the year was out, the stork decided to bring peace to this jealousy-ridden combination of In-Laws, and dropped an eight-pound, three ounce boy. And now everyone seems to be reconciled — Birdie, who no longer has time to attend lectures on psychoanalysis and absorb talks on "mother fixation", the two beaming mothers-in-law and the young father. The baby just smiles impartially on them all. Such is life.

Problem in New Set of Playmates

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Moving into a new neighborhood may bring new problems to your child. Having liked the old community, this child may have a hard time adjusting himself in the new.

Dear Dr. Myers: Would you please try to help me? My husband says I am just letting this problem get me down. Then she writes of her only child, a boy of seven.

He is a very affectionate child and well liked by both children and adults. I have had mothers bring their children to play with him, hoping they might learn some of his good traits and manners from him. I had a grandmother wish that her grandson would be like him. He gets along well in school. The teachers think he is fine.

Three months ago we moved into this town. The children, some older, some younger, like him and want to play with him. But the mothers don't feel the same about him. I overheard one mother say that if he were the only son on earth she wouldn't have him, that he is an awful child. One little girl, age four, said her mother did not want her to play with Billy, that he is a bad boy . . . went and talked to the mother but could not find out. . . .

Vivid Imagination

Billy has a very vivid imagination. Seems like he is continually being anyone from the Lone Ranger to the mounted police. We just let him play. But I have noticed that some of these mothers curb it in their children.

My husband and I spend a great deal of time with Billy. Father and son are real pals. Daddy will get down on the floor and come out as Jack o' Lantern and play. Just as though they were both small boys. We answer his questions as honestly as we can. Sometimes the other children tell what they have been told. Of course Billy tells what he has been told and sticks by it because he knows it is the truth. Do you think this may be a source of the trouble?

Help Billy Adjust Himself

My reply: Your child's remarks in the light of your wholesome instruction, easily could be the major factor. Better make it clear to him that, since some other parents do not explain to their children as you do, he had better not say a word when such matters come up. We must take into account the folkways of any community. From their point of view those mothers easily might suppose your child is a dangerous playmate. Don't expect to change them suddenly, since, as you say there are some foreign parents in the neighborhood, your boy may innocently have dropped some other unfortunate remarks. In many ways he may seem different to them. Even his fine flights of imagination might annoy them.

Just patiently go on trying to guide your boy to adapt himself and to win the respect of those parents and their children. Strive to make yourself a welcome newcomer in the neighborhood. Attract the children to your home and be a gracious hostess to them. Encourage your boy to cultivate playmates among those of his own age. And good luck.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Gay "Bride's Cake" Apropos For Silver Wedding Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are planning to celebrate our Silver Wedding anniversary this month, and I would so much like to have you give us some information on how it should be celebrated.

1. For instance, will you please give me a sample of how the invitations should be worded?
2. What is proper for me to wear in regard to colors?
3. What should be the nature of the entertainment for the occasion?
4. Will you please add any other information I should know?

C. A.

I wish that you had given me more of a suggestion as to what type of party you have in mind — particularly as to whether you wish to have it on the formal or informal side, and at what time of day you wish to give the party.

The anniversary party may be large or small, formal or informal. Often, especially for such an important anniversary as the Silver Wedding, a formal or informal dinner is given. Sometimes it is for the family and close relatives, and sometimes it is a buffet dinner for relatives and friends. Sometimes a luncheon or dance is given. And very often the type of party chosen is an afternoon "at home", a formal reception or an informal tea.

1. Formal invitations for the Silver Wedding party may be engraved in silver, with the year of the wedding and the year in which the invitation is issued stamped at the top of the invitation. The form follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Parkson request the pleasure of your company at the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage
Tuesday, the first of November
at nine o'clock
Fifty Park Place

Less formal is the following invitation, for an afternoon party,

1915-1940
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Parkson
at Home
Tuesday, the first of November
from four until seven o'clock
Fifty Park Place

Invitations for an informal party —for example, an anniversary tea or an evening buffet party — may properly be notes written by the hostess, or they may be telephoned.

2. Wear any shade that is becoming to you.

3. It is not necessary to have any especially planned entertainment. But you may hire a small orchestra for dancing, or dance to radio music. If your friends like bridge or any other special kind of party, arrange for this.

4. You may like to set your table in a silvery mood — a silver damask table-cloth, silver candlesticks holding silvered candles, and silver compote dishes with white mints.

Customarily there is a bride's cake covered with white frosting, and for the Silver Wedding the dates, initials of the "bride and groom", and other decorations are iced on the top in silver or with tiny silvered candles. This makes a charming centrepiece for your table, and when the dessert is served, you, the "bride", cut this cake as you did your first bridal cake twenty-five years ago! Another feature of your anniversary party should be the toast to "the bride and groom."

Almost every parent who calls a doctor to treat convulsions in a baby is frightened by belief that the seizure is epileptic; for most persons still look upon epilepsy as a disease, when actually epileptic fits are symptoms of disease just as ordinary convulsions are.

Epileptic fits are caused by a variety of things. Some epileptic seizures are of hereditary origin, others are the result of head injuries. Epileptic fits are almost exactly the same as the ordinary convulsions that occur in children up to three or four years of age, and the treatment should be the same as I have previously prescribed for convulsions—do nothing except keep the victim from striking his head on something and try and keep him from biting his tongue by inserting something such as a towel between his teeth.

Most laymen witnessing one of these terrifying — to them — seizures, wants to stop the jerking that the victim's body goes through during a seizure. Then when the attack is over, and the patient lapses into a deep sleep, they want to rouse him. This last, is of course, injurious to the child, because this sleep he falls into after a convulsion, is extremely beneficial. Naturally persons want to awaken the patient because they are concerned over his condition. They want to have him look at them and recognize them so they will be sure he is alright. Nevertheless, this natural impulse should be restrained.

An old woman once told me that when she saw anyone sleeping after an epileptic seizure she wakened them at once because she believed that during a convulsion the victim's soul left his body and should be coaxed back as quickly as possible. Such superstitions are still current in backward sections. A similar superstition is that evil spirits have taken possession of the victim's body, and only by waking him can these spirits be driven out.

It is extremely difficult for any but an experienced practitioner to determine whether a young child's convulsions are epileptic or not. As I said above, all children up to the age of three or four are likely to have convulsions and these might or might not be epileptic in character.

A case finally diagnosed as epileptic gives an inevitable feeling of hopelessness, for no sure cure is known for it. In many instances, the epileptic patient goes steadily downhill until he must be under constant care. Yet many great men are reputed to have been epileptic. Caesar, the Roman conqueror, was one of these; so were Napoleon, Mohammed, Alfred the Great, Peter the Great.

In the past many looked on epilepsy as a form of insanity. This is not the case at all, for only the motor section of the brain is affected when an attack comes. And there is still ground for great hopes that medical science will conquer this condition.

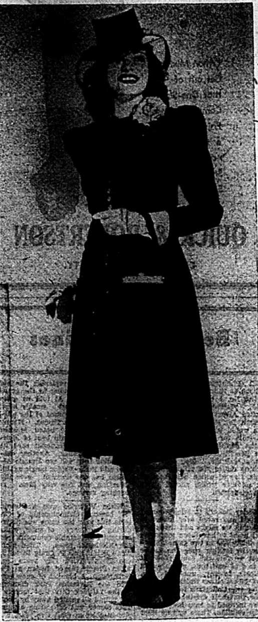
Bridging the Seasons



By ALICE ALDEN

ALTHOUGH some of us like to rush the season and wear velvets in summer, there are other gals, wise in the ways of fashion, who look for smart outfits to bridge the seasons. That the shops cater to such demands is evidenced by the smart ensemble recently selected by Rita Hayworth for immediate wear.

The coat is of black woolen worn over a black silk frock patterned in white. The coat is buttoned from the high, round neckline to the nipped-in waist.

White faille is used for the neck binding. Gloves, bag and shoes are of black suede. The position hat, again one of the new season's smartest shapes, is of faille with a grosgrain crown band and veil snood.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Husbands As Well As Wives Write Their Tickets

Dear Miss Chatfield:

Please write somé advise to a jealous and self-pitying wife which will help save her home and future.

Recently my wife has developed this complex to such an extent it is breaking up our home. There is no reason in the world for it and frankly I don't want to keep on unless we can make her correct this fault.

She has recently started on our office girls, none of whom means a thing to me nor me to them. We have our own home, servants and just about every comfort and convenience for small income families. In my rental business I have to meet and know hundreds of people, have to ride prospects to rent houses, etc. My wife is checking the office every day and doubting every female I am seen with, besides sending cussing remarks to female friends. This is going to hurt my business and she and me personally. In fact, it already has.

She doesn't consider that it is the money these people pay for my services which provides us with our home, advantages, pleasures, living, automobiles, vacation and everything in a financial way. If it were not for my salary and commission I wouldn't have a dime a month.

I go home, straight home to her each day at 5 p.m. and there I stay until 8 a.m. I am some 1,800 hours overslept, and 100 percent henpecked.

E. P.

Brother, offering advice to a jealous, suspicious, self-pitying woman is about the same thing as offering castor oil to a peevish, fretful child. Neither one wants what's offered and neither one will take it unless forced. So let's skip that idea and instead give you, her husband, some gratuitous advice.

First, buy a copy of the novel "All This and Heaven Too." Let your wife see you so absorbed in reading it that she can't resist the temptation to read it. In other words, bait her with the book. Then some evening, instead of sitting around the house moping, suggest that the two of you go to see the movie of the same name. She may perhaps be impressed with the suggestion that some husbands have choked worrysome wives to death.

Generally speaking, the man who is henpecked won't admit his humiliating position (exceptions of course) and when you hear a man talking about being under his wife's heel, its often the other way around. No accusation here, merely a suggestion that you study your situation closely to determine if you are henpecked or merely harassed. There's a big difference.

It's true that some women drive themselves nuts fretting about their failure to get the sort of affectionate consideration they think they deserve from their husbands. In which event things go from bad to worse because the more fits mamas throw, the more unaffectionate papas become. However, any man who brings home the bacon, carrying at the same time a conscience void of offense toward the wife, deserves, should have, and can get her confidence and respect, if she's normal. If she's not normal there's a matter for doctors and institutions and the sooner she makes connection with both, the better off are all parties.

Advice to all harried husbands: manly authority backed by a clean record and a supporting purse can yield you peace and concord, if not supreme happiness and contentment.

Caroline Cratfield.

The Movies and Your Eyes

No Flicker in Talkies, Therefore No Strain

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

How much harm is done to the eyes by reading on trains, airplanes automobiles or by any kind of flickering light? How much harm is done by reading in dim light, or by long sessions at the movies?

No permanent harm, all but the most fussy occulists will agree.

True, it requires more energy and strain than reading in a steady light. If you walk over a rough road, up hill and down, over stones and in and out of holes, you are more tired than covering the same distance on the level. But you do not do any permanent damage to your legs.

No Permanent Damage

So flickering lights cause more and more rapid muscular adjustments and the procedure tires your eyes. But it doesn't "ruin" them, as parents are apt to say in warnings. It does no permanent damage. Headaches result, and general bodily fatigue, and heavy, burning feelings of the eyes.

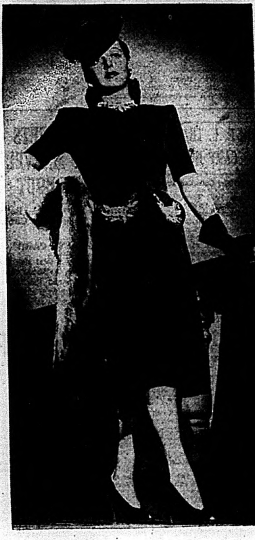
For those who have visual defects such attempts may have more serious consequences. Near-sighted persons, particularly under 30, when the eyeball is soft, may put such a muscular strain on the eyeball as to result in increased and permanent damage. This applies also to people with a lack of proper muscular balance. This does not mean those with a definite squint, but simply so much muscle weakness that the eyes can be thrown off balance by excessive muscular work and strain.

The minimum amount of illumination that is supposed to be necessary and sufficient for reading is placed at 10 foot-candles. Any electric light and any reasonable amount of daylight will furnish this.

Effect of Movies

The movies present a special condition. With modern technique the amount of flicker in a movie is almost nil. The light also is steady and sufficient. The introduction of talkies has also made an improvement. The characters most of the time in modern talkies don't move around as much as they used to in the movies. This does not apply, of course, to the moments when they are falling over cliffs, etc. But in most situations they must stand still while delivering their speeches in order to get the idea over. Then in the old days your eyes had to endure changes from a brightly illuminated scene to a dark chart with the legend an it. This has been eliminated by the talkies. The consequence is that experts say the movies are the least straining of all methods of using the eyes. I know people who can go to the movies for hours, but invariably have a headache if they read fifty pages of print.

The Mode in Black and White



By ALICE ALDEN

COLORS may come and colors do go. But black splashed with a dash of white goes on forever. It is the choice of smart women the world over and is always in good taste no matter the time, season or occasion. Ann Sheridan goes in for black and white a great deal when it comes to her personal wardrobe.

For this page, she has been photographed in her newest frock, a black crepe frock of the dressy type. It is beautifully cut with a smooth-fitting waistline and a four-gored skirt shirred into rounded pockets. The high rounded neckline and the pockets are accented with white embroidery in a grape and leaf pattern. Black jersey disc beret and platina fox scarf complete this smart ensemble.

Marriage Comes And Gifts Go!

By ELEANOR ROSS

SINCE THERE is marrying and giving in marriage all through the year, it is always open season for wedding presents. There's always a large crop of weddings in September so here are some suggestions for the wedding presents.

For The Table

China and glassware are always welcome but it isn't wise to givet his type of present unless the giver has a good idea of the home into which it is going. One present is always welcome, however, the little English breakfast-sets-for-two, complete with covered toast dish, eggcups and all. These come in bone white china with rosebud handles, very new and bridey. Good too, are those various table cookers, such as grills, chafing dishes and a small broiler that does a high class job of broiling chops, steaks, hamburgers or wienies without smoking or grease-spattering. A swell chance for the newly-wed to show off her cooking ability right at the table. All the items mentioned have been on many a wedding-gift list lately.

Initialed Gifts

Monogrammed gifts are really personal and an excellent wedding gift choice. Inexpensive, smart and fitting any decor would be a set of crystal combination cigarette or match holders and ash trays with matching lighter all with big block initials.

Initialled too are terry knit lastex jackets in many colors to fit almost any size or shape bottle or glass. A good supply of these will keep nice new furniture bright and stainless.

Good Ornaments

If there is some special feature of the new dovecote such as a terrace or a fire-place, it is an easy matter to determine your gift. We saw the nicest ovenware just right for al fresco dining, a covered casserole in the shape of a pineapple and individual dishes shaped like pears, apples and pineapples in beautiful colors.

This set could be teamed up with a set of cellophane mats painted in a profusion of vivid garden flowers. There's a beautiful centerpiece set consisting of a round glass bowl, a circular mirror tray and a flower holder, the sort of thing that fits in anywhere and lends enchantment to any table through the day as well as during dinner. Glass articles always seem to be welcome wedding gifts which explains why those lovely mirror glass hampers, waste baskets, desk sets and small radios are always in demand. All these come in white and beautiful soft pastels as well as deeper colors to lend a luxurious note to any home.

Sweet Recipes From the Hills

By ELEANOR ROSS

COLLECTING hillbilly recipes from the great Smoky Mountain natives is the hobby of J. A. Hadley, manager of Grove Park Inn in Asheville, N.C. His favorite is the simple, inexpensive spiced apple pie using the fruit sauce. It seems to be a favorite, too, of all the Northern men who stop at the Inn. The recipe specifies 2 cups of apple sauce mixed with ½ teaspoon of ground allspice, ¼ teaspoon of cinnamon, a pinch of salt and 1-3 cup sugar. Pour into unbaked pie shell and cover with rolled pastry strips to give lattice effect, then dot with butter.

The shell requires 1½ cups of sifted flour, ½ cup shortening and enough ice water to mold into soft dough. For variety embellish this pie with whipped cream.

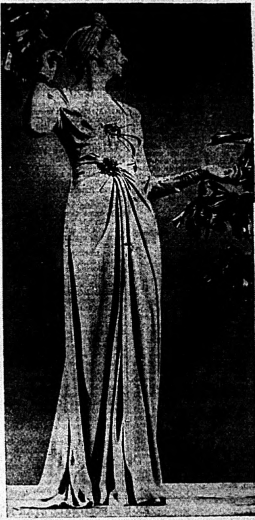
Fried Apple Pies

Fried pies can be made with fresh or canned apple sauce but are usually made in the winter from dried apples. Spice and sweeten the sauce as in the above recipe. Roll out pastry and cut round pieces about the size of a salad plate. Cover one-half of the round with fruit. Fold over remaining half of pastry and fasten edges by pressing with a fork.

Use iron skillet for frying. Heat fat as for frying potatoes, then place the pie in skillet, brown on one side, turn over. When a golden brown on both sides, serve immediately with honey, syrup, jelly.

Long Sleeved Formality



By ALICE ALDEN

THE long sleeved evening frock is destined to see a lot of night life, for it is on the preferred list of many fashion-wise women. Kay Francis is especially addicted to this type of evening frock which she likes with a matching turban. The fabric is chartreuse yellow silk crepe made on suave slim lines. The fullness of the skirt is draped to the front and caught at the waistline with a varicolored jewelled ornament with gold stems.

A companion piece of jewelry centers the low drape of the bodice. The matching turban has a deep rolled front. Shirring marks the cuffs of the long, tight sleeves.

LAMB RECIPES

In cooking lamb there are many variations that make it more interesting and help the cook to achieve a reputation for good and unusual cooking. For instance, vinegar seasoned with mint leaves gives an excellent sauce for basting lamb. A glaze of currant jelly gives a differ-cup finely chopped apricots gives ent flavor to roast lamb. One-half the stuffing of a lamb roast a new flavor. And pineapple rings with edges dipped into green sugar and centers filled with mint jelly make pretty garnishes for the lamb roast, hot or cold.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To make a luscious apple pie, prepare crust as usual and fill as full as possible. Do not add sugar or spices. Cover with top crust and seal as usual. Bake at 500 F. for 10 minutes, then reduce to 325 F. and bake until apples are tender. Mix ¾ cup sugar, cinnamon and a little butter in a bowl. Add only enough water to make it possible to pour sugar mixture through the steam vent in top crust of the baked pie. The pie will be hot enough to melt the sugar. This makes a delicious pie. The apples keep their shape and the pie has a much nicer flavor.

So You're Going to See The New Baby

Even your best friend won't thank you for arriving unexpectedly at her house when her hair is netted, her face a wreck, and her nightie not all it should be. The best way is to write, or 'phone, and say: "May I come along and see you on Tuesday at 11.00?" That way you both know where you are. If you can afford a bigger and better bunch of flowers than the dozen or so that you will find dotted about the room, all right. If not, take chocolates. Or a favorite magazine.

If there is likely to be a disillusioned small child ("you're going to have a darling little brother or sister to play with"—Grr!) languishing in the hall, take him an engine; it will help to straighten out his disjointed nose. Miss Lamb advises writing in Home Notes."

When you enter the bedroom don't shout: ears in bed are sharpened ears. On the other hand don't develop a sick room whisper. This makes the patient want to throw something at your head.

Producing The Present

With your first breath say: "Darling, I've brought you chocolates," or carnations or whatever it is. This does away with the acute embarrassment felt by the patient because she does not know the exact moment you are going to produce the rabbit out of the hat. It means that she has to keep her eyes fairly glued on your face to prevent them straying suggestively to the package in your arms. It gets it off your chest, too and puts an end to the ridiculous game of hide-and-seek always played by patient and visitor.

After immediate preliminaries, ask to see the baby, or you will be thought uninterested. If you are a baby expert you will know what to say. If not, remember that every baby has a redeeming feature. Harp on this.

Never sit on the bed, and don't wander about the room. This only enhances the patient's feeling of immobility. Besides it fidgets. Sit on the chair provided, and don't tap the bed with your toe. The smallest vibration fairly runs up a bed and sounds like thunder in sensitive ears.

Don't appear too keen on finding out if it was too awful, even if you are nearly bursting to know. If she wants to tell nothing will stop her; if she doesn't; wait.

Tell any cheerful news that you can, and keep off deaths and illness. A little scandal by all means; it's stimulating.

She's sure to want to let off steam about the nurse. After the first gratitude has worn off nurses always seem to develop irritating little ways—at least so patients say. They either forget the salt, or are forever letting in blasts of cold air; they only half shut drawers, or wear squeaky shoes. So give her a soothing pat, and say: "We all know what nurses are," and she will rest content.

Do remember that this is her time for the limelight, and don't tell her what an awful time you had with little Lena. She wants to tell you what an awful time she had. And don't make this an opportunity for a discussion on the advisability of bringing new lives into a world unfit to receive them. Every mother thinks a Brave New World will arise to welcome her son, and after all perhaps it will. Keep off talk of war. Let her rest in bed be an oasis from the affairs of the world.

Don't take the baby a present on your first visit. Find out what he needs.

Even if you have letters after your name for babycraft, please keep your knowledge to yourself unless it is asked for. Everyone wants to run her baby in her own way. Agree with any wild statements that the patient may make. Mothers often say they are always going to carry on with their lives exactly as they did before the baby was born! He is not going to make the slightest difference. He shall not be picked up, or rocked; he shall sleep by himself in a freezingly hygienic nursery, everything will be sterilized; none must kill him, and grandmothers will be discouraged in their spoiling. Just smile and agree. We all said it.

If one is feeling weak it is so much easier to listen than to talk. So talk. Don't ask endless questions. And do realize that the poor girl is completely at your mercy. She cannot get up and fiddle with the radio, or shuffle her feet as a slight hint for you to go. Never stay longer than twenty minutes, no matter how much she presses you. Then, you won't know the ignominy of having the nurse rustle her apron at you, and virtually shoo you out of the room.

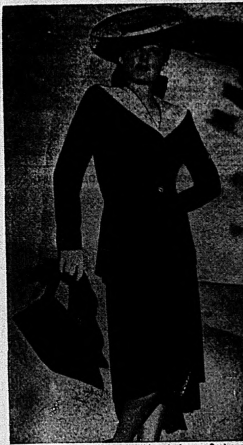
If your visit is on a Saturday or Sunday, as you go down the garden path you may see a figure skulking behind the pergola. That'll be the husband. Spare him a kind word, he's having a pretty thin time at the moment....What with a strangely removed wife, napkins flapping in his face when he puts the car away and that blessed nurse who has to be talked to at dinner every evening....

Don't attempt to stop and discuss the new arrival with him, it will only embarrass the poor man to hear a flow of cheerful chatter about the likelihood of the babe taking after his father.

Give him a wink that means: "We know how a new baby upsets the whole house. The garden's the only place for a man at these times."

As he watches your departing back he'll be thinking to himself: "There goes a woman in a thousand. She understands a man's point of view."

Jackets Go To New Lengths



By ALICE ALDEN

JACKETS go to new lengths to give smartness to suits now being shown for early autumn wear. The long line is molded to give a slim, snug effect that is flattering to most figures, and of course, divine on the slender girl. Ann Sheridan likes this line and has chosen it for several things in her personal wardrobe.

This suit is of finely ribbed inky black woolen, and the tunic jacket is fastened with sparkling jet buttons. The revers show original detail. They are of white bengaline cut out in a leaf motif.

The breton sailor is of black and white taffeta with white stitching to form a scalloped line.

B. C. I. & V. S. Defeats Albert 14-1 to Cinch Playoff Berth; Bill McBride Carries Mail

Fleet-Footed Backfielder Gives Fine Exhibition of Running and Passing

ALWAYS ON TOP

Albert College Stiffens Defence in Second Half After Being Outscored 12-0 in First

With Bill McBride, their fleet-footed backfielder, carrying the mail all the way, the undefeated Belleville Collegiate gridders piled up an early game dozen points to defeat Albert College 14 to 1 in their first meeting of the current senior Interscholastic football season at the Fair Grounds yesterday. Under ideal football weather upwards to 1,000 students and adults saw Coach Baker's smoother-working squad assault Albert from every angle and dominate the play in the first half, only to have Coach Beach's vanquished squad rally strongly and hold the "scarlet scourge" in check in a driving second thirty.

In winning the local "Collegians" cinched a play-off berth in the Bay of Quinte group of the senior Interscholastic C.O.S.S.A., having won their initial two starts of a four-game schedule. Regardless as to the result of their next two games Coach Morley Baker's "scarlet scourge" can finish no worse than a tie for the group leadership but judging from past performances the Church Street students should continue their winning ways and conclude the group without sustaining a loss.

Game's Statistics

With "Ghost" McBride driving through the Albert line for substantial gains and later speeding around ends to reel off yards and pace his teammates, the B.C.I. driving force took its costly toll and the Collegians made eleven first downs to Albert's three. With "Stewie" McBride, senior brother to Bill, on the firing end of the Collegians' aerial attacks the B.C.I. completed five of nine forward passes attempted, many for substantial gains of yards, including Cyril Gardner's "sleeper" for the longest gain of the game, when Gardner speared a forward and galloped 35 yards before being hauled down. The Alberts' attack via the aerial route proved woefully weak and on several occasions the driving "scarlet scourge" crashed through to break up Albert's forward passing formation and toss the "green and black" for serious losses. Albert tried six forwards and completed exactly one, when Smither completed a "sleeper" in the initial quarter. Bruce Cronk accepted no less than three of the Collegians' completed passes, making a sensational running spear of one pass.

Band on Hand

The Exhibiton Park grandstand was filled to capacity at the kick-off with the B.C.I. school band being in atendance to add color and courage to the picture. Each school had its respective cheering section, white-clad Bill Boyle leading some 200 B.C.I. co-eds, bedecked in white skull caps, in their lusty school songs and yells.

After Albert kicked off and a return was made Cronk leaped high to spear an Albert forward, but the green and black held firmly. Smither ran out to complete a "sleeper" forward and advance the yardsticks and Albert punted. The Collegians swung their power machine into action with the McBrides and Row reeling off gains to put the pigskin on Albert's 20, Bill McBride tried a placement, that failed, but in attempting to run the punt out, Ralph fumbled behind his own line and Jack Zufelt pounced on the loose ball for a touchdown, which was converted making the count 6-0 for B.C.I. at quarter time.

B. C. I. Crackdown

Coach Baker's "scarlet scourge" was hitting the Albert line hard and furiously in the second stanza and on two successive plays tossed the green and black for costly losses of yards, forcing Hayman to punt. On a second down 30 yards out Bill McBride crashed through left end and gaining momentum galloped on to a touchdown which he converted himself to make the score stand at 12 to 0. Row snatched an Albert forward out of the ozone to give B.C.I. possession once again and the march was on as Pigden made yards and S. McBride fired a long pass to Cronk as the halftime whistle sounded.

Albert broke up a B.C.I. formation and had possession on the Belleville 25 early in the third, but the Collegians held well and Hayman punted and Albert's only point resulted in a rouge. At the end of the quarter Gardner's "sleeper" was good for a 35-yard gain, but Albert held. The last quarter Pigden acepted a kick, ran it back ten, lateralled to Bill McBride, who skirted right for another 30 yard gain, Zufelt punted well over Albert's line and Brawley was rouged, making the count 13 to 1. Later Pigden drove over the Albert line for what appeared to be a touchdown, but he fumbled and as Albert recovered a rouge was count for one point ending the game at 14 to 1. The Collegian ends of Warren, Gardner and Theobald held strongly and the line stood up well. Hayman of Albert, out-punted the dual efforts of Zufelt and McBride noticably, but "Stewie" McBride's tossing of forwards left nothing to be desired. Carter led the Alberts with Hayman, Ralph Partridge and Smither driving hard.

The line-ups: Belleville Collegiate—Snap, Zufelt; middles, Jones and McGeachie; insides, Pickering and Sharpe; outsides, Warren and Gardner; quarter, Pigden; halves, W. McBride and Cronk; fullbacks, S. McBride and Row; subs, Gerow, O'Connor, Smith, Theobald, Hunter, Campbell, Kerr and Bradford. Ralph; subs, Francis, Taylor, Smither, Middleton, Watkins and Hager.

Referee—H. Townsend, Belleville.

DETROIT WINGS BEAT FARM CLUB

Syd Howe and Mud Bruneteau Star as N. H. L. Club Wins 8-3

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 26 (AP)—Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League went on a scoring spree Friday night to defeat their farm club, Indianapolis Capitols of the American League, 8-3 in an exhibition game played before 3,000 fans.

Almost everyone in a Red Wing's uniform got into the scoring column but it was a pair of veterans, Syd Howe and Mud Bruneteau who were the stars. Howe got one goal and played outstanding defensive hockey while Bruneteau netted the puck twice.

Other Red Wing scorers were Joe Carveth, Syd Abel, Wenny Kilrea, Jack Stewart and Eddie Wares. Gus Giesebrecht and Bill Jennings tallied for Indianapolis in the first period and Jud McAtee got another in the third.

No penalties were called in the game, which was for the benefit of the Essex Scottish Second Battalion Canteen Fund. The game did not count in the Detroit city series.

EVENLY BALANCED OUTFIT IS HAWKS SAYS THOMPSON

SMART DEFENCE

Cooper, Seibert, Wiebe and Portland Will be Regular Quartette

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 26—(AP)—Manager Paul Thompson is forced to weigh his words carefully these days or his enthusiasm about Chicago Black Hawks will carry him away.

Thompson, beginning his second year as manager, says the Hawks should be able to stick close to New York Rangers, Stanley Cup winners, and Boston Bruins, the league champions, in the impending National Hockey League season. He describes his squad as "the most evenly balanced outfit in Chicago history."

William J. Tobin, club president, who has been associated with the Hawks for 15 years, agrees with Thompson's estimate. The Hawks, which finished fourth last season and last the year before, are basing their hopes for an improved rating on a bulky set of defencemen and fast and fancy wingmen.

Joe Cooper, Earl Seibert, Art Wiebe and Jack Portland are ready to pick up where they left off a year ago at defence, with rookies John Mariucci and Dave MacKay looming as good future material. Mariucci was a hockey and football star at the University of Minnesota and Mackay came from Edmonton, where he starred on the University of Alberta team. The defencemen average 196 pounds, none scaling under 192.

Paul Goodman in Goal

In goal will be Paul Goodman, who became the goalie last Jan. 1 and carried on sensationally. The Hawks also have a fine rookie prospect in Sam Lo Presti, 22-year-old youngster with St. Paul in 1939. Lo Presti is to be sent to Kansas City of the American Association, subject to immediate recall.

Three veteran performers should prove ample at centre—Cully Dahlstrom, Bill Carse and Bill Thoms. However, Thompson has been impressed with the showing of 21-year-old Max Bentley, brother of Doug, Hawk wingman.

Doug will share the left wing duties with George Allen, Bob Carse and the ageing Johnny Gottselig who will aid Thompson as coach and general utility man. The veteran has been with the Hawks 13 years.

Mush March, Johnny Chad and Phil Hergesheimer are carryovers at right wing. Another veteran available is Regis (Pep) Kelly, bought from Toronto Maple Leafs last May. Three rookies also have appeared to fine advanage in practice drills—Paul Platz, formerly of Winnipeg Monarchs; Bill Mosienko and George Johnston, both of Saskatoon, Sask.

FORMER BEACH PLAYER NOW WITH ROUGHRIDERS

Lloyd "Truck" Langly, stalwart middle wing of the Ottawa Roughriders, came up to the Big Four by way of Balmy Beach of the O.R.F.U. He was vastly underrated while playing with the Beaches, but has come into his own under the management of Coach Ross Trimble.

FIRST SIX TEAMS IN SENIOR "A" ENTER PLAYOFFS

Opening Game in Senior Series Will be Between Niagara Falls and Port Colborne

15 PLAYER LIMIT

Referee for the Scheduled Game Will Not be Announced Till Night of Contest

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 26.—(CP)—The first six teams at the end of the schedule will enter the playoffs of the Senior "A" League of the Ontario Hockey Association, it was decided at a meeting here last night attended by team delegates and O.H.A. executive members.

Other decisions were:

1.—The schedule will begin Nov. 1 with Port Colborne at Niagara Falls.

2.—All playdown games will be played to a finish.

3.—Names of referees will be kept secret until the night of the game.

4.—Only one official will act in League fixtures, two in playoff games.

5.—Teams may carry 15 men, three more than last season.

6.—In odd playoff games, the gate will be split but the visiting team will not receive travelling expenses.

The meeting rescinded a motion passed at a meeting three weeks ago allowing only four teams to enter the playoffs. The new ruling allows six teams to enter and the National Hockey League system will be used—the first and second teams meeting in a best of seven games series; the third and fourth, and fifth and sixth meeting in a best of three series.

Winners of the third-fourth and fifth-sixth series will meet and the survivors will engage the winner of the first-second series in a best-of-seven games series.

Considerable discussion was caused by the motion calling for raising the player maximum to 15. Hamilton, Port Coborne, Niagara Falls and London combined to pass the resolution over the objection of Toronto, Oshawa and St. Catharines.

Because of numerous objections, the schedule was not completed and it was decided Secretary W. A. Hewitt of Toronto would arrange the whole set-up except for the opening game between Port Colborne and Niagara Falls.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

By The Canadian Press

Mahager Paul Thompson of the Chicago Black Hawks has started to wield the paring knife. Thompson cut his National Hockey League squad to 23 players yesterday, sending centre Fred Hergert to St. Louis Flyers of the American Association. Thompson also revealed that goalie Sam Lo Presti would be sent later to the Kansas City club, subject to immediate recall.

Coach Dick Irvin intends to keep Montreal Canadiens at St. Hyacinthe, Que., where the Habitants have been training, until the day of the opening game in Montreal against Boston Bruins. St. Hyacinthe is only 44 miles northeast of Montreal and Canadiens will leave there only a couple of hours before game time.

Everything looks rosy in the Boston camp to General Manager Art Ross. The Bruins went through a stiff drill yesterday with Ross terming it the best practice in the two weeks the team has been training at Hershey Pa. The Bruins play an exhibition game tonight against Hershey Bears then will spend a week in Montreal, drilling there for the game against Canadiens.

Mike Karakas, the Chicago Black Hawks' castoff, can still turn in some pretty good performances in the net. Karakas, picked as the outstanding rookie in the N.H.L. in the 1935-36 season but released last season by Hawks, played an outstanding game last night as Providence Reds defeated Montreal Canadiens 5-2 in an exhibition game.

Two junior stars are likely to break into Canadiens' line-up this season. They are Johnny Quilty of Ottawa and Ken Reardon of Edmonton both 19. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has given the National Hockey League club permission to sign the two juniors, who have been impressive in workouts at the Canadiens' camp. Quilty is a centre while Reardon is a defenceman.

Most of the members of Toronto Maple Leafs intend to sit in on a football game today. The Leafs are in training at St. Catharines Ont., and it is expected that the majority of the players will travel to Toronto to watch Argonauts play Ottawa Rough Riders in a Big Four tilt.

DUNLOP MEETS MASKED MARVEL IN MAIN BOUT

Both Undefeated in Belleville Wrestling Circles This Year

COMPLETE CARD

Undefeated in a local ring this season Al Dunlop, the former Cleveland rubberman and the Masked Marvel, whose identity is hidden beneath a woollen mask, meet for the first time at the Hume Arena on Monday night.

Dunlop wrestled himself back into the hearts of local grappling fans by soundly trouncing George Pavich, the Greek villain from Sudbury, last week, but meets a more formidable opponent in the "hooded horror" in the main bout for Monday night. Featuring two rapidly-applied pile-driver holds the Masked Marvel made quick work of Jerry Sovold here last week and strutted out of the ring without so much as exerting himself. After an absence of two years from local wrestling wars Dunlop endeared himself in hearts of the fans by beating Pavich and will doubtless be the favorite when he meets the "bemasked gent".

Favorites Return.

Two local favorites of the professional wrestling world, Pedro Valdez, the lithe Mexican grappler, and Jimmie Allen, the former Canadian amateur titlist, will open the evening's program. Allen beat Valdez in their only other meeting and left the Mexican writhing in pain and suffering from a wrenched arm.

The other fight on a three-card bout sees the return of Mike Domerko, the Syracuse adonis, versus the pugnacious George Pavich, who already has a decision over the villainous Greek.

HUSKY ROUGHRIDERS' MIDDLE WING

Paul McGarry, Ottawa Roughriders' middle wing, will be on hand when the Roughriders meet Toronto Argonauts in Toronto this Saturday. The Scullers are confident they can take the Ottawa team despite the 41-6 shellacking that the Capital Hill boys handed them last Saturday.

EX-U.S. FOOTBALL STAR MAY PLAY WITH ARGONAUTS

Coach Lew Hayman, of Toronto Argonauts, is doing his darndest to get George Dailey, former Alabama star, into an Argonaut uniform. Dailey is now in the R.C.A.F., stationed at Manning Pool, Toronto. He feels that if he takes up football again it may interfere with getting to England at the earliest possible moment—and that is his chief interest right now. He is shown with Chuck McLean, Len Staughton, Bernie Thornton and George Oliphant. Maybe Coach Hayman is trying to lure Dailey into the fold by showing him these stalwarts.

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
with
Ken J. Colling

Bill (Phantom) McBride did a real job at filling Ross Clare's shoes as the No. 1 ball carrier for the B.C.I. yesterday. "Little Mac" cracked Albert's line and ploughed through for several fine gains and then would turn around and skirt the ends for additional gains, all to the confusion and mystery of Pete Beach's secondary. "Big Mac," Stewie McBride, took over the pitching duties and rifled nine forwards, five of which were accepted and another which should have been completed.

Morley Baker's "scarlet scourge" romped and raced over Albert 14 to 1 and we might add that's the first point to have been scored on the Collegians in two games. However, in looking over the score sheet we find the count stood at 12 to 0 at half time, which would indicate, to any unbiased fan, that Albert either finished stronger, or the Collegians lost some of their first half driving force and we're inclined to lean towards the latter solution. There was no Ross Clare there to inspire them toward greater heights.

There is no attempt to belittle the sterling work of Coach Baker's backfield, as the McBrides, Pigden, Cronk and Row all covered themselves with glory early in the game, but once enjoying a substantial lead the Bakerites rested to obviously on their previous accomplishments.

The way the Collegiate line cracked down and went to work on the Alberts in the middle of the game was unmerciful. Led by Sharpe, Jones and the outside wings the Collegians broke through twice in succession to smother Albert almost before the ball was in the receiver's hands. It was almost uncanny to see the Collegians drive through on several attempted Albert forwards and smeared the pitcher before he could fire.

When Albert scored a rouge on Coach Baker's crowd in the third stanza yesterday it was the first point to have been registered against the Church Street students this year. They beat Cobourg 22 to 0 and Albert 14 to 1. As the group standing now reads the "scarlet scourge" cannot be euchred out of a play-off berth regardless of the result of their next two games. Both Albert and Cobourg have lost two games to date, but judging from play thus far the B.C.I. should have little difficulty in completing their schedule without sustaining a single loss.

Had Albert played that first B.C.I. touchdown safely only a rouge would have resulted, but Jack Zufelt proved the opportunist when the Albert back fumbled in trying valiantly to run out the punt. The way Bruce Cronk is shagging forward passes of late some good baseball team will be seeking his services as an outfielder next summer. Ross Row and Bill Pigden are fast showing the results of hard and continued practice in their handling of the old pigskin, as these kids seldom fumble the old apple.

Do you remember when War Admiral, out of racing for more than a year, proved himself back at top form four years ago today when he galloped home in front at Laurel Park. The champion three-year-old won by nearly three lengths in a mile-and-one-16th overweight race over Aneroid.

It seems some difficulty was experienced luring Bunny Dunlop out of wrestling retirement, Al having taken out a referee's licence early this fall. "I didn't get enough refereeing from the Commission to pay for my licence, so I guess I'll have to get back into harness and replenish the old coffers by returning to the grappling business," Al told us quite frankly after last week's bout. After having disposed of the pugnacious George Pavish, Bunny now meets the hated Masked Marvel in the main bout of Monday night's professional card at the Hume arena. Another outstanding bout will see Jimmie Allen and Pedro Valdez tangle again. Allen has one decision over the Mexican and the wily Mex. is seeking revenge.

When Waterloo won the senior "B" baseball championship of Ontario this year the game was played during a flurry of snow, which brought considerable comment from the Kitchener press. Then along came Peterboro's F. Craig to tell of the Thanksgiving Day years ago when Picton played Lucan at Peterborough. A blanket of snow covered the Riverside Park diamond in the Liftlock City that morning, but it had all melted away by noon. This corner was officiating as umpire-in-chief at Galt five years ago this month, when the Kingston Ponies beat the Terriers. We were forced to abandon the game for fully ten minutes during the third inning owing to the cold driving snow that ensued, but the old Belleville Grand Trunks experienced the coldest O.B.A. play-off conditions ever recorded in the annals of the senior O.B.A. It was in late October of 1922 when the weather was so cold in Galt that it was necessary to provide tents and oil stoves for the players to huddle in between innings, as it was bitterly cold on the bench. Overcoats fur-lined gloves and galoshes were the order of the day.

SPORT HASH—Tony Graboski, brother of Jo Jo, turned professional with the Montreal Canadiens. . . . And here we always considered Jo Jo the cream of the family puck efforts, but remember Jo Jo is being paid by the N.H.L. "not to play professional hockey," . . . which is about the most unique sports contract ever signed. . . . The Cincinnati Baseball Club declared a $12.00 dividend per share to their stockholders this year. Officials have been cautioned to check rough play in the Senior Interprovincial today. . . . That's like locking the barn after the horse has been stolen. . . Coach Morley Baker's "scarlet scourge" was flashing plenty of power all along the line yesterday and hit the Alberts with the force of armoured tanks at times. . . . Jim Follwell will be in the Argos starting line-up versus Ottawa today and will be doing most of the Toronto punting, providing he gets the necessary protection of course. . . . . . . And it's N.H.L. hockey one week from tonight.

Do you know the Sally Rand play? Jock Sutherland, Brooklyn Dodgers football coach describes it as a "naked reverse." He says: "The interference and the supposed ball carrier streak around one end while the other back takes the ball and without interference scoots around the other flank."

If you think golf is a "lazy man's game," page Chancellor C. S. Boucher of the University of Nebraska. He counts time, rather than strokes, and plays his favorite course here in one hour and 50 minutes. He shoots in the 70's.

THE WAR THIS WEEK

By DON GILBERT

(Canadian Press Cable Editor)

The pattern of Germany's plans for a winter campaign became clearer in the sixtieth week of the war when Hitler, abandoning the usual Nazi practice of summoning the leaders of weaker powers to Berlin, journeyed across the continent on a mission to enlist the support of Spain and Vichy France for an attempt to wrest control of the Mediterranean from the British Empire.

With German forces preparing to move against the eastern end of the Mediterranean from their Back Sea bases in Rumania, the consensus was that in his conference with General Franco Hitler sought passage across Spain for German forces to attack Gibraltar and gain control of the western end of the inland sea.

From Marshal Petain, apparently, Hitler sought to obtain what remains of the French navy. Despite the losses inflicted by the British fleet at Oran and Dakar, this remains a formidable force, and in German hands would be expected, together with the Italian navy, to put up a stiff battle against Britain's Mediterranean fleet.

Matter of Speculation.

What else the Nazis demanded of France was a matter of speculation. The negotiations, according to Swiss sources, provoked a deep split in the Vichy cabinet. The British government apparently received word of what was in the wind well in advance, for a day before the first meeting between Hitler and Pierre Laval, Prime Minister Churchill broadcast an appeal to the French people not to do anything to hinder the efforts of their old ally.

Although the Germans seem to have given up the notion that they can bring the war to an end quickly by invading Britain, the Royal Air Force did not forget the array of Nazi bases along the channel shore in its raiding activities. These attacks were supplemented during the week by heavy raids on centres of German war activity, including Berlin and Hamburg, and on Milan and Turin in northern Italy.

Several Respites Given

Bad weather gave London several respites from the Nazi air siege, but there were also several severe raids in which the loss of life was considerable. The Germans showed a tendency to use only small forces against London, at the same time sending larger formations against Liverpool and the industrial midlands. Italian planes joined in the attack from a base in France.

Mr. Churchill in his speech to the French said that next year Britain will have control of the air —and you know what that means." More information on Britain's growing air might was given by Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert, who said new models of fighters and bombers now in production are much better than current models and what progress is being made with the problem of a night fighter to combat indiscriminate Nazi night raiding.

Marshal Graziani's offensive against Egypt remained stalled at Sidi Barrani and the Italians took the worst of several skirmishes with British patrols. War Secretary Anthony Eden arrived in Egypt to look over the situation. In the Red Sea the Italian destroyer Francesco Nullo was blown up by a torpedo from the British destroyer Kimberley after it had been forced ashore.

Glancing back 25 years: On the Western Front in the week of Oct. 20-26, 1915, the French captured "the curtain," a strong German position near Mesnil in Champagne. The Germans failed to gain ground against the Russians in the east. In the Balkans the Serbs retreated before superior Austro-Hungarian and Bulgarian forces.

Twickenham, England — When Twickenham borough council planned to demolish Radnor House, 18th century dwelling, for a road-widening scheme two years ago, Queen Mary intervened. But now a German bomb has razed the house.

British Officer Evaded Capture Three Times During Flanders Battle

London, Oct. 26 (CP)—Hair-raising adventures of a Hussar officer who escaped capture three times during the Battle of Flanders and finally reached England and safety can now be told.

Captured in Belgium, he was imprisoned in barracks for a week. He escaped first while being marched from Brussels to St. Tronc with other officers.

A peasant gave him refuge in his cottage and provided him with a "Sunday suit" to resemble a refugee. He headed on foot for France but was captured again at Ellezelles. The Hussar eluded his escort within a few minutes.

Farther on he marched boldly through a German military headquarters, got safely through Lille. Then at Grand Pont he was searched, identified as a British officer and imprisoned again. A third time he escaped, this time from St. Ricquier, and headed for the French coast.

There he managed to get a small rowboat and after starting across the Channel was picked up by a British vessel patrolling for stray soldiers along the coast.

London (CP)—Hitler seems to be dogging a London watchman, whose house was bombed. The department store where he was employed became his shelter, then the store was bombed while he was on the seventh floor, but he escaped.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By HAROLD FAIR

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 26 (CP).—The Belfast Telegraph topped news of its Spitfire fund donations one day with details of a collection of £4 15 shillings threepence ($19.25) from Ulster folk in Canada. The money was forwarded by Mrs. Samuel H. McMullan, Hamilton, Ont. Further contributions were promised.

Miss Lily Townsend, unemployed milliner of Maida Vale, is perhaps the first Londoner to welcome a Nazi bomb. Flung to the ground by bomb blast she found on regaining consciousness she had recovered use of her left arm, paralysed since February.

A woman who saw a mouse in her air raid shelter in southeastern England announced she would sleep there no longer. She slept in her home and so did the family. During the night a bomb blew the shelter to pieces.

Jerry Arthur of Windsor, Ont., a member of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's London unit, has come to be known as "the bomb chaser". He won the nom-de guerre while recording the sounds of various types of German bombs for broadcasting to Canada. He took a night off "to cool the nerves", as he put it, and a bomb chased him. It damaged a score of flats in the block Jerry calls home but he escaped with a little shaking up.

Fort William, Scotland, has opened subscriptions for a Spitfire fund to be run jointly with the sister-city, Fort William, Ont. The firm friendship between the namesakes was forged in 1936 when the provost of the Scottish burgh presented greetings to the Canadian city.

Evidence of German planes machine-gunning British civilians accumulates daily. William Mabane, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Home Security, listed 26 recorded cases up to Sept. 15.

CLOISTER INTERNEES

Madrass (CP)—With Italy at war against the British Empire, a number of Ursuline nuns and missionary priests of Italian birth have been directed to confine themselves to their residences.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday October 27

SUNDAY'S horoscope should be a most propitious one for all major plans and projects, particularly those pertaining to affairs of church, and state, educational as well as entertainment or amusement enterprises. These while under a very expansive and solidifying aspect yet may call for a fair degree of acumen, tact or diplomacy in order to placate some adverse forces or antagonisms. Deal carefully with groups or organizations. The faculties are keenly inspirational.

Those whose birthday it is should be on the threshold of a year of splendid opportunities for putting the fortunes and ambitions on a hopeful and progressive basis, with expansive and stabilizing forces giving fine impetus to new and important projects. But use finesse and cleverness when dealing with opposition, especially from large bodies or groups. The inspirational forces will assist.

A child born on this day should have much efficiency and stability for attaining high objectives in life. It will have brilliant and sound mentality supported by keen intuitions and inspirational guidance.

For Monday, October 28

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a memorable day, with swift-moving and breath-taking events. This may eventuate in the emotional romantic, social life or may prove devastating or drastic in more material affairs. In any case be ready for uprooting, exciting and thrilling experiences, likely to culminate in unexpected success and a stabilization of the affairs, generally.

Those whose birthday it is may be surprised by a year of sudden and unforeseen events, in which a radical spading up or disintegration may supply many thrills and dynamic adventures, and culminating in sound and progressive denouements, if wisely managed. This may occur in the emotional or romantic life or in business of an unusual but constructive nature. But in all keep poised and constrained.

A child born on this day should be unusually ingenious and versatile, with creative ability of a high order, either in art, science, romantic literature. Romance and adventure loom large in its social and professional career.

COBBLER TO HIS LAST

Chelmsford, England (CP) — Capt. J. W. A. Stephenson had a "secret weapon" during the battle of Flanders—but was never able to use it. An all-round cricketer, he carried two cricket balls, with the idea he could throw a cricket ball faster than he could draw a pistol.

HONORS TO MISSING

London (CP)—Pilot Officer Frederick King, credited with being the first air gunner to shoot down a German bomber, has been reported missing. He has won his commission since the feat, and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal.

GOOD HUNTING

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking down the back street with Lucky Leroy Shooster, and I said, Oh boy look at the swell sofa.

Meaning a red sofa somebody had put out there for the ashmen to take away, being a perfect sofa except for the insides showing in a few places and some of the springs sticking out a little underneath, Leroy saying, G, it looks like a real anteek, and me saying, Sure, the main thing a anteek has to be is old, and nobody can say this sofa isn't old. I guess the people in this house dont know an anteek when they've got one, I said.

I bet my mother would be glad to have this, she's crazy about anteeks, Leroy said, and I said, G, so is mine. Hay, maybe she'll buy it from me, help me carry it home, will you, Lucky? I said.

Nothing doing, I was the first one realized it was a anteek, Leroy said. Anyways your own mother is the hardest one to sell things to, because she's in the family and you're suppose to give her things. So I tell you what let's do. Let's carry it to my house and I'll tell my mother you found it and ask her if she wants to buy it from you, and if she offers too low of a price we'll carry it to your house and you tell your mother I found it and we'll see how much she'll give me for it, and no matter whose mother pays the most, the other fellow gets half he said.

Sounding like a perfect idea, and we started to carry it to Leroy's house, being heavy as anything and proberly proving it was a good quality, and Leroy's mother was out and Leroy remembered she was suppose to be meeting his father downtown for dinner, so we started to carry it over to my house and then we decided we had carried it plenty for one day so we left it out in Leroy Shooster's back yard overnight.

Two Pupils Suspended Now Taking Exercises

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 26 (CP)—Two of 27 Hamilton public school pupils suspended for their refusal to take part in patriotic exercises have been reinstated at school and are conforming with the regulations, it was announced today by Walter Rollo, attendance officer of the Board of Education, in commenting in the reinstatement of one such offender at Kitchener.

Pending the laying of definite charges, now proposed under the Juvenile Delinquency Act, and against the children themselves, those pupils who signify their intentions of obeying the school rulings, and agree to salute the flag, sing the national anthem, and take part in all other forms of patriotic curriculum will be re-admitted, Rollo said. This change in attitude must be accompanied by a letter from the child's parents.

Should the parents of these children, alleged to be members of the religious sect known as Jehovah Witnesses, still object to their children taking part in the patriotic portions of a school day, the Board of Education will continue with the preparations of charges to be laid.

London, Oct. 25 (CP)—The Air Ministry News Service said today that three times within recent weeks Spitfire pilots have chased German raiders across the English Channel and shot them down within range of Nazi anti-aircraft guns.

Kill Hogs on Arrival to Prevent Shrinkage

The uniform marketing of hogs throughout the week is a factor that has been given consideration by the Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers. When hogs are marketed in such quantities that they cannot be slaughtered on the day of arrival or the next day there is a loss from shrinkage. To reduce this factor in the lowering of hog values as much as possible, seller as well as buyer should have responsibility for the proper distribution of hog marketings throughout the week.

The policy of packers, therefore, will be:

To kill all hogs promptly on arrival;

To endeavor to arrange with shippers and commission men to have hogs marketed so that prompt killing is possible;

To make an allowance in the settlement of one per cent per day added to the dressed weight for shrinkage on all hogs not killed on the day of arrival or the day following arrival excepting where shippers deliver hogs to plants without any understanding with buyers or where the buyer has told the shipper that shrinkage will not be allowed because he does not want the hogs at that time.

May Export Apples To Men Overseas Official States

Canadian apples can be sent to members of the Canadian troops overseas and the Canadians serving in the British forces without the formality of securing a British export licence, according to a communication received today by Senior Fruit Inspector Clarence T. Stevenson. The apples, however, must undergo inspection and be free from apple maggot.

Reports to the effect that no apples could be sent overseas, published in newspapers during the past few days, is apparently a misunderstanding on the part of someone in Ottawa, it was stated.

As far as other exports are concerned, nothing can be shipped to Britain without an export licence. This, of course, means bulk commodities and not soldiers' parcels.

Several organizations of the district which had apples ready for shipment overseas to the troops, found their plans waylaid by the reports that no fruit could be sent out of Canada. This apparently is now remedied, and the shipments can be made providing governmental conditions regarding inspection are complied with.

BRITISH

Canadian troops aboard the vessel.

"The Empress of Britain has not been on the Canadian route for a year," said the spokesman. "It may be stated definitely there were no Canadian troops on board the boat."

No Knowledge of Report at Ottawa

(Navy authorities here said they had no knowledge of the Empress of Britain having been attacked and abandoned by her crew in a sinking condition as reported from Berlin. There was no immediate comment either from British sources on the German report.)

Montreal, Oct. 26 (CP).—Officials of Canadian Pacific Steamship Company, former operators of the liner Empress of Britain, said today they had heard nothing official of a Nazi claim that the 42,348-ton liner was sinking.

(In Ottawa, Defence Department officials said there were no Canadian troops aboard the vessel. Nor was there any word at Ottawa of the ship being attacked by German planes, as the Nazis claimed. In London, the Admiralty declined comment.)

The Empress, rated as one of the world's ten largest vessels, was commisioned by the British Admiralty some time after the outbreak of war. Her last commercial trip was made shortly after the war declaration when she made a journey from Southampton to Quebec, laden with travellers headed back to Canada and the United States from the war zones.

For a time the Empress remained in Canadian ports, being painted and camouflaged. Then, suddenly, she slipped out of port in the early dawn. Later the Empress was reported at Sydney, Australia, with the Mauretania, the Queen Mary, the Aquitania and the Empress of Canada and Asia. All were believed engaged in convoying Australian and New Zealand troops.

The ship was launched at Southampton when she was christened by the Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor. Her maiden voyage from Southampton to Quebec—her peacetime run in the summer—was in 1931. During the winter she was on world cruises.

The Empress carried the King and Queen back to England last year after their visit to Canada and the United States.

The Empress has a normal speed of 24 knots. Her official length is 760 feet.

BOMBS FALL ON EIRE

Dublin, Oct. 26 (CP)—Three incendiary bombs fell in County Wicklow on the east coast of Eire last night. There were no casualties.

Welcome Baby England

They come from war-grit England
To find a haven here,
The little ones, the daughters, sons
Of those who hunt the heartless Huns
O'er homes and all held dear.

And every childhood scene,
Where mothers fare, and fathers dare
The dangers of the Hun-flown air
Above those field of green.

Another land than England,
Her mother-watch must keep
Till weight of right hath won the fight,
And dimmed the evil force of might
That rears across the deep.

Make this another England
For these, by her kept free
Make this their home across the foam
Till England rules the azure dome
As she hath ruled the sea.

And so can we for England,
Their babies and their own,
Hold safe and far, from strafe and war,
The shock that shakes, the shells that scar,
The warning siren's tone.

O welcome, Baby England
Thy lion sire at bay
May rest with mind at peace and find
Thee safe and sound with kindred kind,
When war hath died away.

—E. C. Daverne,
Ameliasburg.

Trenton and District

Trenton, October 26—(Special)—Pleading guilty to a charge of dangerous driving Clarence Casselman of Smithfield was fined $20 and costs amounting to $18.75 by Magistrate E. J. Butler, here yesterday afternoon.

Casselman was alleged to have been driving easterly on Dundas Street and collided with the rear end of a truck at the intersection of Dufferin and Dundas streets. According to the police, there were eight passengers in the coupe car. Four passengers were riding in the front seat of the car and four in the rumble seat.

Ruth Laundre pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy and was sentenced to six months definite in the Mercer Reformatory and an additional six months indefinite.

Pleading guilty to the second offence of being intoxicated, Harry Mountenay was sentenced to one month in jail. The accused man was unable to pay the $50. and so was sent to jail for one month.

Harry Foster of Frankford was fined $5.00 and costs by Magistrate Butler on a charge of careless driving. The charge arose out of an accident on October 5, when the Foster car collided with a car driven by Frank Hawthorne of Brantford, one mile west of Belleville on Highway 2.

Four Given Wings

The four observers of the Royal Canadian Air Force who failed to receive their wings on Thursday morning from James S. Duncan, Deputy Minister for Air, because their planes were forced down in the United States the night before will receive their wings today from Group Captain J. A. Sully.

The wings will be presented privately to the graduates in the office of the commanding officer. The four observers were to have graduated with a large number of other classmates on Thursday but they were detained by the United States authorities until permission for the release was obtained from Washington.

High winds drove the two planes carrying the observers far off their course and they made forced landings in New York State. Washington released the planes on Thursday afternoon and they made their way back to Trenton.

16-Year-Old Boy Confesses Starting Fires During A. Raid

London, Oct. 26 (CP)—A 16-year-old boy's confession, alleging "I sympathize with Hitler and I started fires during air raids to guide the bombers" startled a session of the London Juvenile Court in grim Old Bailey at which the youth was committed for trial.

He was charged under the defence regulations with assisting the enemy. Police said they found a copy of "Mein Kampf," a photograph of Hitler and a peaked cap similar to Hitler's at the youth's home.

"I had shone a torch into the sky to guide the German planes but it was too risky for me so I set fire to the houses to cause a glow which the raiders could see," said the boy's alleged statement.

GERMAN CONVOY

aircraft fire and laid a smoke screen around the convoy. It was believed that at least one of the vessels was hit.

Shortly before 10 a.m. eight German torpedo boats headed out of Boulogne toward Calais. British batteries fired on them.

At Boulogne a large new fire was seen to blaze up shortly before noon.

The weather was so clear that watchers from the British shore could distinguish burning buildings on the French shore.

Other fires were seen on the French coast at Wimereux, Boulogne suburb, and Cap Gris Nez.

Berlin's Report.

Berlin, Oct. 26 (CP)—The German high command communique, in attempting today to minimize the effect of the Royal Air Force raids on Germany last night, asserted that only one attic fire was caused by the bombs dropped. The communique said nearly all of the bombs fell on open fields.

Police Blotter

Mix a large pile of dried leaves, several energetic boys along with darkness and invariably no good will come out of this combination, as city police learned last night.

The pile of leaves were heaped high near the intersection of Albert St. and Victoria Ave. The urge was too great and a match was soon produced and it wasn't long before the flames were leaping dangerously high. Anxious residents notified police that a fire of leaves was burning dangerously close to the telephone pole. P. C. Wright investigated and upon arrival was informed that two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force had succeeded in extinguishing the blaze without damage resulting.

Fender damage resulted to two motor cars at the intersection of Foster Ave. and Queen St. late yesterday when an automobile driven by Harold Baker, 198A Front St., was in collision with a motor car driven by Niles Moranus, of Ottawa. The parties concerned reported the incident to Sergeant Arthur Booth at the police station at which time there was a difference of opinion as to whether Mr. Baker had brought his car to a full stop at the stop street sign. The matter was amicably settled as the damages were slight.

Two inebriates fell into the hands of the law last evening and today were arraigned before H. B. Wilson local Justice of the Peace, and remanded in custody until Monday's session of police court. Otherwise activities were quiet and serene in local police circles as only ten transients sought shelter last night.

AXIS AIRCRAFT

Damage Not Heavy

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security said, however, that damage was not heavy and unofficial reports credited the Royal Air Force with shooting down eight Nazi bombers during the night attacks.

The London Evening Standard said anti-aircraft fire and fighter squadrons had given the Germans the "most devastating reverse" yet suffered by their night raids.

Meanwhile, coastal guns on both sides of the Strait of Dover hurled tons of explosives across the English Channel. The overnight shelling was the longest and heaviest of the battle of Britain. Airmen from bases on both sides took part in the cross-channel duel, which was touched of by the shelling of convoys.

Fires Visible For Miles.

R.A.F. fliers extended their bombings into a new pre-dawn battering of ports along the Nazi-held French coast, lighting the sky with the orange glow of fires visible many miles.

An Air Ministry communique said the R.A.F. also attacked German naval bases and oil supplies in northern and central Germany and air bases in German-occupied territory.

The long-range shelling began yesterday afternoon when British gunners fired on a small Nazi convoy in the English Channel. German guns fired back at the Dover area.

Later, the Germans opened fire on a British convoy slipping through the strait and sent over bombers which dived repeatedly through the anti-aircraft fire at barrage balloons guarding the ships.

British Counter Attack.

The British countered with a bombardment of the German gun positions, then sent over R.A.F. squadrons for a more extensive assault.

The attack on the Rosyth naval base was the heaviest since Oct. 16, 1939. The raid on he base then—six weeks after the declaration of war—was the first attack against British soil from the air.

British reports said the Rosyth raiders were held at great height by heavy anti-aircraft fire, and that two of the Nazi planes were believed hit.

Scotland Heavily Hit

Altogether, attacks on Scotland were said to have been more widespread than usual. Three districts were machine-gunned and bombed. Several small coastal towns were attacked, but casualties were reported as few.

At Liverpool, a church, school, street car and homes were hit.

A government communique described the raids as on a "somewhat larger scale and more widespread than during recent nights," but said casualties were not great.

London, one Midlands town, and "several points . . . on the east coast of Scotland" were listed as bearing the brunt of the raids, although other scattered sections of England and Wales were bombed.

Some Fires Started

The communique said damage in London "was almost entirely confined to private houses and minor damage to some roads." Two air raid shelters were hit and numerous fires were started by incendiary bombs.

One of the three Midlands towns attacked had its longest, hardest raid. At least three were killed and 31 injured.

Incendiary bombs hit a dance hall in a community near London, but the dancers put out the flames and continued the party.

A communique reported 10 British planes lost and 14 German planes shot down yesterday and last night. All 14 were said to have been Messerschmitt fighters, probably carrying one or two bombs each.

VICHY FR. CABINET

Nevertheless, informed sources declared the negotiations would produce beneficial results for France.

—They also said it was possible that an Axis "peace drive"—perhaps to be addressed to President Roosevelt shortly before the United States presidential election Nov. 5—might result from present and impending conversations among Hitler, Petain, Laval the Spanish Dictator Franco and Italian Foreign Minister Ciano.

Laval Meeting Ministers

Laval went to Paris yesterday after an overnight stop with Petain at Tours following the marshal's meeting with Hitler, but official quarters said the vice-premier would be back for the cabinet session.

It was reported in Vichy that Laval was meeting axis ministers in Paris.

(Diplomatic sources in Berne, Switzerland, said Laval began negotiations in Paris with Italian representatives similar to those he held with German envoys prior to Hiler's meeting with Petain.

(The Berne sources reiterated that an agreement was expected whereby the line between occupied and unoccupied France would be pushed northward to the Seine, the French Government would return to Paris, and many French war prisoners would be released.)

Price Not Disclosed

(The price France must pay, these informants said, probably would not appear in the agreement, but they said that price was reputed to be the use by the axis powers, if and when they wish, of French Mediterranean and African bases.

(Informed Swiss sources spoke of the possibility of three-way control of French West Africa—by Germany, Italy and France—with use of French bases to attack Britain's African colonies, as well as to move against those French colonies which support the free French movement headed by Gen. Charles De Gaulle.)

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP)—Informed quarters said today they had nothing new to report relative to Hitler's round of conversations with Vichy French and Spanish representatives.

They said no time is being lost in an attempt to create Hitler's dream of a "new Europe" and that while Britain is "dealing with phantoms" Germany is "getting down to actualities."

U-BOAT OFFICER

over areas adjacent to Toronto as posses of police and military followed "tips" from various sources, George Spear of Long Branch noticed the man in a strange uniform stepping from a boat.

He asked the stranger where he was from and Rabe gave the startling answer: "I'm an escaped prisoner."

"You had better come with me then," Spear said, taking the man's arm.

Spear said he was not sure what to do with the prisoner but started to march him to police headquarters when a car appeared and the driver, James Kerr, stopped and took the two men to the station.

Told of His Escape

On the way Rabe spoke freely and told of his escape. It had been the custom in the hospital for his guards to take turns on duty and while one guard was on duty outside the room, the other slept in a bunk in the room.

"I made up my bed to look as if I was in it. I dressed myself and carried my shoes in my hand. Then I stood behind the door. When the guard outside came in, I was hidden by the door. I slipped out into the corridor and by the time the guard who had been sleeping came out to take up his duty, I was far away."

The German said he had been a surgeon in Essen in peacetime. He was an expert boatman and covered a considerable distance on Lake Ontario before he found he could not watch the stars for his bearings in the fog and decided to turn back.

LABOR DIVIDED

Lewis, speaking by radio from his office in Washington last night, staked his position as president of the C.I.O. on a victory for Willkie Nov. 5. He asserted that he would resign if Mr. Roosevelt won.

Issues Challenge

"Sustain me now, or repudiate me," he dramatically challenged members of the C.I.O., and promptly, in speech and statement, other leaders of that organization began to choose sides in the struggle.

In New York, Allan D. Haywood, National Organizing Director of the C.I.O., announced that he and many of his colleagues had assured Lewis that they "endorse his statement and pledge continued fealty to his leadership."

But in Philadelphia, Alexander McKeown, president, and other high officials of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, a C.I.O. affiliate, telegraphed Mr. Roosevelt a pledge of "continued loyalty and enthusiastic support."

Opinion Divided

Similar divisions of political opinion were evidenced in numerous other comments on the Lewis pronouncement.

One of the first reactions from Democratic campaign ranks came, meanwhile from Daniel J. Robin, President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (American Federation of Labor) and chairman of the National Democratic Labor Bureau.

In a speech in Chicago, Tobin said last night that the head of the C.I.O., coming out for Willkie had aligned himself with those who have "tried to crucify him and crucify me."

Lewis stated at the outset that he was "abandoning my right to speak officially" for the Labor organizations he heads and was speaking, instead, in a personal capacity. The broadcast over three National radio networks was sponscored and paid for by the National Committee of Democrats for Willkie.

Lots of Evidence

In Detroit, signs of divided reaction to the Lewis speech were in evidence among leaders of the United Automobile Workers of America, which claims a membership of 400,000 and is second in size of C.I.O. unions only to the United Mine Workers, which Lewis himself heads.

The reaction of top-ranking mine workers officials was not immediately made known, but in the West Virginia coal fields, at Welch, Jess Acquino, a U.M.W. organizer, said that West Virginia U.M.W. members are "going down the line 100 per cent. for President Roosevelt."

Of the automobile union leaders, Leo Lamotte, a member of the international executive board, said that "To me, John L. Lewis always has been correct until proven wrong. And don't think he's wrong now."

On the other hand, R. J. Thomas, President of the U.A.W., C.I.O., said in a speech at Detroit Thursday night that all he union's members "and their families" would vote for Mr. Roosevelt, and last night a Detroit local of the organization wired Lewis that he had "betrayed the membership."

Terrible, wild, fierce (Medussa) one of the three sisters in fable with snaky hair and of terrific aspect, which turned the beholder to stone.

Van Wyck Mason's newest thriller is as timely as this morning's war headlines. Espionage by those skillfully working to destroy their enemy government. The fable of the GORGONS is supposed to have been based on some fact. We don't know. Were there ever a tribe of war-like women near the amazons? What manner of man destroyed them? Here in our modern world is the story of a war-like woman and a man. The kind of hero we all like to read about. It's fast, exciting reading. CHAPTER XXVI.

When Olive Castle went downstairs to have her "understanding" little talk with her father, she found Mr. Harrison alone in his library, seated in an easy chair reading a scientific magazine. He seemed unaware of her presence until she uttered an abrupt, "Daddy!"

"Yes?" He did not raise his eyes, but his daughter lost no time in coming to the point.

"Will you please tell me what all this is about Jeffrey? He has been telling me some fantastic story about starting to work for you . . . as a beginning salesman! It's positively ridiculous! Starting out that way."

"I don't see why, my dear. He admitted to me that he knew nothing about the business. On that basis, I scarcely could start him out as a department head." Harrison inverted his magazine on his lap, reached for his pipe lying on the table, and lighted it. "I believe it was your idea that I find a job for him wasn't it?"

"Of course it was! Anything to get him away from the notion of settling down in that village office of his father. But I took it for granted that his education would fit him for some sort of an executive position with an office of his own. I didn't suppose he'd be herded in with a lot of twenty-dollar-a-week clerks!"

"Oh, I was about to say I told Michelson to pay his new man thirty a week. That's more than he's worth, of course, but if he sticks we'll jump it as fast as he can take it. He seems rather in earnest about the whole thing."

"It looks to me as if both of you are trying to see how much you can humiliate me! It's unbearable! What are my friends going to think?"

"Nothing, probably. With all the unemployed in the country, they'll hardly miss one deserter from the ranks. After all, I work for a living. It's no disgrace."

"It's nothing less than that to me. I won't endure it, I say! I'm not sure Jeffrey will either, if he finds that he has to depend on his little pay envelope for his spending money. He has expensive tastes and practically nothing with which to back them up."

Harvey Harrison sat up with a jerk. There was a cutting edge to his voice that Olive seldom heard. "Let me tell you something, young woman. I have made two generous marriage settlements on you. It is too late to do anything about it, except to warn you now that there'll never be a third. I have a great admiration for Castle. After dawdling around the way he has, it's greatly to his credit that he wants to attend to business. If you don't respect him, so much the worse for you. It's poor taste, I dare say, to remind you that you had one playboy husband and it didn't work. It might have, if Phil had gone after a job. I neither know nor care."

"You do know!" Olive cried hotly. "Phil was impossible. I was utterly happy with Jeff and always would have been if he'd listened to reason. And now you're doing all you can to separate us. If you couldn't give him a real job, you could have talked to him nicely and told him that he should have more regard for his station in society."

"Don't talk society to me!" her father snapped. "Your empty-headed set seems to think that marriage is some sort of a game with side trips to Reno thrown in. If you have something like that in the back of your mind again, understand once and for all that you're going to do the dirty work. You'll hire the lawyers and pay the bills. No more of it for the old man. I've some regard for my station, too."

For several weeks after that there was an armed truce between the younger Castles. For the most part, the topic of Jeffrey's new job was tacitly ignored. Several times he had spoken admiringly of the corporation that had its agents in almost every civilized country on the globe. He was enjoying his work, too. Olive was waiting for a time to put the situation to a test.

It came one Friday afternoon when there was a suggestion of spring in the air, a day when any lover of the outdoors would be longing for freedom. Dressed in a becoming sports costume, Mrs. Castle appeared in the lobby of the Harrison Products office and smilingly inquired of the information clerk where she could find the sales department. Quite overcome by the presence of the "old man's" daughter, the abashed youth gave her a floor and room number, forgetful, until she had vanished leaving a faint odor of perfume behind her, that he should have offered her a guide.

When Olive reached her goal, she paused to locate the number and gave a little smile of satisfaction when she saw the name H. L. Michelson on the door's ground-glass panel. She opened it and looked in. Evidently it was an outer room, for its only occupant was a girl busy at a typewriter.

She rose to her feet as soon as she saw the newcomer. "Good morning. Did you wish to see Mr. Michelson?"

"Yes, please. If he is not too busy."

The girl was telling herself that it was a cinch he wouldn't be too busy, but what she said aloud was: "Who shall I say is calling, please?"

"Mrs. Jeffrey Castle."

Olive had pictured the general sales manager as a wizened elderly gentleman with sharp features, who talked in terms of discounts. She was rather startled when she was ushered into the presence of a huge man with a smiling florid face, who hoisted himself from between the arms of his swivel chair with some effort. "How do you do, Mrs. Castle?" he boomed hospitably. "This is an unexpected pleasure, I'm sure." He was appraising her with complete approval.

"Do sit down, Mr. Michelson," she smiled. "I shan't take more than a minute. I know that you are frightfully busy."

"Not at all, Mrs. Castle. Is there something I can do for you?"

"Just a little bit of a favor," she explained coaxingly.

"It is granted in advance, I assure you."

"That's sweet. It's so beautiful out this afternoon that I have arranged for a foursome of golf at the country club. But I'll simply have to borrow my husband. Do you mind?"

"Oh, I see." Mr Michelson was slightly taken aback. "Why, I should think we can let you have him."

"You ARE a nice man! Now if you'll tell me where I can find him, I won't bother you another second Thank you so much."

"I was just going out to the main room," he explained. "If you will make yourself comfortable here I'll ask Mr. Castle to come over."

"Shan't I go with you? I'm rather curious to see where my husband does the heavy brain work he tells me about."

"He will be here in a minute." And Michelson went out hurriedly without making any answer to the suggestion, closing the door behind him. Olive dropped into his chair behind the desk with an irritated air.

Jeffrey appeared almost at once. He was in his shirt sleeves, his vest was unbuttoned and he had a pencil behind one ear. "Hello!" he said in mild surprise, closing the door. "What's up?"

"Get your things. You're going out with me," his wife directed briefly.

"Going out? What's happened? Anything wrong?"

"Nothing serious. You're going out to the country club to fill in a foursome. Please hurry. We haven't any too much time."

"But this is Friday, isn't it?" Jeffrey looked puzzled.

"What of it?"

"Saturday's my half holiday. Not Friday."

"Don't always be tiresome. It's all right with your boss. You have his permission."

This brought a steady stare from Jeffrey's brown eyes. "Let's get this straight," he suggested quietly. "Are you telling me that you came down here to tell Michelson you were taking me golfing?"

"Yes? Why?"

"Well, it was kind of you. But naturally I'm not going. What would he think of me . . . not to mention the other guys here? No, thanks."

"Consideration for me comes last all the time now, doesn't it? You don't worry about what anybody thinks of me. Are you coming? It's the last time."

"Is the car out front? I'll take you down."

"I'd much rather you didn't." She hurried out leaving him standing where he was.

Jeffrey followed more slowly, without glancing in the direction of the stenographer who was staring curiously.

Out in the hall he met Michelson returning. "Hope you have a nice game, Castle. I wouldn't mind going eighteen holes this afternoon myself."

"Funny thing," Jeff returned in a flat voice. "Mrs. Castle got her dates mixed. Thought this was Saturday. Good joke, wasn't it?"

CHAPTER XXVII.

With the advent of spring, life seemed to get back more nearly into its old cycles for Audrey Swan. Jim Sweet had taken over the cultivation of the farm in capable fashion, but Miss Audrey was his "boss" and was to be consulted about all arrangements, whether she was familiar with them or not. The coming of mild weather also brought a number of riding pupils, and the loose boxes in the large barn opened its doors to arriving equine boarders. Robert, the former stable boy, was re-employed and once more there were horses grazing in the big pasture and taking their turns at exercising on the track.

In the house, Martha Swan went about her usual tasks. There was the spring house cleaning to supervise and her flower garden to be put in order with the aid of faithful Julia.

Victor Quinn was still a frequent and welcome visitor. If there were no business matters to furnish an excuse he came anyway, having established himself as a member of the family. Audrey was always glad to see him when he came. And showed it. She turned to him naturally for advice in every matter that bothered her and he was conscious that they were growing closer as the time passed.

He would have felt highly encouraged had he known how lonely Audrey was on one occasion when business took him away for a matter of two weeks. She was rather startled at the discovery, herself, and it was surprisingly difficult not to reveal in an impulsive fashion her pleasure at his return.

"I believe you're really glad to see me," he had teased when they met.

"What makes you think so?" she smiled.

"Your nose told me."

"You mustn't believe in signs."

So matters stood one June morning when Audrey was called to the telephone and heard: "Audrey? This is Mrs. Castle speaking. How are you?"

"Why . . . why, I'm quite well, thank you."

"The Judge happened to find out yesterday that tomorrow is Mr. Quinn's birthday. I thought it might be nice if we had him out for dinner in honor of the occasion, and I want very much to have you as our other guest. Now please don't refuse, my dear. Of course I know that you have not been going out, but this is not a social affair . . . just the four of us. Another young person for Victor, you know."

Audrey was thinking swiftly and reaching a conclusion before Mrs. Castle had finished. It would not be fair to Vic to refuse. "I shall be very glad to come," she answered.

"Thank you, my dear. I will send Dean for you about seven-thirty. And, if you don't mind, I shall not tell Victor. It will be a little surprise. Thank you so much. Goodby."

To Audrey it seemed a long time since she had gone out in the evening. And tonight there would be no strangers to meet—unless it were Mrs. Castle.

When the chauffeur deposited the one woman guest at the front door of the big house, it developed that Victor had not yet arrived, and Audrey experienced something of a shock when Mrs. Castle accompanied her up to the dressing room near the head of the stairs.

The older woman had changed perceptibly. She seemed much smaller and there was almost a suggestion of frailty. That, of course, could have been due to ill health. Judge Castle had spoken of that. But there was a more subtle change. a touch of wistfulness in her quiet voice. And it showed in her eyes when she remarked: "I am so glad you could come, Audrey. The Judge and I live here so quietly that it seems delightful to have young people in the house again. We have both become very fond of Victor."

Audrey understood then. It was Jeff. His mother had not seen him since he went back to the city to stay and she was denied any hope of his return.

Victor was in the drawing-room chatting with the Judge when Audrey appeared in the doorway with Mrs. Castle. Blank amazement and pleasure were in his face as he hurried forward and Audrey felt a trifle self-conscious as she tried to greet him lightly. "Many happy returns of the day, Mr. Quinn."

Victor recovered sufficiently to greet his hostess properly. "I didn't know it was a party!" he exclaimed boyishly. "This is great! I haven't had a birthday party since I was a little shaver."

"This is no party at all," Mrs. Castle smiled. "It's only a little family dinner. And I believe it is served."

That explanation lingered oddly in Audrey's mind as Judge Castle seated her while Victor was performing the same courtesy for his hostess. Only four places set at the square table. Candles at each corner giving a subdued light, touching the dull polish on the table top, the rich but simple service. A maid waited on the guests tonight. The butler was not in evidence. It WAS a family dinner.

After a quiet period of conversation in the Judge's library afterwards, the two guests took their departure with Victor driving Audrey home in his car. It was Victor who voiced the thought that was uppermost in both their minds when they found themselves alone. "You know, Audrey, there was something rather pathetic about our little party, pleasant as it was."

"I know," she agreed in a low voice. "They were both trying to be gallant, but they're lonely."

"Quite different from our last dinner there. It will be a year next week."

"You thought of it, too?"

"Rather. It was a very important night for me. I met a Miss Swan there and I've never been able to get her out of my mind since."

Audrey laughed softly as she said: "I don't wonder, Mr. Quinn. She's been a pretty constant bother to you, I'd say. But since you've been so uncomplaining about it all, Miss Swan is going to ask you to come in for a few minutes. After our formal evening I think we might have a wee drop to your health. Can you take it?"

"What do you think?" Vic chuckled happily as he brought the car to a stop on the drive.

A few moments later they were standing at the sideboard. A little feeling of constraint came over them as they hesitated with their glasses poised. The atmosphere seemed changed with a sudden change in their relationship. Victor felt it keenly. He knew that in some way they were closer than ever before. There was a gentleness in Audrey's eyes when she lifted them to his that gave him a new thrill of happiness. "Many happy returns, Vic."

"Thank you, Audrey. If you don't mind, I'm going to toast this particular birthday . . . the happiest I have ever known."

They drank, and Victor set his glass down with a sigh. "I must be on my way," he said regretfully. "It's all been very beautiful but I'm afraid it's late." Audrey followed him into the hall without speaking.

Before saying good night, Victor paused for a last look at the slim white figure in the dim glow of the hall lamp. Never had Audrey appeared so beautiful in his eyes, so altogether desirable. "Tell me something," he demanded in a low impetuous tone, "have I . . . I'm not slipping, am I?"

With a swift movement he caught her nearest hand and pressed it softly to his lips. As if unable to trust himself, he turned without a word and left her standing there.

He was whistling happily when he let himself in his own front door and was about to extinguish the lamp on the table when he caught sight of a bit of paper. A note, in his landlady's precise handwriting.

"Mr. Quinn,

"Dear sir, the long distance wants you. Even if it is late when you get in she says.

"Respectfully,

"Mrs. Caroline Asher."

In a few moments a familiar voice came to his ear. "That you, Vic? Hope I didn't get you out of bed."

"No. You caught me getting in. What's up? Anything amiss?"

"Plenty. Vic, I've got to see you, and under the circumstances I can't very well come down. Can you get up here by tomorrow evening? Or I'll meet you part way, if you'd rather."

"I was planning to come up in the next day or so. I can make it tomorrow. Where shall I find you?"

"Made it the bar of the Adams. About six. I'll be hanging around."

"Jeff, you're all right?"

"Sure. A trifle sloppy. Just another case of the well-known jam. Thanks a lot, old man. Be seein' you."

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Oct. 28 (AP).—Ten divisions of perhaps 200,000 Italian troops were reported driving into Greece today all along the Albanian frontier in an attack timed with Italian naval blows at the Greek island of Corfu.

Greek troops battled with the invading motorized forces in the border mountain passes.

Details of the naval action at Corfu, off the Greek-Albanian coast, were not known immediately but observers here wondered whether British naval units, backing up Britain's guarantee of Greek independence, had reached the scene.

The reported firing, however, might have been between Italian warships and Greek shore batteries

Great Britain to Honor 'Pledge of Aid' to Greece

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 28—(CP Cable)—Britain's pledge of full assistance to the Greeks in their fight against invasion was renewed today in messages by King George VI to King George II, and by Prime Minister Churchill to Premier Metaxas.

The text of the messages was not made available immediately but official circles stated Mr. Churchill's message was "cordial and positive."'

LONDON, Oct. 28 (CP).—Britain will honor her guarantee to Greece, it was announced officially here today a few hours after Italian troops crossed the Greek frontier.

Premier John Metaxas appealed to the British Government early this morning through Sir Michael Palairet, the British Minister in Athens, for assistance in repelling the invasion of Italian forces numbering 200,000 men, who struck from Albanian bases.

According to official sources here, an Italian note to Greece charged systematic violation of neutrality and demanded the right to occupy unspecified points as a guarantee of neutrality and Italian security in the Mediterranean.

Confident of Turkey.

The note also charged that Greece was permitting Britain to construct air bases on Greek territory and the British fleet to use her territorial waters.

Internment Camp Escapers Recaptured

Calgary, Oct. 28 (CP)—Plans for the capture of two German aliens who escaped from a Prairie internment camp worked perfectly.

The men, Harold Herman Laage and Richard Engel, were captured at a camp outpost late Sunday night.

"The capture took place as designed," said Major H. O. Rocke, of Military District No. 13, Calgary. "The men walked right into our arms."

Laage and his companion escaped last Thursday afternoon while outside the camp with a working party.

Major Rocke said that the men were taken at an outpost, part of the broad scheme camp authorities had laid out to deal with escapes.

The post is about five miles from the main camp. Guards were stationed there, and when the men walked up late last night they were challenged by the sentries.

They submitted to arrest without resistance, and were returned to the camp.

British Captain Leads Charmed Life Amid Many Hazards of Two Wars

By JOHN CHANDLER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Baltimore, Oct. 28 —(AP)— Capt. William Herbert Harland doesn't look like a man who could survive two submarine attacks, a magnetic mine, an airplane bombing and two severe wounds in two wars.

But the 135-pound Englishman has been weathering such hazards for 25 years.

When, last month, he pulled his freighter through an attack by a German bombing plane, he handled the situation with the aplomb which has long made the folks back in Redcar, Yorkshire, proud of their scrappy, 48-year-old fellow townsman.

Capt. Harland's game of tag with death began in the British infantry in France during the First Great War. At the second Battle of Ypres Harland, then 22, received a knee wound. No sooner had he returned to action than he stopped a bullet that permanently shortened his left arm three inches. Harland then joined the naval auxiliary.

He was aboard the British munitions freighter John Henry Barry when a German torpedo sank her in the Mediterranean in

Free Passage for Fascist Troops Across Greece Also Refused

Athens, Oct. 28 (AP)—Greece fought with her army today against invading Italian forces and announced officially that Great Britain is sending her "unlimited support."

Some 12 hours after the Italians had attacked by land and air, the Government issued this communique:—

"Premier Metaxas conferred early this morning with the British Minister, who told him that Greece in her fight against Italy would have the unreserved support of England to the fullest extent. British support will be unlimited.

Confers With Turkey

"Metaxas also conferred with the Turkish Minister to Athens and immediately afterwards communicated by telephone with the Greek Minister in Ankara. The Premier later communicated by telephone with the President of the Turkish Republic, Inonu."

The conversations with the highest authority in Turkey were taken as evidence that Premier Metaxas is making every effort to bring the Turks in on his side.

Turkey and Britain have a mutual Assistance Pact, but the Turks are not directly bound to go to the aid of Greece.

The Greeks elected to fight rather than bow to Italian demands for Greek territory and free passage for Italian troops.

The British fleet was reported to have made contact with the Italian fleet somewhere in Greek seas during the morning, but there was no announcement of the result.

By early afternoon Athens had had six air raid alarms and Italian bombers had passed over the ancient capital four times, but no bombs were dropped here.

The Athens airport, 12 miles away and the port, about four miles from the city, were raided. The Greeks said one hangar was damaged slightly. Port facilities and buildings also were damaged by 15 planes at Patras, the port, with four killed and 17 injured.

Enthusiastic Parades

While Athens' anti-aircraft guns barked spasmodically, the people of the capital marched either toward the front or in enthusiastic parades in the streets.

Immediately after the announcement that the nation was at war, crowds destroyed the offices of the Italian Air and Steamship Lines and ripped down Italian flags. They marched past the Italian legation, but did not harm it.

The King and Premier Metaxas were cheered by crowds as they drove through the streets. Later the Premier conferred with Ministers from Britain, Turkey and Yugoslavia.

Street crowds demonstrated with Greek, British and Turkish flags and shouted: "Down with Italy."

MERCHANT SHIP AND DESTROYER COLLIDE AT SEA

Vessel Acquired From Britain to Replace Destroyer Fraser Lost at Bordeaux

COMMANDER GOES DOWN

Both Ships Running Without Lights but Details of Collision Lacking — 45 Rescued

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—(CP) — The Canadian Destroyer Margaree lies at the bottom of the Atlantic ocean —sunk in a wartime collision at sea after escaping destruction from enemy bombers while being prepared for service in the dock of London.

Missing and believed lost with this recent addition to Canada's expanded destroyer fleet are 140 officers and men, including her brilliant, youthful officer commanding. Thirty-one others, rescued by the merchant vessel whose steel hull sank their ship, are now en route to Canada.

The Margaree was acquired from Britain to replace the destroyer Fraser, by strange coincidence also the victim of a collision. Many of the men aboard the Margaree when she went down were survivors of the Fraser disaster which cost the lives of 45 Canadian naval men off Bordeaux, France, last June.

Running Without Lights.

Sinking of the Margaree occurred in the eerie blackness of night over the North Atlantic. Both the destroyer and the big merchant ship

German Planes Attack Empress of Britain and Set Fire to Vessel

By LOUIS HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 28 (CP).—The Empress of Britain, crack Canadian luxury liner blew up and sank during salvage operations after a bombing attack by a lone Nazi plane Saturday which fired the giant vessel from bow to stern.

British warships rescued 598 of the 643 persons on board after they had abandoned the ship in lifeboats, some of which were rendered useless by fire from incendiary bombs.

The liner was bombed 150 miles off Ireland. The raider disappeared and then returned to drop more bombs, including the incendiary type.

Under Charter To Admiralty.

The 42,348-ton flagship of the Canadian Pacific Line was under charter to the Admiralty. Its loss was announced in a joint Admiralty-War Office communique.

The ship's surgeon is believed to have been the only Canadian among the crew. He is Dr. Edward Delorme of Hamilton, Ont., who joined the liner in Canada last year. He is thought to have landed with four nurses at an Irish port yesterday.

Dr. Delorme received his M.D. from University of Toronto and was an interne at the Toronto General Hospital.

It was not known immediately if any Canadians were among the passengers.

Wants Army Units Moved Into Areas Visited by Foe Bombers

London, Oct. 28 —(CP)— The Daily Mail urged editorially today that British army units be moved into areas heavily and regularly hit by German bombers to buttress overworked air raid wardens and firemen.

To the War Office's reported statement that more men cannot be spared because it would interrupt training, The Daily Mail replied: "Bunkum."

"Out of all the enlisted men under arms here there are at least 500,000 fully trained, ready for action and likely to get stale from the monotony," the paper said.

Athens, Oct. 28—(AP)—Informed quarters said tonight that the British Mediterranean fleet has occupied the strategic Greek island of Crete and a small island with an airdrome off Corfu.

A fierce naval battle, presumably between British and Italian ships, was reported fought off Corfu.

Athens, Oct. 28—(AP)—Authoritative neutral military sources said tonight they had information that Turkish troops have moved into Thrace and eastern Greece.

There was no immediate confirmation of this available from the Turkish legation here.

Overnight Attacks 'Much Less' Severe Than in Past Week

Casualties Almost Confined to One Town in Northwest England

London, Oct. 28.—(CP)—German planes were reported over the west of England, the Industrial Midlands, the east coast and South Wales in daylight raids today after a series of widespread raids during the night.

Bombers stabbed at London in the first grey light of dawn, only a short time after the all-clear ended the 51st consecutive series of night raids on the British capital. The first daylight alarm was brief, however.

The overnight air attacks on London were "much less" severe than on the previous night, the government said, adding that "the main attacks, which were made in the earlier hours of darkness, were on northwest England and the Midlands."

Royal Air Force planes, meanwhile attacked communications in western Germany during the night, the Air Ministry reported, as well as oil targets in central and northern Germany and two "invasion ports."

The Merseyside section of Liverpool and a Midlands town were reported to have been hardest hit in the night raiding on England. Casualties in these places, however, were said to have been "not numerous."

In other parts of the country, the government said, damage was "limited mainly to houses . . . and casualties were almost confined to one town in northwest England where some people were killed and others injured."

In London there were long lulls between the attacks when anti-aircraft guns and night fighter planes held back the raiders. After midnight the city lay in comparative quiet.

Florence, Italy, Oct. 28 (AP)—Hitler and Mussolini conferred nearly three hours today in the first session of a meeting staged as Italy took what were claimed to be "urgent measures required to face the danger of the situation" in Greece.

The two Axis leaders began their session at 11.30 a.m. and emerged at 1.50 p.m. for luncheon with their foreign ministers, Ribbentrop and Ciano, and others.

Mrs. Grace Robertson Rushes Into Flame-Filled Bedroom to Carry Child to Safety

LOSS IS $6,000

Plunging through a flame-filled bedroom of her blazing farm home on the Rednersville Bay Front road, two miles southwest of the city shortly before noon Saturday, Mrs. Grace Robertson, wife of John L. Robertson, saved her three-year-old daughter from possible death a few minutes before fire enveloped the room. Flames were sweeping around the bed when the mother dashed upstairs to the rescue of her child.

Mrs. Robertson was in the garage some distance from her home, when she saw flames shooting from the upper part of the house. Dense clouds of smoke were pouring from windows and roof as she raced to the flaming structure and succeeded in bringing her baby daughter to safety.

WEEKEND PASSES GIVEN TRAINEES

Week-end passes will be the order of the day for some 30,000 trainees now undergoing one month's military training across Canada, according to an announcement made by the Department of National Defence last Friday.

The order issued in the different training centres follows:

"Recruits may be granted week-end passes. Passes must not be for more than a greater period than from 12 noon Saturday, until 10 p.m. Sunday."

ONLY ONE ALARM DURING WEEKEND

All was comparatively quiet at the local fire department over the week-end, with only one alarm, that for a minor blaze, being answered. On Saturday afternoon, a few mischievous lads playing in Coleman Flats craved excitment and apparently set the dry grass ablaze. With the aid of a few cans of water, however, firemen soon had the flames extinguished.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT FOXBORO CHURCH

Splendid congregations marked the anniversary services of the Foxboro United Church held in Foxboro on Sunday. Rev. H. L. Morrison B.A., B.D., pastor of the United Church at Tweed conducted the services, both morning and evening.

Special music was rendered by the choir for both services, with Mr. W. E. Tummon singing a solo, "There's Room in God's Love," while the anthem for the morning service was "Come Ye that Love the Lord."

For the evening service the anthems were "Kingdom and Thrones" and "Behold, God is My Helper," while the ladies' quartette rendered "The Cross Shall be My Guide."

PERMIT NOT NEEDED FOR AN AIR GUN

Inquiries regarding the status of air guns and pistols relative to the Defence of Canada Regulations have been sought through the office of the Inspector of Provincial Police here. Inspector Frank Gardner today announced official status of such guns after convening with the Provincial Police headquarters in Toronto. "Air rifles do not come within the provisions of the Defence of Canada Regulations regarding firearms. Permits are not required for the purchase or sale of air guns, except as required by section 126 of the Canadian Criminal Code" Inspector Gardner explained to the Ontario Intelligencer here today.

DOG HIT BY CAR RECEIVES KIND CARE

Humanitarian attributes were exemplified by P. C. MacLaurin, East Dundas St., over the week-end when Mr. MacLaurin harbored and cared for an injured bull terrier pup, which had been abandoned on his verandah. Apparently struck by a passing motor car the injured canine crawled to the home of Mr. MacLaurin, where it was found lying on the verandah early yesterday. Mr. MacLaurin rolled the injured dog in a blanket and fed it, later notifying Thos. Thorne, custodian of the city dog pound. Mr. Thorne cared for the animal at the dog pound and later discovered the animal belonged to A. E. Randle, 93 Lingham St. It is believed the dog was struck by a passing motor car, sustaining an injured back.

Trenton, October 28. — Military manoeuvres and tactical schemes were worked out by the officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Second Battalion, Sunday. Approximately thirty-five officers from Picton, Wellington, Bancroft, Madoc, Tweed and Trenton, were present for the manoeuvres conducted by Lt.-Col. B. C. Donnan, E.D., Officer Commanding the Regiment and Major Angus Mowat, Second-in-Command.

In the morning, the officers of the headquarters company and non-commissioned officers tried their first military test for their respective offices. Later the group journeyed to the old ammunition factory site where a display of field craft was put on, under Lt. Farley Mowat, Sgt.-Major McCoy and Sgt. Major Weeks. Machine guns, rifles and blank ammunition were used during the attacks.

In the afternoon, the officers of the regiment assembled at the Armouries for the tactical schemes. They were first taken to the field engineering area of the headquarters company where they examined the trench digging and defences thrown up by the soldiers during the past two weeks.

Later the officers returned to the Trenton Armouries where Major Mowat gave instruction on field engineering with the use of a sand table. The various forms of trenches, and traps were constructed by the Major in the sand for the demonstration.

Tactical schemes and manoeuvres were worked out on a canvas model of Trenton area that was recently constructed by Lt. Mowat, who conducted the schemes. The officers worked out many phases of military manoeuvres on the canvas model throughout the afternoon and evening.

PONTIFICAL MASS IS CELEBRATED BY ARCHBISHOP

Most. Rev. M. J. O'Brien of Kingston Blessed Recent Improvements Made at St. Michael's Church

WELCOME EXTENDED

The parish of St. Michael the Archangel was signally honored on Sunday, the Feast of Christ the King, when His Grace, Most Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., LL.D., celebrated Pontifical High Mass in the parish church and blessed the recently completed improvements, which have been made in the church interior.

The beauty of the sanctuary enhanced with Autumn flowers and brilliant with altar lights, was never more pronounced and formed a fitting background for the grandeur of Pontifical Mass. The music of the Mass was beautifully rendered by the choir under the direction of Mrs. James Grant, with Miss Dorothy Grant presiding at the organ.

Archbishop M. J. O'Brien, Kingston, who celebrated Pontifical Mass at St. Michael's yesterday.

St. Michael's Girl Guides and Boy Scouts carrying their flags and standards marched in procession, while the Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus formed a guard of honor to the Archbishop. A large congregation attended this service.

Following the blessing of the new improvements, His Grace celebrated Pontifical Mass, the Assistant Priest being Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., M.C., Assis. Deacons, Rev. G. T. Martin, P.P., Deseronto, and Rev. C. K. Baker; Deacon of the Mass, Very Rev. Dean E. M. Leacy, P.P., Napanee; Sub Deacon of the Mass, Rev. J. J. Collins; Master of Ceremonies, Rev. A. J. Welsh, Kingston; Second Master of Ceremonies, Edward Buckley; Thurifer, Charles Frawley; Cross Bearer, Harry MacDougall; Acolytes, Francis Buckley, Harry Taylor; Mitre Bearer, Robert Wilson; Crozier Bearer, Robert Flurey; Book Bearer, Andrew Walsh; Candle Bearer, William Lynch; Torch Bearers, Jack Scanlan, John Funnell, Robert Bunton, Basil Donoghue, Jerry Moher, Ford Doran; Sacristan, Donald Barrett; Train Bearer, Leo Callaghan. Flight - Lieutenant Dean O'Reilly, Trenton, was also present.

Extend Greetings

Monsignor Nicholson, extending a warm welcome to His Grace, stated that this day was a golden one in the annals of the parish. Voicing the heartfelt sentiments of every soul claiming allegiance to the Church of St. Michael the Archangel he expressed the feelings of gratitude which all experienced for the paternal kindness of their dearly loved Archbishop.

He related that some time ago he had begged His Grace to come in person to bless the recent embellishments which bring the perfection of a gleaming jewel to the beauty of the church. Not only had His Grace assented but out of the depths of his goodness he had bestowed an unique honor on the parish. He promised to celebrate Pontifical High Mass, here, on the great Feast of Christ the King.

As a consequence of this signal favour the parish church was this day the scene of a wonderful pageant of liturgical glory rarely witnessed outside the precincts of the Cathedral. As long as the stately tower of St. Michael rears its head to the heavens where reigns Christ the King the remembrance of this glorious day will reign in our grateful hearts.

Archbishop O'Brien

His Grace, Archbishop O'Brien said that it was with a great deal of pleasure he had come on the invitation of Monsignor Nicholson to dedicate the improvements, that had recently been made in the church by Mr. John McCarthy, because the gift of Mr. McCarthy was so substantial to the House of God, and that he had made this a handsome donation during his lifetime. His Grace exprssed the hope, that Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy would experience as much pleasure from the girt as the parish at large does and thanked both for their generosity.

Addressing the congregation on the solemn Feast of the day, which is the Feast of Christ the King, the Archbishop referred to the fact, that Christ had been foretold in the prophecies of the Old Testament as a coming King who would rule over His people. It will be a rule of love and spirituality and of His Kingdom there will be no end.

Christ the King

The Jews had become so wordly that they interpreted the prophecies as foretelling, that Christ would come as a temporal King and because His Kingdom was a spiritual kingdom the same Jews refused to acknowledge Him even to this day. The angels announced the coming of Christ also as ruling over a spiritual kingdom and this has ever been the teaching of the Catholic Church.

While the Kingship of Christ and the supremacy of the Ten Commandments as the law of Christ have ever been preached in the Church nevertheless man needs to have his relationship with Almighty God clearly defined from time to time. To bring out man's dependence on God and his obligation to obedience a special solemn Feast was established by the late Pope Pius XI in 1925. The celebration of the Feast is to be the last Sunday of October each year. Because of this solemnity the Archbishop celebrated Pontifical High Mass here, yesterday.

Belleville Hunter Gets Three Pheasants In Short Order

Gunshots roared over the marshes and in the woods of South Marysburg Township on Friday and Saturday during the official two-day pheasant shoot authorized by the Department of Game and Fisheries, but none of the lads came back straining under the weight of heavy "bags", according to reports today from the hunters.

However, it remained for a Belleville hunter, Arthur Newman, despite the fact that the township fathers charged the "outsiders" two dollars for their licence and the home county boys but twenty-five cents for the same slip of paper, to grab off the record for the shoot.

Arthur had but been in the "jungle" but a few minutes when two handsome cock pheasants, a bit disdainful perhaps of the shooting prowess of Belleville's No. 1 hunter, made the fatal error of taking off practically beneath his nose. Two shots blazed, and two birds fluttered to the ground.

"Fifteen minutes after the starting whistle, two down and one to go," chuckled the happy Arthur to himself. Striding through the woods inwardly congratulating himself on his good fortune, he was startled by another whirr of wings. And the pheasant squad here made the third error of the day. Another cock ruffled its wings and took off like a bullet for the haven of the marshlands. Again Arthur's gun blazed, and he had his quota for the day.

Generally speaking, the shoot, while not productive of many limit bags, was successful, according to Game Warden Herbert McCabe. The boys came back with one and two birds each, and would have had more had the majority of them taken the trouble to bring dogs along.

"The marshes were as dry as a bone," Inspector McCabe said, "and this provided a refuge for the birds after they had been flushed. The long reeds and swampy growth proved perfect hiding places for them. However, everyone appeared to be satisfied, and a highlight of the shoot was the fact that there were no accidents, or illegal hunting."

ARMS ONLY GUARANTEE

Dublin, Oct. 28—(CP) — Prime Minister Eamon De Valera told local security volunteers at Blackrock Sunday that the Eire government is doing all in its power to obtain arms and armaments.

"We are at peace and we wish well to all people," he said, "but as I have often said before, the fact that we wish to remain at peace is not sufficient to guarantee our peace."

Fine Artistry Displayed by Toronto Band in Concert at Tabernacle Church

Resplendent in the colorful kilted uniform of the Toronto Scottish Regiment, members of the former Metropolitan Silver Band, of Toronto, under the baton of W. O. Alfred Pierce, gave music lovers of the city a rare treat in Tabernacle United Church Saturday night.

Said to be one of the finest church bands in Canada, the organization lived up to its reputation. The fine ensemble work exemplified in a variable program and the individual artistry of its members in instrumental numbers, left no doubt in the minds of those who listened, that the band is one of the best to perform in this district.

Perfectly balanced, yet oddly enough at least to the layman, without benefit of woodwind, the band drew rounds of applause with its renditions of "Famous Fragments," the difficult yet stirring overture "Light Cavalry" and the grand selection "Thoughts From the Masters."

The intermezzo "Wedding of the Rose." proved a melodic number replete with delightful chording, while the ever-popular Goldman's "On the Mall" a favorite number with Belleville band lovers, with the band humming the tuneful trio, was one of the highlights of the concert.

"Minstrel Melodies" brought back memories of those grand old tunes of long ago, and the band arrangement as played by the Toronto Scottish, was one of the best heard here in some time. The versatility of the musicians, was exemplified in the hymn tune "Castle Harbour." Effects of a mighty organ were brought out in startling realism in this number and the musicians deserved the long acclaim given them.

With every member an accomplished musician, it remained for Bandsmen Dowding, Weir and Richmond to demonstrate in a melodic manner the individual abilities of the band. "Bells in the Valley," a chimes solo by the former, "The Winning Spurt," a trombone number by Bandsman Richmond and "Memories" by Cornet'st D. Weir were tunefully played and enthusiastically received.

Reg. Hinchey Composition Played

Last, but by no means least, the arrangement of "There'll Always be an England," by E. Reg. Hinchey, Belleville' gift to the composing and arranging world, and which Mr. Hinchey conducted, stirred the blood of everyone present. The band rose to musical heights in this number, inasmuch as they had not seen the score prior to their arrival in Belleville.

Another Belleville part of the entertainment was the fine selection "Boys of the Old Brigade" and an encore by the Belleville Male Quartette composed of Messrs. Moorman, Evers, Howard and Bankier. Mr. Bankier later gave two solos, "The Trumpeter" and "The Road that Leads to You" in fine voice. All numbers received the enthusiastic acclaim of the audience.

The Rev. D. T. McClintock, minister of the church, offered prayer prior to the concert. Lieut. Fred Jobson, conductor of the Belleville Municipal Band, acted as chairman in his usual capable manner. Appreciation of Belleville bandsmen was suitably expressed by Mr. Fred Wardle.

The band assisted in the anniversary services of the church held on Sunday. In the afternoon they gave a sacred concert in Picton United Church and repeated the performance at Tabernacle Church Sunday night.

October shipments from St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., for the air raid victims in Britain were very numerous namely 45 woollen sweaters, 6 skirts, one pair slippers, two pairs of gloves, five pairs bloomers, 14 woollen suits, 8 combinations, 7 wool blankets, 9 quilts, 3 pairs pyjamas, 10 wool vests, 12 night gowns, 2 windbreakers, 8 girls' wool coats, 4 pillow slips, 1 blouse, 7 pair children's panties, 14 children's slips, 4 children's dresses, 1 child's woollen dress, one child's wool sweater, 1 pair child's socks.

These have all been sent to the bombed districts in Great Britain. More articles of clothing are to be sent to this work.

The following letter sent to headquarters at Hamilton was forwarded to Belleville to the officers of St. Julien chapter on account of the fine service done by that chapter in war work relief in Britain.

"Women's Voluntary Services

PRESENT DAYS OFFER CHALLENGE

'Church Must Accept Responsibilities' Says Frank Inrig Speaking at Anniversary Services of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church

"We acknowledge with thanks and praise the work of the noble men and women who have gone before but on this anniversary occasion, it is not our purpose simply to glory in the past but to take off our coats with determination and accept the responsibilities of the present and the future," declared Mr. Frank Inrig of Toronto, President of the Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec in a challenging anniversary address to a large congregation in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Sunday morning.

"We have got to take off our coats and go to work with wisdom, understanding fully the times in which we are living. These days are offering a challenge to the Christian church such as she has never met before. These are times of destruction and the work of the Christian Church is being openly despised, she is being trodden down and her message being thrust aside.

Russia a Godless Race

"In Russia this has been going on for some time and Russia is now a Godless race. The same thing applies to Germany. The Germans admit that the only two things standing between their ambitions are the Jews and the Christian Church. Italy is dreaming of re-establishing the old Roman Empire. The Italians drove out the missionaries from conquered Ethiopia. In Japan twenty-six Canadian missionaries have recently had to leave.

"We hear so much these days about the new social order that is to arise out of the present chaos. There can be no worth-while social order unless there is a regeneration and newness of life in Jesus Christ," the speaker charged. "That should be the message of the church today. All our churches, all our church departments and all that we have must be brought to bear to bring home this message to men and women. Unless men are born from above in partnership with Jesus Christ we can never hope to bring about a new social order of lasting peace and fellowship for all mankind."

Addresses Sunday School

Mr. Inrig addressed the Sunday School in the afternoon and showed the young folk moving pictures of missionary work in India. Additional pictures, all in natural color were shown at the evening service. Speaking on a subject close to his heart Mr. Inrig told of the wonderful work being accomplished among the Telegus in India by Canadian Baptist missionaries.

Special music was rendered by the choir during the day. At the morning service Miss Muriel Jobson was heard in a soprano solo and Mr. John W. Deacon sang during the evening service. The minister, Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead, was in charge of both services.

Flagship of Fleet Only Boat Not Yet In Winter Quarters

With the exception of "Commodore" Al. Wickerson's "Cricket" flagship of the "Waterfront Mosquito Fleet" all the boats in the harbor have been hauled into winter quarters, or pulled up on the slips to await another Spring opening.

The smiling "Commodore" stated yesterday that his crew had changed the blue of the nautical uniform for the khaki of the army and were reverting back to landlubber type, hence the fact that the saucy "Cricket" is still washing her keel in the harbor waters.

However, the Commodore remarked: "The speed of the 'Cricket' is well-known in these parts, and if the government desires to take her over to be used as a submarine chaser, it's alright with me."

Police Blotter

The confusion of opposite styles of the driving and parking of motor vehicles confused a member of the R.C.A.F., who arrived here under the Empire Training Scheme, when he parked his automobile in Belleville Saturday night. The English-born Airman reported to police he had parked his automobile on Front Street, but the vehicle was missing when he returned. Later city police officers found the vehicle parked on East Bridge Street. The English Airman looked about and remarked: "I guess this is where I parked it in the first place, but you see, old fellow, over home we drive on the lefthand side of the road and I suppose the righthand driving is what confused me," explained the English youth as he thanked the constables for their assistance and drove happily away.

Car Found Abandoned

Samuel Kirkey, 105 Yeomans Street, also reported the theft of his motor car on Saturday night. The vehicle was left on Front Street and had apparently been taken by joyriders as it was found abandoned on South Front Street by Constables Arnott and Wright while on patrol duty later in the evening.

Kenneth Campbell, 250 Charles Street, reported his bicycle stolen on Saturday afternoon. The bike had been parked on the Collegiate campus while Campbell was engaged at a game of football.

A rear end motor crash occurred at the intersection of Front Street and Bridge Streets yesterday afternoon when an automobile driven by Harold Brintnell, Plainfield, struck the rear of another motor car, driven by James Skead, Ottawa. Skead had stopped before the red traffic light, when Brintnell collided with the rear of his car. Both were proceeding in the same direction. Grill and bumper damage resulted and the matter was amicably settled upon the arrival of P.C. Thomson.

GREECE REPORTS

on the island, they said.

Greek Waters Mined.

Greek waters off Corfu in the northern Ionian Sea were reported mined last August. The Greek fleet had scheduled "naval manoeuvres" there today.

Meanwhile, Yugoslav quarters said the Italian attack on Greece violated the Yugoslav-Italian pact of 1937 because Yugoslavia was not informed in advance of the move.

Official statements, however, said Yugoslavia would remain neutral in the conflict and offered Yugoslav services as mediator to keep the war from spreading to the rest of the Balkans.

Reports here said the Italian ultimatum which Greece rejected and which led to the attack included demands for the abdication of King George of Greece, various military concessions, and free passage for Italian troops and material through Greece.

There were reports here Britain's East Mediterranean squadron was steaming to the aid of Greece and that Germany would remain aloof "for the time being".

Athens was reported to have had its first air raid and to have answered with anti-aircraft fire.

(An Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch from Athens quoted a communique that "Italian military forces began to attack at 5:30 o'clock this morning with elements covering the Greek-Albanian frontier. Our troops are defending the territory of their country.)

Reports heard in Belgade said the air raid alarm came at 9 a.m.

It was said that only a handful of anti-aircraft guns protect the ancient city of historic structures and that Greece's few hundred planes—most of them obsolete—would be of little value in warding off any large Italian bombing armada.

All telephone calls between Greece and other countries were reported limited to state calls. Strict censorship was imposed on all telegraph communication.

Greek Minister R. Rosetti said hostilities between his country and Fascist Italy began at 6 a.m. (12 midnight EDT Sunday) when Premier John Metaxas rejected an Italian ultimatum demanding territorial concessions and ordered immediate general mobilization.

Reports from the Yugoslav frontier said Italian warships and fighting planes were believed to be aiding their ground forces in the drive, while British sources in this capital asserted warships of the Mediterranean fleet are steaming to the aid of tiny Greece, which holds a British guarantee.

Asks for Assistance

(London announced Greece had asked the British Government for "certain assistance" and authorized British sources said they presumed Britain planned to rush all "advisable" aid to the little kingdom.)

There was no immediate indication here as to what action Italy's Axis partner — Germany — would take in connection with the outbreak of hostilities in the Balkans, which have been on tenterhooks for weeks since the Axis instituted the diplomatic threats in its latest push eastward.

Fear Germany May Take Hand

Germans in Belgrade said they had no knowledge of any plan for the Reich to participate in the conflict, but Yugoslavs feared that Germany might take a hand because of the hundreds of Germans in Greece and might demand passage for troops through Yugoslavia to the Greek border.

The beginning of the fighting brought the roar of war virtually to Yugoslavia's border and spread fears that the entire Balkan peninsula might soon be involved.

Rosetti said Italy delivered the fateful ultimatum to Greece at 3 a.m. (9 p.m. EDT Sunday.) Its rejection was followed quickly by Greece's general mobilization and then a declaration by King George II that Greece had been "compelled to go to war against an Italy coveting Greece's independence." The fighting began, Rosetti said, when Italian motorized troops swarmed over the Greek-Albanian border.

Military and naval observers said the conflict seemed certain to bring about a clash between the Italian and British Mediterranean fleets, since the British almost certainly will attempt to keep Crete and other Aegean islands from falling into Italian hands.

At Mercy of Italian Planes

Military experts said Greece would be at the complete mercy of the Italian air force, since she has so few fighting planes herself (about 125 at last reports) but expressed the belief the Greeks would be able to hold the Fascist land attack in the rough mountains on the border.

Yugoslavia was believed here to be rushing troops to her southern border to guard against any violation of Yugoslav territory.

The Bitol valley route from the Albanian frontier across southern Yugoslavia leads to a broad plain south of Salonika, where thousands of men died in a First Great War battle.

The sudden outbreak of the conflict caught Yugoslavia entirely by surprise and no government officials were on duty when the first war news reached the capital.

LT.-CMDR. CRAIG MISSING

Belfast, Oct. 28 (CP)—Lt.-Cmdr. D. L. Craig, a nephew of Viscount Craigavon, Premier of Northern Ireland, was reported today to be missing among the crew of the British destroyer Venetia, which the admiralty disclosed yesterday has been sunk by a mine.

FREE PASSAGE

Italian motorized units thrust across the mountainous Greek-Italian frontier at 5.30 a.m. (11.30 p.m. E.D.T. Sunday) — half an hour before the expiration of an Italian ultimatum, a Greek communique said.

By noon Athens had undergone two air raid alarms, and in the second anti-aircraft batteries went into action when two Italian planes were seen high over the ancient city. The Corinth and Tatoi airdromes 12 miles from Athens were bombed, and fifteen Italian planes in three waves bombed the Port City of Patras, damaging port facilities, public buildings and residences, with a toll of four killed and seventeen injured.

Greece Hurls Manpower

Greece hurled her manpower and resources into the struggle, flatly rejecting demands which Premier John Metaxas said constituted "a declaration of war".

Full mobilization was ordered immediately for the army and then "political mobilization" was decreed, placing all business and industry under government control.

Not even the air raid alarms kept crowds out of the Athens streets where demonstrators cheered, waved Greek, British and Turkish flags, and shouted "down with Italy".

King George II called on his nation to "fight for its hearths to final victory" and declared "we have been compelled to go to war against an Italy coveting Greece's independence."

The King's message came only a few minutes after Premier John Metaxas flatly rejected the demands of a three-hour Italian ultimatum expiring at 6 a.m. (midnight EDT, Sunday).

An hour later Athens had its first air raid alarm.

The city's anti-aircraft batteries began firing from their positions atop Lycabettus Hill when planes were sighted for the first time at 1 a.m. No bombs were dropped.

(Reports from anxiously-watching Yugoslavia said 10 Italian divisions of at least 200,000 troops swarmed across the Greek border from Italian-held Albania promptly at six and were met by Greek soldiers.)

Turkey May Give Aid

Greece looked to Britain—and perhaps to Turkey—for aid.

A British treaty of 1939 promised Greece "all possible support" if her independence were threatened. Turkey has been understood recently to feel that any armed push across Greece would be a direct menace to herself.

(London reported that Greece appealed for help as soon as her border was crossed and authoritative sources predicted "all advisable aid" would be rushed.

(British sources in Belgrade indicated battle units of the Royal Navy's eastern Mediterranean fleet already were steaming into action.)

Full Mobilization Ordered

Almost as soon as the Italian ultimatum was handed to Metaxas, giving him a scant three hours for the decision which meant war or unresisting occupation, full mobilization of Greek manpower was ordered.

Her army already was estimated as upwards of 100,000 because class after class has been called to the colors in the past several months as Axis threats have increased and war clouds have darkened over the Balkans.

The Greek Premier was with his Cabinet in emergency session for two and one half hours before the ultimatum expired and officials said at that time that disposition of the army for Greek defence already had been made.

Blow Through Albania

Where the blow would come seemed obvious because of steadily increasing tension along the Greek-Albanian frontier and recurrent reports of heavy Italian troops concentrations of the Albanian side of the border.

Greek guns and soldiers were in place in the Metaxas line—the defence system Greece's strong man had built along the northwestern frontier after Italy first took over Little Albania.

There was no immediate disclosure of the exact terms in the rejected ultimatum.

Earlier Italy had been represented as wanting "for Albania" slices of Greek territory along the Albanian frontier.

Incident Bring Ultimatum

The Italian ultimatum was delivered little more than 24 hours after a new series of "incidents" along the Albanian frontier was charged by Italy—an alleged outbreak of shooting which Italians blamed on Greeks they claimed had penetrated Albanian territory Friday night and Saturday morning.

Two Greek communiques officially denied any Greek connection with the shooting and suggested that roving Albanian bands were to blame.

Greece has denied equally firmly Italian-backed Albanian charges of Greek disorders along the frontier of mistreatment of Albanians in Greece, of inciting Albanians to revolt, and of any responsibility for the beheading of the Albanian "Patriot", Daut Hoggia, last August.

King's Message

King George's message to his people said:

"The Prime Minister just announced to you under what terms we have been compelled to go to war against an Italy coveting Greece's independence.

"At this great moment I feel sure every Greek man and woman will do their duty to the end and show themselves worthy of our glorious history.

"With faith in God and in our destinies, the nation as a body and disciplined as a man will fight for its hearths to final victory".

Metaxas said he considered the Italian demand "and the method in which it was made" as a "declaration of war by Italy on Greece".

"The moment has arrived", he said, "for Greece to fight for her independence and honor.

Kept Strict Neutrality

"Though we have kept the strictest neutrality toward all, Italy, not recognising ourselves as free Greeks, demanded of me at 3 o'clock this morning to surrender sections of national territory and that for their occupation her armies would start moving at 6 a.m."

The Premier said he told the Italian Minister he considered the demand a declaration of war by Italy, and added:—

"Greeks, we shall now prove whether we are worthy of our ancestors and of the liberty which our forefathers secured for us.

"Fight for the Fatherland, your wives, your children, and sacred traditions.

"Now, above all, the fight!"

The official Greek agency of Athens published a communique that "in the face of imminent aggression, announced by the Minister of Italy, a decree of general mobilization was signed."

Greece's position as a friend of Britain in the southeastern corner of the Balkans, where Axis domination has progressed steadily deeper, has brought repeated reports of Axis demands on the government at Athens. Most of these have met denials.

Demands Outlined

(The latest was an Associated Press dispatch Oct. 19 quoting Greek diplomatic sources in Cairo saying Germany and Italy had presented these specific demands: 1. Immediate severance of economic relations with Britain; 2. Cession of territory to Italy and Bulgaria; 3. Permission for Italy to use Greek roads and air bases; 4. Abdication of King George II and resignation of Premier Metaxas.

(Diplomatic sources in Rome then termed the demands as listed from Cairo "at least premature.")

There have been conferences recently between Axis representatives in Greece and the Greek government to indicate that pressure has been applied to force Greece to step into the Axis orbit.

The latest of these included conferences Metaxas had Oct. 17 with ministers of Germany and Italy. Their topic was not disclosed.

OVERNIGHT

Announcement Seen

Earlier the Vice-Premier announced he would explain to the nation by radio some time today the French-German conversations which resulted in the Vichy Government's agreement to a policy of collaboration with the Axis for "peace in Europe."

Laval still is charged with the information and State radio services.

Frenchmen today were forbidden to listen to British radio broadcasts in public places under penalty of confiscation of the radio.

News of the Italian invasion of Greece arrived in Vichy as the Cabinet went into session. There was no official comment, but the typical reaction was that France no longer has a direct interest in Balkan affairs.

Morning editions of newspapers published editorials directing Frenchmen to place their confidence in Petain "for the future of France."

Laval's newspaper, Le Moniteur, published at Clermont-Ferrand, said France had no other way open to her than co-operation with Germany and added:

"All other ways advocated by agitators, blind men, or traitors lead only to a dramatic dead end."

Londoners Remain Underground

Before midnight, however, heavy bombs—both incendiary and high explosive—were falling in sticks of five and six as the city's millions remained underground. London had six raid alarms yesterday during the day.

One raider machine-gunned a train in an East Anglian town, but no casualties were reported. A policeman was killed and several persons injured in another town in the same region when a delayed action bomb exploded. A hospital was hit in a northwest town.

The Air Ministry last night painted a picture of widespread destruction in Berlin as a result of R.A.F. raids on the German capital since early September, reporting that numerous vital objectives had been hit.

Damage Severe in Berlin

An airplane engine factory in the Spandau suburb, the important Moabit Power Station and the Putlitzstrasse and Lehrter railroad yards were reported bombed in raids on Berlin during the week end and the Air Ministry reporting that damage to the German capital has been much greater than the Nazis admit, also announced bombing oil plants at Stettin, Leuna and Cologne, naval docks at Hamburg, Cuxhaven and Gremen, railway communications at Bremen, Dortmund and Brussels, port facilities at Flushing and Antwerp and several German airdromes.

The Saturday night attack on Berlin was said by the Air Ministry to have been carried out with the heaviest bombs yet used in such raids.

MERCHANT SHIP

she hit were running without lights, through an area threatening enemy action.

Details of the collision are not known. The announcement of the sinking made last night by naval service headquarters was only 400 words long, and that included biographical matter on Cmdr. Joseph W. Roy of Ottawa, the Margaree's skipper.

"Naval service headquarters at Ottawa deeply regrets to announce that H.M.C.S. Margaree was lost in collision with a large merchant ship in the North Atlantic Ocean during the night hours of 22nd October," the statement said.

"Both ships were completely darkened at the time in accordance with precautions considered necessary in the submarine zone.

Rescued On Way To Canada.

"Some survivors were rescued by the merchant ship and are en route to Canada. It is believed there was a total of 171 officers and men on board the Margaree. Of this number 31 are believed to have been saved. The rest are presumed to have been lost."

A short time after the navy announcement, Prime Minister Mackenzie King issued a statement expressing the deepest sympathy of the Canadian people and government to those who suffered bereavement in the sinking.

"The place of the Margaree will speedily be taken by another destroyer in the Canadian navy," he said, "but none can take the place of the brave sailors in the hearts of their families and their comrades."

Largest Disaster for Canada

The Margaree disaster is the largest single loss Canada has sustained in any of her armed forces during this war. With another individual casualty reported by the navy last night, it raised to 213 the total number of Canadian naval men reported dead and missing since hostilities began over a year ago.

This figure is greater than the combined total of casualties reported by the Canadian Active Service force and the Royal Canadian Air Force. The C.A.S.F. casualties total 98, the R.C.A.F. 73.

Commissioned in England

The Margaree was commissioned in England as a unit of the Royal Canadian Navy last Sept 6. Only last Oct. 13 she was reported as having sailed from the United Kingdom. A story reporting her sailing said she left "for duties overseas".

Eight days later, Oct. 22, she sank following the North Atlantic collision. Naval headquarters withheld announcement of her loss until the next of kin of all officers and men missing and believed drowned had been notified.

Navy headquarters have not disclosed the name of the Merchant ship which collided with the Margaree, but presumably she was not seriously damaged, since the Margaree survivors are heading for Canada aboard her.

Holding First Command

Cmdr. Roy was holding first destroyer command. Since the war he had performed several duties which could not be divulged, but which "stamped him as a man of tact and diplomacy."

A native of Ottawa, 39 years old, Cmdr. Roy completed his naval studies at the Royal Naval College of Canada at Halifax in 1918.

His death was Canada's first loss of a naval commander in this war. Cmdr. Wallace B. Creery of the Fraser survived the sinking of his ship.

Loss of the Margaree reduced Canada's destroyer strength to 12. Included in this figure are six destroyers, over-age but still serviceable, recently transferred to the Dominion from the United States navy.

Eighty-six of the 140 men missing and believed dead after the Margaree sinking were survivors of the Fraser disaster, although 13 of them had been injured when the latter ship was lost. Fourteen of the 31 rescued from the Margaree also escaped death on the Fraser.

Every province but Prince Edward Island suffered a personal loss in the Margaree sinking. Next of kin of the casualties are spread from coast to coast, Canada's island province being the only exception.

Halifax Suffered Greatest Loss

As is natural, nearest relatives of most casualties live in British Columbia and Nova Scotia. Next-of-kin of forty-six live in British Columbia, and 36 in Nova Scotia. But relatives of thirteen live in Quebec, of thirteen in Saskatchewan, of ten in Ontario, of eight in Alberta, of four in New Brunswick and of another four in Manitoba.

The nearest relatives of three others live in England, of one in Newfoundland and of another in the United States.

Among Canada's cities, Halifax suffered the greatest loss, since next-of-kin of twenty-five casualties live there, but Vancouver, Victoria and Esquimalt, B.C., near Victoria, and Montreal suffered heavily as well.

Boat Was at Narvik

The Margaree was a veteran of patrol around Narvik, the China Seas, the Mediterranean, and waters around the British Isles. She was originally the Diana of the Royal Navy when she was completed in 1933, but on being commissioned to the Royal Canadian Navy she was renamed the Margaree, after a Canadian River, like all other Canadian destroyers.

She was of the defender class, similar to, but built later than, the sunken Fraser, the St. Laurent, the Ottawa and the Restigouche of the Canadian navy.

She has a displacement of 1,375 tons, and a maximum speed of 36 knots. She carried four 4.7 inch guns, six smaller guns and eight torpedo tubes.

Her normal complement was 145 officers and men.

MOTHER SAVES

contents with the exception of a few furnishings salvaged from the ground flood. Cause of the blaze is attributed to a faulty chimney or defective wiring. The loss, estimated at $6,000 was partially covered by insurance.

Strong Wind Blowing

A strong northeast wind was blowing at the time and this fact, according to eyewitnesses, saved the large barns and outbuildings from destruction. The barns situated some two hundred yards south of the house were filled with hay, grain, other seasonal crops and implements.

The fire, believed to have broken out near a chimney where electric wires to the barn leave the house, quickly swept through the upper storey. Fanned by the strong breeze the flames rapidly enveloped the interior, breaking through the roof at intervals. Neighbors, attracted by the dense smoke-clouds, rushed to the scene but the blaze had made such headway that salvage of the contents of the upper floor rooms and the majority of those on the ground floor, was impossible.

Mr. and Mrs. Robertson lost all their personal effects as well as a large quantity of new furnishings recently purchased. The house had been remodelled this summer and a number of modern kitchen, plumbing and other up-to-date appliances installed.

Landmark in County

The farm and buildings, purchased by Dr. J. J. Robertson of this city eighteen months ago are said to be one of the landmarks of Prince Edward County. The house, believed by many to be over one hundred years old, was of frame structure and had been remodelled several times. Its dry condition, due to lack of seasonal rains, made it an easy prey for the flames.

According to neighbors, the farm was known as the Asa Brickman homestead, but had changed hands several times before coming into possession of its present owner. Dr. Robertson purchased the property from a family named McCumber last year. His son, John L. Robertson, had occupied the house with his family from that time.

Interviewed yesterday, Dr. Robertson stated that he was undecided whether to rebuild on the old site or elect a modern structure on the large frontage that faces the Bay of Quinte for some distance on his property. In all probability, he said, the new house would be built along the waterfront to eliminate the possibility of destruction to barns and other farm buildings in the event of another conflagration.

PERCY TOWNSHIP

closed he was suffering from a punctured lung, liver and bleeding profusely internally. Dr. G. H. Stobie stated today the young man's injuries were exceedingly critical.

The younger Greenly was found lying on the roadside over a quarter of a mile from where the body of his father was found. The Greenleys were walking home when a dark colored motor car struck them from behind, the younger Greenly told authorities after regaining consciousness on Sunday.

Yesterday evening Provincial Constables Adair and Carruthers apprehended three Percy Township youths, Stewart McCubbin, Gordon Beggs and John Kemp and held the trio for questioning on a nominal charge pending further investigation. The Provincial Police stated the trio of young men were seen in the vicinity of the accident shortly after midnight Saturday night, riding in McCubbin's car.

Found by Brother

The younger Greenly was found in a semi-conscious condition alongside of the road near their home by his brother Lawrence. It was not for many hours later that the body of the father was found. Sergeant H. E. Thompson, O.P.P., joined Constables Adair and Carruthers early Sunday morning at the scene of the fatal accident. Police later revealed a cowl light and pieces of shattered glass were found on the highway near the alleged hit-and-run scene. Today the investigating police convened with Inspector Frank Gardner, District No. 8, O.P.P., to review the evidence gathered by the officers. In the meantime the body of William Greenly was released for burial and the trio of young men held without bail.

Never Throw Away A Torn-off Ear

Chicago, Oct. 28 (AP)—If an ear is torn off in an automobile accident, the American College of Surgeons was advised, it should be saved because weeks or months later it can be put back on and will make a perfectly good new ear.

The report was made yesterday by Dr. H. L. D. Kirkham of Houston, Tex. The ear has to be kept in a preservative, but he said that even if it were not found until 24 hours after the accident, it still could be preserved.

Any dead person's ear, if preserved, can be used to make a good ear, he said.

The "dead" ear does not exactly live again. But its cartilage, which forms the bulk of the ear and virtually all of its contour, would be a skeleton on which a plastic surgeon could skin from the victim's own body to make a new ear.

Enough Aluminum to Build 1,000 Planes Used to Produce 'Tin' Foil

Believe it or not, every time a piece of aluminum foil in which the daily smokes are wrapped, is thrown away, a minute piece of a fighting plane or bomber is wasted. Every time an aluminum metal seal, or covering of articles made from this metal is discarded, it means the destruction of an important, though tiny section of the ships of the air.

Twenty-six hundred tons of aluminum foil used annually in Canada in the wrapping of cigarettes; the manufacture of seals and other uses to which the metal is put would mean one thousand planes added to the ever-growing Royal Air Force, according to C. Gordon Brown of Montreal.

Mr. Brown, a visitor in the city, quoted A. C. Bateman, Dominion Metal Controller, Ottawa, as the source of the above information.

Apropos of that it is recalled that Girl Guide troops of the city are conducting a campaign for the collection of waste materials to provide the ingredients for war materials. The Metal Controller's statement, therefore, brings home forcefully, the fact that such waste materials, especially aluminum foil wrappings and such things are of vital importance to Canada and the Empire. It behooves each Canadian, therefore, to conserve such waste and thus aid in the country's effort to win the war.

ITALIANS BLAME GREECE FOR PROVOCATIONS

Rome, Oct. 28 (AP)—Italian authorities claimed today Italy had been obliged to take measures to meet the situation caused by alleged Greek provocation on the Albanian frontier and a "grave British threat to Greek independence."

They said the measures taken would be announced later in the day.

"There is not as yet any official confirmation of reports of hostilities on the Greco-Albanian frontier which so far have come only from newspaper agencies," it was said.

"The latest Greek provocations, especially on the Albanian frontier, have greatly exaggerated the political situation between Italy and Greece.

"Italy has been compelled to take measures to face the dangers of the situation."

"English intrigues which have increased recently, especially at Athens and in Greek territorial waters, are responsible for the situation.

"They indicated a grave threat to the Greek independence. Greece has, in fact, recently fallen almost completely under English influence.

"It is not yet possible to say precisely what measures have been taken to deal with the situation, but there will be a further communication later today."

A black squirrel's thirty-foot headlong plunge to the ground from the safety of a large tree, and the amazement on the part of a dog which had treed the little animal caused amusement to onlookers near St. Thomas Church Rectory, the other day.

"Paddy," the large good-natured setter belonging to the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, had finished his morning gallop around the grounds when he spied the squirrel searching for its breakfast beneath a tree. "Paddy" cleared decks for action and charged the diminutive "enemy," but the squirrel nimbly avoided the rush and scampered to safety in the tree.

The dog lay down to wait and had scarcely settled itself when there came a resounding thud on the ground nearby. The squirrel, strange to say, apparently had missed its footing high in the branches of the elm and had crashed to the ground.

The dog stood up in amazement, an expression of surprise on its face. And that fleeting moment saved the squirrel's life. Recovering instantaneously from its fall, the little black fellow raced for the safety of another tree, before "Paddy" could recover from his surprise. A chattering chorus of what seemed to be derision echoed from the branches of the tree, while the dog walked disconsolately to the home of its master.

CENSUS ORDERED IN RUMANIA

London, Oct. 28 (CP) — The German radio Friday said the leader of the German National group in Rumania has ordered a census to be taken of the entire German population in that country, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported.

Describing the report as "more evidence of increasing German control in Rumania", the BBC quoted the German broadcast as saying that a National passport would be issued to every member of the German community, on the basis of the census.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

LAVAL IS NAMED

Laval was pictured by his friends as highly pleased with the success of his policy but was reported to hold the opinion that it is necessary to have not only the government but strong public opinion back of the new orientation toward the axis in order to achieve results.

As a result, the Petain-Laval Government began a campaign last night seeking to make the move popular with the French people.

Government spokesmen said "The choice now has been made" and every Frenchman must accept it.

De Gaulle Heard in Broadcast

(Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the free French forces, announced in a broadcast from Leopoldville, Belgian Congo, the formation of a French empire defence council to function as a "war government." The announcement was published yesterday by the British Ministry of Information in London.

"French officers, French soldiers, French citizens, a few infamous politicians are delivering the empire of France" the general said in part. "Be prepared to stand to your arms."

Laval's activity was interpreted as indicative that spadework on concrete negotiations was well under way and that means of applying the agreement between Hitler and Marshal Petain, the Vichy chief of state, were not far distant.

(One paragraph censored.)

No Criticism Permitted

French spokesmen said no criticism of the collaboration policy could be permitted. Contending there was no humiliation for France in the negotiations now in progress and holding out the prospect of a prosperous return to normal.

They praised what they called Germany's "unquestionable grandeur" in treating with a defeated enemy. Strict censorship has been clamped on the French Press on the subject and editorial comment has been ordered to conform to the line "trust in Petain and wait and see."

(In London, diplomatic circles understood that Petain would reply soon, possibly today, to King George's recent message of "encouragement and sympathy.")

PROBLEM FACES TORONTO POLICE

Man Found in Water Registered at One Hotel Under an Alias and Received Mail at Another Under Own Name

Toronto, Oct. 28 (CP) — Toronto police are faced today with the problem of trying to discover why a man, believed to be Paul Worthington Jenckes of (772 Sherbrooke Street) Montreal, registered at one Toronto hotel under an alias, conducted his correspondence and received his mail at another a few days before his body was found at one of the city beaches.

Identification of the body found Thursday as that of Jenckes was believed established yesterday by photographs and relatives of the man will come from Montreal today to confirm the identification.

Police said Jenckes registered at one hotel (the King Edward) as "S. Logan of Saint John, N.B." Oct. 12, paid his bill Oct. 19 and left enough money in his room to pay what was due Oct. 22, the last time the room was used.

They said he also used another hotel, wrote his mother from there saying he was planning a trip north and received his mail there under his own name.

In the first hotel he left considerable clothing but all of it had labels which might have identified ownership torn out. Police said the labels also had been removed from the suit in which the body was found.

The body, badly beaten about the head and face, is believed to have been washed ashore from Lake Ontario. Post-mortem examination showed death was from drowning and police said the wounds might have been inflicted either before or after the body entered the water.

COLLIDES WITH STREET CAR

Hull, Que., Oct. 28 (CP)—Earl D. Nattress, 29-year-old employee of the Ottawa Car and Aircraft Company, Ottawa, was killed instantly when the automobile he was driving collided with a street car late last night. Nattress came to Ottawa from Malton, Ont.

POLICEMAN SHOT WHEN ATTACKED IN POLICE VAN

Humphrey Hewitt Shot Four Times With Own Revolver by Drink-Crazed Prisoner and is Now in Critical Condition

PRISONER WOUNDED

Toronto, Oct. 28 (CP)—A Toronto policeman lies in critical condition in hospital today suffering from four bullet wounds in the abdomen received when he allegedly was attacked in a police van by a drink-crazed prisoner and shot with bullets from his own service revolver.

The shooting occurred early Sunday when Constable Humphrey Hewitt, 43, was taking Maurice Bouchard, 26, to police headquarters for allegedly creating a disturbance in a midtown restaurant.

Hewitt has received two blood transfusions and appeared cheerful when he regained consciousness late yesterday but his medical attendants said he had only a slim chance of recovery.

Police say Bouchard attacked Hewitt and during the scuffle grabbed the officer's revolver and began shooting. The first four shots were directed into Hewitt's abdomen and the fifth struck Bouchard on the wrist.

Another Constable Assists.

Driver of the van, Motorcycle Officer David Cowan, stopped the vehicle quickly and ran around to assist Constable Thomas Whiteley, riding on the rear step, to subdue Bouchard.

Hewitt, despite his grave injuries, continued to grapple with the prisoner and succeeded in taking the gun from him and throwing it to a seat before he collapsed to the floor.

As the other officers, reinforced by William Peebles of Toronto, a passing motorist, entered the van, Bouchard allegedly made a dive for the revolver but Cowan beat him to it and Peebles took the gun and stuck it in his pocket.

After a further struggle, Cowan succeeded in handcuffing Bouchard and the man was taken to hospital for treatment of his wounded wrist. He is held on a drunk and disorderly count.

WORKERS BACK ON JOB

Collingwood, Ont., Oct. 28 (CP)—Without incident, 800 Collingwood shipyards workers marched back to their jobs today after a two-day strike for higher wages that held up work on several Government contracts.

The men walked out Wednesday after refusing to accept a Mediation Board recommendation for a 10 per cent. increase in wages. They decided to return to work yesterday providing negotiations between company and union officials open Monday.

GREECE DEFIES ITALIAN AGGRESSION

Another phase of the war in the Mediterranean as part of the war of the Italian and German aggression began officially today when Italy backing up a carefully planned program of threats, threw an ultimatum before the Greek nation and sent her forces across the Greek border and her planes to bomb Athens, the world centre of culture of twenty-four centuries ago.

Again Italy the aggressor has struck at a nation she agreed to see develop along the lines of peace. Italy uses the same subterfuges as Germany does. Italian guarantees are no barrier to tyranny and aggression. Greece is one that dares to defy the might of a power, Italy, which armed herself for the purpose of war. Greece has been no threat to Italy.

Ancient Greece was one of the greatest lights of liberty the world has ever known. She preceded Rome on the world stage but did not develop militarily as did Rome. Greece was a land of city states, the greatest being Athens, Thebes, Sparta or Lacedaemon. Athens was the greatest of all, her flowering genius showing in political forms, in sculpture, architecture, poetry and philosophy.

Modern Greece has been marking progress after the long centuries. Over one hundred years ago the English poet, Byron, fought in the war for Greek independence. Greece was an ally of Britain in the last war.

To the Italians the Greek people stand in the way of Italy's domination of the eastern end of the Mediterranean. But the Greeks are not daunted today, they cheer for Britain and Turkey, and strike back at the Italians who crossed the border.

Greece wrote an immortal epic of heroism in ancient days at Thermopylae and Marathon where she saved the west from the sweep of the Persian hordes. On the noble soil of Greece immortal deeds in the name of liberty will again be performed by the Greeks.

Britain will honor her 1939 treaty guarantee to Greece, it was announced in London in answer to the appeal of the Greek Premier for assistance to repel the invasion by Italians from Italian bases.

HIGHWAY TOLL OF LIFE AND LIMB

Toll of automobiles is one of the problems which is being discussed in deep seriousness by the authorities of the province as highway traffic casualties continue to mount in number. The hit-run driver is one of the worst signs of the situation.

What is to be done about it as the need is felt that the toll must be reduced? At a conference last week in Toronto some suggestions were made, such as posting of rewards for civilians who materially assist in the capture of hit-run drivers, lowering of the speed limits in some municipalities and on some highways, increase of the size of the municipal and provincial highway patrols and increased educational safety program.

The ramifications of the problems which are crying for some form of action which will cut down the fatalities and injuries and losses sustained on the roads are noted by Inspector Dunn of Toronto who lays some of the blame for accidents on carlessness of pedestrians, particularly children and aged persons and of bicyclists and urges a safety campaign of press, radio and every other medium.

Increase of the traffic patrol which is the most impressive symbol of authority, examination of vehicles every two years at least, speed limit reduction at busy corners, eyesight tests and compulsory examination of car drivers were referred to as possible means to reduce the toll.

The increase in hit-and-run cases is noteworthy, no less than six of the persons killed and 98 of those injured in Toronto being victims of this type of driver, who after an accident, leaves his victims lying helpless on the road or roadside. This is one of the unpleasant developments of motor vehicle traffic and one that must be condemned in the soundest terms. The hit-and-run motorist by the act of fleeing after an accident may leave to die persons who might be saved were they taken to a doctor or hospital immediately. In view of that fact, the hit-run motorist becomes one of the outstanding law-breakers for he breaks the law which has been enacted for the safety of the public and by fleeing he closes also the door to investigation of the accident as far as he is able.

Attorney-General Conant has called the hit-run driver "a bad citizen." A victim of an accident may be slightly or seriously injured and the run away driver doubly breaks the law which demands that he stay at the scene and take such means as will secure for him a doctor or the necessary aid.

VALUE OF RESEARCH

The importance of scientific research was emphasized the other day by the Hon. C. G. Power when he spoke of the importance of donations by public-spirited citizens of means to this cause.

The course of research is different from ordinary business. It is a study which leads to new discoveries which may be of vast importance especially in a time of war. Research workers must have freedom and have access to the means to work over problems, and the value of research cannot be weighed so definitely as, say, production from industry, though after an important discovery it is not difficult to realize something of its importance. If there is lack of support for research the quest for new compounds and discoveries may be halted just short of momentous developments.

This is a case where gifts from persons of means can render a truly great service for the most epoch-making finds may be made which will turn a new page in history.

The importance of research is recognized by governments of all countries.

BURMA ROAD IS OPEN

The Burma road is open—and on its 2,100 miles of rugged roadway is fixed the eyes of the world. For Burma road today is high politics.

World Watches It

As a road the Burma is not much. Any country road in Western Ontario is better riding from all accounts than the straggling 24-foot wide Burma, that pierces into the core of vast interior China from British Burma on the south.

But the Burma road is not to be sized up in terms of riding, miles, rock or mud—it is to be understood in terms of international politics.

The United States watches it. For what happens on the Burma road may vitally affect the American Republic. France watches it, for by France's collapse has come the greatest threat to this artery. Germany watches it, as does Italy. And Britain watches it, for she is a semi-partner in the Burma road.

But upon the Burma road more than any of these nations depends the fate of two Oriental lands, two lands now locked in combat. China, because upon that ill-built ribbon of roadway, exists her very life. Japan, because on its miles may depend her success in achieving her long dream of "a place in the sun" and of Asia for the Asiatics."

Why should all these great powers eye the Burma Road? What has 2,100 miles of poor highway in the mountainous and remoteness of China to do with the fate of the world?

It is this way. For three long and weary years has the Chinese Nationalist Government at Chungking been stemming the Japanese invader. The Chinese have been forced back mile by mile, but fought they have, fighting stubbornly, and often without much hope, to keep China alive.

No Seaport Now

To fight these days a nation must have guns, shells, supplies. China now is hemmed into the interior like a nut within its shell. No longer has it a seaport avenue.

It depends on the Burma road to keep up its supplies to keep on fighting the Japanese.

Close that road, smash it, and China probably would collapse.

Little wonder the Little Brown Men of Japan want to throttle it. For if this artery of China's heart can be cut, Japan is well on the way to mastery of Asia.

The Burma road is not a new road. It actually existed 600 years ago, a rugged struggle of a trail that wound up from Burma through the mountains into the vast inland plateau of China. It was along this trail that the famed Marco Polo, of Portugal, traveled to visit and trade with the Chinese.

But the modern day Burma road, the "way to victory" for China, dates back to 1937. Then when the Chinese were smashed in the struggle at the seacoasts and along the great river ports of China was conceived the idea of the Burma road.

China knew she could not get her supplies through the old channels by the sea. Shoved far back into the interior, the wily and stubborn Chinese looked to the south and there they saw Marco Polo's old trail.

There was her lifeline.

Work of Coolies

China had no machinery, skilled engineers or money to build a 2,100 mile highway. But she had labor, millions of hard browned hands, who knew what work meant. A hundred thousand? A mere handful. China had millions in her mighty reservoir of labor, should she need them.

And so the humble coolie of China came into his own.

Richard Watts, Jr., a New York Herald Tribune writer, who has traveled over the road, terms it "a heroic monument to the unsung hero of the republic, the tireless, smiling anonymous coolie."

The real reasons for the Burma road, however, must be found in the events that began as long ago as a century or more.

In the great surge of the early nineteenth century to seek markets, Chine was a prime objective. A vast population, more than 400,000,000, a land undeveloped. China was a magnet for trade. Britain, the first and greatest trading nation, got into China first. As the century came to a close, other nations developed the Chinese market, the French, the Americans, the Germans.

But Britain's vast investment in late years has reached billions, and the British have remained the most solidly entrenched of trading nations in China.

But with the close of the Russo-Japanese War in 1906 a new power mushroomed to growth on the Pacific. Flexing its muscles like a teen-aged giant, Japan jealously eyed all "this white man's preserve" in China.

Grew Bold in '31

Japan's imperial ambitions took the shape of a doctrine "of Asia for the Asiatics." Not until 1931 did she make a really bold move. It was then she seized Manchoukuo, northern outpost of China. Japan bided her time. She took another northern chunk. And from then on she devoured the Chinese Dragon piece-meal.

But in July of 1937, Japan tired of the piecemeal procedure. She then plunged into the Chinese bog with all her might. Started by a minor incident at the Marco Polo bridge at Peking, with the shooting of a Japanese soldier, the war has quickly grew to vast proportions.

The Chinese have lost, unarmed against the land-passion of this Asiatic power, Japan. But though losing, they have drained Japan of its cash and blood.

Three years this undeclared war has been going on, three years in which Japan, like a truck on a muddy country road, has got more deeply mired as she threshed about to beat the Chinese.

In her threshing, Japan made the latest bold move, her seizure of French Indo-China. For the grabbing of Indo-China must be written in terms of the Burma road. A look at the map reveals the strategic position of Indo-China for bombing the Burma road—and bombing the Japs will do.

Can they cut the road, and choke China? It's a question. Many experts do not think so and as for stopping the flow of munitions which are now surging by truck wheel up and over the mountains of Burma and interior China, they'll go by night to fool the bombers.

If the bombers blast the road by day, China has thousands and thousands of coolies who can be put to work repairing the road.

Canadians, who may find the importance and strategy of the Burma road hard to visualize in Canadian terms, might try to picture it this way.

Supposing Canada were a country with a Pacific coastline only and its eastern border were around the lakehead. And suppose the Japanese tackled Canada. They landed troops on the Pacific coast, seized all the coastal territory up to the Rocky Mountains.

Suppose Canadians trekked back into the western prairie hinterland to keep their nation alive, and established a capital at Winnipeg or The Pas. Canada is closed off from her seaports.

And suppose there were a roadway built up from San Francisco, cutting through the Rockies, northeast into Alberta or Saskatchewan and on to Winnipeg or The Pas. Along this road flowed munitions from San Francisco to keep Canadians fighting the invader.

That is what the Burma road means to China.

The building of the Burma road is related in an article of recent days by Richard Watts, Jr., New York Herald-Tribune newsman, who made a trip over the famed highway not so long ago.

"The road," writes Mr. Watts, "stretches through mountains, across gorges and into occasional beautiful valleys, is a tribute to Chinese engineering, but it is the hundreds of thousands of coolies, many of whom didn't know a war was going on, who are the heroes of this great construction job."

Unknown Heroes

"The highway, which runs west and then south through some of the most rugged and difficult country in southwestern China would represent a complex engineering and building feat under any conditions, granted even the best of machines and modern organization. The Burma road, however, was not built with the latest equipment. It was, in fact, constructed with the most ancient of machines, the hands of tireless, humble coolies with their few primitive tools. These unknown heroes toiled and sweated and struggled and in less than a year brought an engineer's dream and a national lifeline into reality in a manner vast quantities of machinery would have achieved elsewhere.

"This is the report of one who, to the best of his knowledge, was the first newspaper man to make the trip between Kunming and Lashio during the rainy season, when the highway is virtually impassable. I left Kunming on the morning of July 24, 1939, and arrived at Lashio on the afternoon of August 7, which means that it took 15 days, rather than the five it would have taken in the dry season. For the road, which is so valuable for the transportation of munitions and supplies in fall, winter and spring, is virtually impassable in June, July, August and September.

Empty Gestures?

"It frequently is said that the opening of the road by the British is merely a gesture, since Japanese airplanes will make it useless for the Chinese. Perhaps that is true, although I doubt it. But it is at least equally true that the official closing of he road in July, as a futile effort to appease the Japanese, was a gesture equally empty. In summer, landslides, morasses and bottomless roads turn the highway into a vast bog. Trucks stall in the mire or slide down mountainsides, and traffic proceeds, if at all, at something less than a snail's pace.

"Even when the highway is at its worst, the coolie remains its hero. The truck drivers are generally Chinese from the Straits Settlements, assisted by Indians and Burmese, whose activities are confined to the section of the road near the frontier of Burma. All of these drivers have in common a refusal to recognize how competent a man the coolie is likely to be. A landslide holds up the passage of the trucks, and slowly a stream of coolies begins to converge upon the blockade. They are of all ages and both sexes, and they consist not only of Chinese but of Shans and Lolos and all the other tribesmen in the vicinity. And at first sight they seem almost pathetically inefficient.

"That is no doubt why the truck drivers persist in underrating them. The coolies have inadequate tools, and they seem to work casually and in fairly desultory fashion, and the truck drivers, apparently feeling that it will require days for the mountain side to be removed, betake themselves to the hills. And then, to every one's surprise, the capacity for work of the coolies carries the day, and in an incredibly short space of time the road has been cleared.

"That is to say, it has been cleared so far as the rocky debris goes. But the truck drivers are off somewhere brooding, and there is a snarl of traffic that continues until all of them have been rounded up, which often takes a surprisingly long time. In addition, the work of the road supervisors is often inefficient. Instead of trying to keep the roadbed in as good shape as possible during the torrential rains, they wait until the cars are stuck in the bog before bringing out the inevitable coolie to do his usual job of rescuing. In the case of my two companions and myself, our car was finally hopelessly stalled and we had to hitch-hike the rest of the way.

"Since I made the trip during the worst season possible, it is partially guesswork for me to say how the journey would be in good weather. Yet not altogether. For the first day's run, from Kunming to a town called Yunnanyi, was made under favorable conditions, and the distance covered without any particular trouble was 203 miles. Even then we encountered one small landslide but on the whole this part of the road was in excellent shape.

"As for the claim that Japanese bombing will render the road impassable even in the good season, I think that it may be open to doubt. There are but two long bridges between Kunming and the Burmese border, one across the Salween River and the other across the Mekong, and they are in deep gorges which should render it difficult to hit them from the air. In addition, they are guarded by such high mountains that anti-aircraft batteries could be placed in most advantageous positions to defend them. Furthermore, although the road contains innumerable thousands of hairpin turns, it should be possible to move trucks at night through most of the country.

Medical Aid Needed

"Now that the road has been opened, one of the first things that should be brought over it is medical supplies. Almost the entire extent of the highway passes through malarial country, where well over half of the population is often stricken at one time. As one who suffered an unpleasant case of this uncomfortable ailment I know of its power, and the fact is that its extent often makes it almost impossible to recruit a road-maintenance crew in the malarial districts. There was also a certain amount of the bubonic plague raging near the Burmese border, while in many districts well over half the coolies working the roads bore huge and unsightly goiters, the result of a lack of iodine content in their diet.

"If it were possible to forget the military importance of the Burma-Yunnah Highway, one could concentrate on its visual value and report it as one of the most beautiful as well as one of the most important roads of the world. Climbing at one time to 10,000 feet, the road passes through a magnificent country of mountains and valleys, which are not the less exciting looking because they are also fever-ridden.

"But I would rather close on a controversial note. I have read that it often took as many as 15 days to clean up one landslide even in the dry season. Since the longest time it required to remove any of the blockades my companions and I encountered was one week, I would be inclined to doubt it."

Colorful Account

A less factual account of a trip over the Burma road, but a more colorful one is that in the book "Burma Road," written by Nicol Smith, a soldier of fortune and happy-go-lucky adventure, who traveled by ship to Indo-China, by rail up to Kunming, on the Burma road, and thence by automobile south into Burma and back to Kunming.

Mr. Smith writes: "We climbed a hilly divide, nearly 8,000 feet above sea level, and dropped down into another wide valley, whose bare and treeless slopes were an expanse of purplish red, the hills gashed with deep gullies of a darker purple. Across the cloud-shadowed valley one caught a glimpse of an ancient fortress crowning a hill-top, its ruins jutting against the gray skyline like some medieval castle."

In another description of the type of country and the kind of travel on the Burma road, Mr. Smith writes: "As we were already at an altitude of more than 6,000 feet in leaving Tshou-Hsiung, the surrounding mountains, although reaching heights of more than 8,000 feet, did not seem altitudinous, but resembled the foothills of the Sierras. Their scenery, not awe-inspiring, was beautiful. The mountain-sides were shaggy with scrub pine, and the valleys were checkered with rice fields.

"The condition of the road was now definitely better. Indeed, the stretch we were now traveling, the 143 miles from Tshou-Hsiung to Hsia-kwan, the sizeable city where the road turns southward to Burma, is, as we were to discover, one of the best sections. In spite of difficult ascending grades and hairpin turns, we were able to manage the 143 miles in six hours. The ruts and potholes that had jolted us so unmercifully as we left Kunming, were no longer present.

"We had seen no munitions trucks, and I had begun to wonder at their absence. Were the rains farther to the southwest holding them up? Between Kunming and Tshou-Hsiung on the first day's drive, we had passed only two; but all this day, on the way to Hsia-kwan, we saw only four or five more.

"Scarecrows in Rags"

"But now we saw our first repair gang — a group of 15 or 20 men, whose miserable appearance was appalling. They were scarecrows in rags. Their blue cotton jackets, some of them quilted against the cold, and their blue denim shorts hung about their emaciated bodies in tatters. The oldest seemed about 40, the youngest about 16, and at least a third of them suffered from goiter.

"Like a roller-coaster, up and down, the road wound on. At noon it led us through a second pass, at an elevation of 7,700 feet. Just to the north, the mountains rose to more than 10,000 feet. Then dropping a 1,000 feet in 20 miles, we came to Hsia-kwan.

Some ideas of the difficulties of travel on the Burma road may be gleaned from this by Mr. Smith: "At the top of the pass, in the late afternoon, we encountered the first signs of the ravages of the rains. The road had become a sea of mud, washed down from the summit. The double-wheeled munitions trucks had made deep ruts, which our narrower car could not straddle. But here were a succession of road maintenance gangs at work. They numbered some 300 men, and to my surprise, almost an equal number of women laborers. We hailed the foreman; he summoned 20 or more men, and for a half a mile, they pushed and tugged, until they had got us completely clear of the mud. We offered the foreman $10, to be distributed among the men. He refused to accept it, saying with a bow, 'It is my duty and a pleasure to be of service'."

Some idea of the landslides which smother the Burma road at various points during rains may be gained from this excerpt from Mr. Smith's book.

First Great Disaster

"The truck drivers had said that the landslide was only a mile distant. But we drove five miles before we came to it; the first great disaster to the Burma road since its completion.

"It was a disheartening sight. Here the road was a mile above sea level. On the left was a precipitous gorge, 600 feet deep. To the right, the mountain rose steeply for another 1,500 feet. From these heights loosened by the torrential rains that had been falling for days past, an avalanche of earth had rumbled down and now filled the entire road. The rampart was 30 feet high. It was 75 feet wide. Hundreds of enormous boulders, some of them 10 feet in diameter, were mingled with the mass of earth.

"We got out of the car and parked it at a respectful distance from the monstrous slide. We scrambled up the hillside to get a better view of its extent. Just beyond it, we saw another. It wasn't nearly as impressive as the first; it wasn't one tenth as big—but it was big enough—it covered the road. It had carried a small tree along with it down the mountainside, and the tree was still growing, stuck atop the mound like a sprig on a Christmas cake."—Windsor Star.

Washington—"We told you so," is the burden of U. S. naval experts' song these days.

What they told us was that, while planes are exceedingly useful in wartime, they by no means have made waterborne fighting vessels obsolete, as many aviation enthusiasts have been asserting that they've done in recent years.

The sea's surface scrappers were rather groggy, for a while after the current world conflict started, in insisting upon the essential character of their own comparatively old-fashioned service to guarantee a nation's rulership of the ocean. Aviation, they had to admit, is spectacular. It's new, too, whereas the battleship and cruiser, swishing around on the brine, just as the Ark did, as far back as the time of Noah, are no novelty. Consequently the flyers, objects of intense, almost unsatisfied curiosity, got all the headlines. Stories of what was going on underneath generally were relegated to the back pages.

Now, though, the navy boys are beginning to call attention to the fact that the British fleet has everything afloat pretty completely dominated.

German airmen do a lot of damage, scooting over John Bull's island, but they can't land there except to be captured, and seemingly they can't do it by boat even across as narrow a stretch as the English channel; Mr. Bull's fleet won't let 'em.

Italy has a formidable force in north Africa, jabbing at Suez, through Egypt. But this force has to have supplies to accomplish anything. It can get 'em only across the Mediterranean and Mr. Bull's fleet controls the Mediterranean. Italy's aviation arm is known to be first class. It was expected to put the British Mediterranean squadron out of business. It doesn't do it. That, say U.S. army folk, is because aviation isn't what it's cracked up to be.

Neither Germany nor Italy can get things they need from overseas. They get some of them overland, from the eastward, but not everything they require. The British fleet has 'em bottled up from the Atlantic and Mediterranean directions. Planes can't transport big bulk commodities.

But England gets, from our side of the water, whatever stuff it wants and can pay for. Why doesn't axis aviation put a stop to it? Because, reply navy critics, it's a task that aviation isn't equal to; that takes surface strength.

Germany is desperately anxious to keep up its trade with South America. German producers of their kind of stuff, that there's a South American demand for, have made oodles of contacts with South American concerns, promising deliveries and undertaking to penalize themselves financially if such deliveries aren't effected. And they can't deliver. The South Americans, such as Brazil and Argentina, are scooping in the penalties, from German holdings in their various republics. Planes can't make deliveries, and they can't be made otherwise, because the British fleet won't permit it.

Only an Adjunct

They don't undertake, to be sure, to dispute the vital importance of aviation. The point that surface fighters (army as well as navy) make is that it's merely an arm of their respective services. They both concede that either one of them might be fatally handicapped minus capable fliers. They maintain, however, that aviation's an adjunct only — just like guns and ammunition.

Indeed, they frequently refer to a bombing planes as a projectile. Of course planes are invaluable for observation purposes also, but that's a different consideration.

The plane didn't get much of a try-out during the last war; it wasn't sufficiently developed then.

Military men have their minds very well made up now.

They're fully satisfied that aviation hasn't made the surface fighter a back number.

I think they're glad of it. A general or an admiral naturally doesn't like to think that some new invention has made the profession, that he's devoted his life to, as extinct as a dodo.

DE GAULLE FORMS WAR GOVERNMENT

By J. F. Sanderson Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, Oct. 28 (CP Cable) — Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of Free Frenchmen has set up a council for the defence of the French Empire, exercising the duties of a "war government" and issued a call to Frenchmen the world over to "stand to your arms."

In the first order of the council, De Gaulle said Sunday the government would operate under the laws prevailing in France up to the armistice.

The move came immediately after the announcement by the Vichy government that Premier Petain had agreed to participate with Hitler in establishing the "new order in Europe" and was regarded as the first answer of the Free Frenchmen to Vichy's recent Axis-leanings.

"This war council will perform on behalf of France all the duties of a war government in all French territories which are fighting on or will fight on," said Gen. De Gaulle's announcement, broadcast from Leopoldville, in the Belgian Congo.

Gen. De Gaulle has set up headquarters at Duala in he French Cameroons.

The first order of the council said that "as long as the French government and a representation of the French nation do not exist normally and independently from the enemy, powers formerly performed by the chief of state and by the cabinet will be exercised by the leader of the Free French forces, assisted by the defence council."

Expect British Recognition

Observers presumed that this special "war government" would receive recognition from Britain in due course—depending, they said, on the trend taken by relations between London and Vichy.

There was no official British comment on the Vichy communique Saturday announcing agreement between Petain and Hitler on the "new order in Europe" largely because the text could mean almost anything only when its exact terms are known.

It was suggested that one of the [illegible] the Vichy communique was drafted on such vague general [illegible] was that the aged Marshal was still holding out on some of Hitler's demands.

It was believed here that Franco's determination to keep Spain out of the war was not diminished by his meeting with Hitler in the Pyrenees, although it was admitted generally that Spain may enter the German scheme for a new political and economic order in Europe. The biggest factor as far as Spain is concerned is the efficiency of the British blockade and the low food reserves in the country as the result of the three-year civil war.

All signs point, it was suggested here, to determination on Hitler's part to establish an economic bloc in Europe rather than a military alliance. The Vichy communique gave no hint of a military agreement between France and Germany, although it was admitted that the Germans probably have their eyes upon what remains of the French fleet, on the pretext of using it to protect French territory.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

(By Harold Fair, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

An old man walked into a London hospital with a large parcel of silver paper as a donation to help the hospital raise money by selling it. "Sorry it's so dirty," he said, wiping the battered wrapping with his sleeve, "but me house fell on it last night."

Not even a bombing could break up the daily checker games played by John Kelly, 70, and William Hayes, 86, in the Home for Aged and Infirm. The place was bombed but both men are deaf and never heard the explosion.

Sitting beside her baby's cot in the hall of their London home, Mrs. P. Berry watched an incendiary bomb crash through the skylight and bounce downstairs toward her. She told reporters: "I rushed outside with my baby and a man who was passing ran in and dealt with the bomb."

Highest percentage of injuries caused in air raids is due to broken glass flying into the streets, authorities said.

When two high explosive bombs fell in a residential district of a southeast England village they exploded between two fine cedars mentioned in the Domesday book. The old trees were unharmed.

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

"Dear Dr. Myers:

"My boy two years old, who has been feeding himself since one year of age, refuses to eat any cereal regardless of the type. If I give orange juice, then egg, then cereal for breakfast, he will refuse cereal. If I give cereal first, he will refuse this and go without breakfast. He will cry and insist on drinking milk first regardless of what meal. If he sees the dessert he wants only the dessert. If given potato, vegetable and meat on same plate, although separated, he will eat only potatoes and meat. If potatoes and vegetables are given, he will eat only potatoes."

Let Child Feed Himself

My reply, in part: It is fine that you have let your child feed himself. I hope you don't feed him now however much you are tempted to do so. Until this problem is solved it were better to have him eat alone, and with no other adult in sight if possible. Serve his food on a chair or low table. Serve only one food at a time and in a very small portion. Present first either the orange juice or about a quarter of a cup milk, no more. Thereafter have no liquid before him during his meal.

Present first the cereal at breakfast in very small portion; a vegetable at each other meal; nothing else. Keep all other food out of sight in another room, and your lips sealed. If, after a few minutes he has not begun to eat the one food before him, remove it, keeping your lips sealed, have his meal end there. Allow him no other food, lots of water but no milk, till the next regular feeding time. Be prepared to ignore his cries and pleadings. Get in touch with your doctor if at any time you have doubts.

When he chooses the particular food before him, refuse him more of it until he has eaten all the very small portion of the next food presented alone to him, and so on until he runs the whole course or refuses any food offered. Always let him choose between the food offered or nothing.

Don't Give Large Portions

As the plan succeeds you will be tempted to make the portions much too large and to present several foods at a time. He must learn that food is hard to get and that he rarely can have all he wants of anything. Once you get him begging for food you have made real progress. Keep the scales out of sight during the corrective program. Expect the child to lose weight if he holds out a few days. Think of his weight two weeks or two months hence.

In case you don't have the courage to carry out such a program you might better leave home a few days, especially during this child's meal times, and have a nurse or other person who can be wholly calm and unemotional, and, therefore, successful. If no adult showed any emotion over the child's failure to eat what he should there would be practically no eating problems among babies and young children except those requiring the guidance of a pediatrician.

Girl Guides Stress War Work In Busy Program of Past Year

Reports Presented at the Annual Meeting of Girl Guide Council

Reports of the officers of the Council were received and in the discussion of the annual camps, Mrs. W. C. Mikel and Mrs. A. B. Collins were appointed a committee to confer with the company captains on this matter. The absence of Mrs. McColl was regretted by the officers who extended sympathy at her being again incapacitated.

The report of Mrs. H. Blakely, convener of the Badge Committee for the past year was presented and showed the extensive work accomplished by the girls. The members expressed regret at losing such an interested worker as Mrs. Blakely, who now resides in Kingston.

Mrs. Riggs cordially thanked the officers and Guides for their fine spirit of co-operation during the past year. The Council officers were unanimously returned to office as follows:

Divisional Commissioner — Mrs. M. E. Branscombe.

Highlights of Guiding

Reports of the various Guide Companies were presented by their officers and the splendid work of the Guides as shown in these resumes of the past season received high commendation of the executive. All companies took part with splendid success in the doughnut drive the proceeds of which were added to the Empire Fund for two air ambulances and a motor life saving boat. Company One with a membership of thirty-one carried out an extensive program featuring badge work. At Christmas time a family was helped. A flag and pole were purchased, the flag being dedicated at the annual church parade. In the doughnut drive one Guide sold sixty-two dozen doughnuts. Twenty four service stars and one five year service star were earned. The report was that of the acting captain, Miss Jean Thompson.

Knitting Shield

The captain, Miss Mary Roberts, gave a report of Company Two which had enjoyed a most successful year with a record attendance, forty-nine service stars for 75% attendance and eighty badges were merited. A great deal of work was accomplished for the Red Cross and donations of two layettes were made for the V.O.N. This Company won the Legion Shield for the best piece of Guide knitting in Ontario. Christmas and patriotic work was done and in June the Company sponsored a Field Day at the Fair Grounds for all the Guides in the city. The report of Company Three was submitted by the captain, Miss Jean Dickens, showing thirty-four members, Christmas work, a Mother and Daughter banquet and participation in the doughnut drive.

Miss Helen Keeler, captain, and Miss Cecilia Maloney, lieutenant of the Fourth Belleville Company, at the Ontario School for the Deaf, in their report showed that forty-one girls formed the six patrols at the school last year. A series of teas were given by the girls. Correspondence was begun with Guides in Australia. Hikes were enjoyed by the members who also took part in various entertainments. A Girl Guide and Athletic Club banquet closed the year. Co-operating with the boys of the school the Guides this term have collected waste material and were able to make a joint contribution of twenty-five dollars to the Red Cross. The report of the Fifth Belleville Company, St. Michael's, was presented by acting captain Miss Rose Mary Gibson. Second Class work was covered by the Guides. They took part in the doughnut drive and also enjoyed a breakfast hike.

Miss Audrey Licence in her report for Thurlow District, Company Seven Guides, revealed a busy season with a church parade, participation in a Christmas Sunday School concert and in the doughnut drive. Five Guides attended camp. Eleven service stars were awarded.

Work of Brownies

The Brownie Packs, too, carried out many fine projects during the past year. The First Belleville Brownie Pack had eighteen members and the Pack won eighteen service stars and eight gold bars. A Brownie picnic concluded the year. The Third Belleville Brownie Pack under the leadership of Mrs. M. E. Branscombe with 21 members won 19 service stars, three being three year stars. Nine won the Golden Hand badge and wings, seven won the Gold Bar badge. Two splendid boxes were sent to dried out areas in Saskatchewan. Thinking Day was observed. The Pack joined the Grenfell Mission and this month has sent two big cartons of old silk and toys to the Grenfell Labrador Mission and are planning two bales to desolated spots out west. An appeal was made for old silk, especially hose.

Company Three, under the captaincy of Miss Mary Roberts, concentrated on war work and have made a handsome contribution to the Red Cross.

The following articles were completed and turned in: 48 pairs of sox, donated; 7 pairs of pajamas; 14 bandages; 26 pairs of wristlets; 3 patched quilts; 22 hankies; 39 ice bag covers; 5 sweaters and fifteen pairs of bloomers.

An interesting report of the Girl Guide Camp held for three weeks at Hillcrest with a total of 107 in attendance from two companies was given. A great deal of guide work was carried on and the health of the campers was excellent.

SMART SPOTS offer the setting for smart new modes. New is a large black velvet off-the-face hat with scalloped edge and two delicate rhinestone petal clips placed to simulate earrings.

Luxury marks the new fur-trimmed coats. A new coat is fashioned of woolen in blue fox shade and blue fox is used for a wide shawl collar and a border of the fur which curves up in front almost to the fitted waist.

Oil Up That Too Dry Skin

"Oily cosmetics should be freely used."

By HELEN FOLLETT

DRY SKINS are hungry and thirsty for oily applications. They eat 'em up. Dryness shows that dead scales are shedding too rapidly; something should be done about that. The cause? Possibly some diet deficiency. The sebaceous glands aren't getting the kind of groceries they need; more butter and olive oil will put them in action again.

Heavy powders make the dry skin dryer; if you are afflicted, find a light, fluffy powder and don't grind it in. A dry skin needs coddling. Try out a different soap; perhaps the one you are using contains some ingredient against which the epidemic rebels. Yes, skins have phobias, like digestions, and when they do they have to be pampered. Dry rouge is not as friendly as a creamy blush.

Arid complexions are inclined to wrinkle earlier than oily ones, the underpadding of tissues playing out before old Dada Time gets in his mean licks. For that reason oily cosmetics should be used freely, before soap and water is used, and afterwards. A heavy cream, applied at night, should not be removed but allowed to soak into the flesh.

Avoid astringents, they are not your beauty dish, but belong to the victim of excessive oiliness of the skin surface or one who has a complexion of coarse texture.

The first step in the treatment of weak ankles is to find the correct shoes. A foot specialist will give the sufferer a shoe prescription and booties will be made to order. Spiked heels make conditions worse; because of an uncertain foothold the ankle sways from side to side, putting strain on the tendons of the foot and disturbing the musculature of the ankles and legs.

Massage is beneficial and soothing. The physician in charge may suggest exercises.

Weak ankles in children should be corrected as they are the cause of falls and serious accidents.

Fashion Flashes

GET IN to one of those new hip-length fitted suit jackets and see how trig you look. A new model is in beige woolen with notched revers of beaver and on each hip are four small flap pockets, one above the other.

NEW IDEAS have given fresh impetus to furs this season. A clever silver-fox idea is a broad cape stole, the skins almost vertical from shoulder to hemline. The ends of the stole snap up to form a muff.

THREE CHEERS for one of the prettiest dinner dresses of the season. It has a shirtwaist top with a broad sailor collar covered with row of white beads. Beads make the belt and the top of pointed patch pockets on the skirt, which has slender pleats inserted in the front seam. Made of heavy white crepe.

THERE'S GLITTER about town these nights. A dream of an evening wrap is a full-length, fitted model in emerald green or amethyst velvet with tiny collar and cuffs of mink and pointed bands of gold embroidery and green or amethyst colored stones.

Stature

Since we have been discussing stature in these columns, particularly with reference to how far food and care can make a child taller, I have had many requests for this seemingly unusual and magic diet.

The truth is, of course, that the diet a child needs to grow his tallest, is merely the diet we have been talking about for years—the well-balanced one. It so happens that health and growth are almost the same thing, for if a child is healthy, he will get his growth, and he won't be as healthy as he should be if he doesn't have the proper diet.

There is a basic diet I recommend, and I am confident that if a family follows this every day, it needn't worry about the stature of the children. Every member of the family should receive, each day, one egg, some fresh meat, potatoes, bread, butter, two servings of green vegetables raw or lightly cooked, some fruits, some whole wheat cereal, a pint or more of milk, a spoonful of cod liver oil in winter.

If each person has these in his diet daily, it doesn't matter what else he fills up on, these foods will provide the necessary vitamins and minerals for health and growth.

Lest some persons get the idea that if they stuff their children with all the food possible, then the children will certainly grow and become tall, let me point out that food won't by itself change a naturally short human into a tall one. Heredity plays a part in stature. And there are others. But a bad diet will have the effect of restricting a child's growth and height.

As an example of the variety of factors that do influence stature, it can be shown that altitude is one. The altitude has a stimulating effect on the cells of bone marrow, resulting in greater growth rates.

Proper sleep and rest have a lot to do with growth. A child does most, if not all, his growing when he is in bed. For that reason, it is necessary that a child have a bed that is large enough and is comfortable. So, as well as watching diet, the careful parent who wants a child to be big in stature, watches the hours of sleep.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Romeo and Juliet Case

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a boy for ten months and love him very much. His parents do not care for me and my parents feel the same towards him. We've been sneaking, and I'm tired of it and want to get married and get away from it all.

We can get married, as far as finances are concerned, but my mother says if we marry the door is closed forever and I can never come home. I know she means it too.

What can I do? I love him more than anything in the world but I love my mother too. It wouldn't do any good to wait because my mother never would change her mind about him. I love him so much I couldn't live without him.

I've gone with many boys, but this is the first and only one I've ever loved and wanted to marry. Please tell me what to do.

Worried and Troubled.

Why don't you ask your mother just what it is she dislikes about this young man you care for so deeply? Have him put the same question to his mother. If you're under 20, you have time enough to live down these parental objections; but if you're 17 and 18, don't you think it's wiser to wait? At any rate, I wouldn't sneak because sneaking reacts on the individual who practices it—it's bad for character.

I'm glad there is no financial reason that is keeping you apart. If you're both of age, and there's no valid reason why your parents object, and you've talked the question out amicably with both families, I don't see why you shouldn't marry.

She'd Like to Become Better Acquainted

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I sincerely hope you will help me with my problem as you have undoubtedly helped so many others. Several months ago I was introduced to a most charming man. How can I become better acquainted with him? The person who introduced us has moved to a distant state, and I have only slight acquaintance with a few persons who know him.

I thought of a party. Would it be all right to invite him to a get-together when he doesn't know anyone who will be present? Or should I phone him and ask him to call on me?

Waiting.

It's always permissable to invite to a party a person you've met, through friends. Why not make it Sunday night supper? Have it a buffet affair where you will be able to manage more guests and have a less formal party than if they set around a table.

Still Remembers the Old Love

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Several years ago I became engaged to a young man. We argued a lot and finally parted. I had many dates, but took none seriously. In the meantime I saw this first man on the average of once a week, but we were just friendly.

Lately I have found that I love him after all these years. I am now 29 years old. He has changed and instead of making love, laughs at me. We have been seeing each other quite regularly, but he says nothing about love. I asked him if he still loves me and he said 'Yes' but laughs.

Do you think he is serious? If he is not I want to break off and not see him any more, as I think he just wants a girl friend now. He went with one girl and let her down. What shall I do? Shall I ask him where I stand and ask for the return of my ring, or what?

"Pat."

If you don't let your emotions run away with you and become too depressed by this young man's change of tempo, you might have a delightful friendship with him which, as romantic people say, might "ripen into love."

But having broken with him once, very likely he doesn't want to court a second fiasco. Your best bet is to go along with him in a pleasant friendship and be as wary as he is.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, October 29
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A PARTICULARLY strenuous and enterprising day is the augury based on very lively operations among major planets. How this heightened activity, quickened by aggressive faculties and forces working under high pressure, may prove productive and advantageous or end in aggravating and drastic defeat depends upon the restraint, calm judgment and cool decisions exercised. Highly stimulated energies demand stern guidance.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which productive and happy results depend entirely on rigid self-control, calm decisions and well-thought out plans and methods rather than haste, reckless, impetuous and passionate conduct.

A child born on this day will have much ability and versatility, with energies and faculties which may be turned into very practical channels or developed into highly creative achievements of refined and artistic merit. Its inner feelings and subtle leadings should not be suppressed.

SKODA ARMAMENT WORKS AT PILSEN RAIDED BY RAF

Direct Hit on Power Station in Lorient Scored Says Air Ministry News Service

AIR BASES BOMBED

London, Oct. 28 —(CP)— A successful air raid by a "strong force of Royal Air Force bombers" on the Skoda armament works at Pilsen, in Czechoslovakia, last night was reported by the Air Ministry.

The raid was the most distant of the R.A.F.'s widespread attacks on German-occupied countries.

Blenheim bombers of the coastal command, the Air Ministry's news service said, also scored a direct hit on a power station at the Nazi-occupied French naval base of Lorient.

The target was illuminated by a fire visible 35 miles away, set by a previous salvo of bombs, it was related.

There was "a big blue flash" from the power station after the bombs had burst, one pilot said.

Other coastal command bombers bombed Querqueville airdrome near Cherbourg and scored direct hits on a hangar, the news service continued. Longer range bombers blasted at oil refineries in Germany, the Air Ministry asserted.

Six were attacked, it said, two at Hamburg and others at Hannover, Ostermoor, Gelsenkirchen and Magdeburg.

Among other targets it mentioned 14 German air bases, "invasion ports" along the coasts of France and Belgium and the repeatedly attacked rail and water hubs of Germany's communications system.

Coalition Gov't In Manitoba A Probability

Winnipeg, Oct. 28 (CP)—The Winnipeg Free Press says today that proposals made by Premier John Bracken for the formation of a Coalition Government in Manitoba have been accepted by the Conservative and C.C.F.-Labor groups in the Legislature.

In a front page news story, The Free Press said that it has learned authoritatively that an official announcement will be made within the next few days.

The newspaper said that the proposals for a coalition were advanced by Premier Bracken and invitations to participate had been accepted by all groups except Social Credit. The Social Credit group will consider the invitation, it is said, at a meeting tomorrow.

The Free Press added that Premier Bracken will continue as head of the Government, but that there will be a Cabinet re-shuffle.

400 Motor Vechicles Per Day Sent From Canada to U. K.

Ottawa, Oct. 28 (CP)—Canada is sending motor vehicles to the United Kingdom at the rate of 400 a day, the Munitions Ministers, Hon. C. D. Howe told The Canadian Press last night.

The Minister gave out the information in response to a query.

He said also that some gun barrels for Bofors guns were being made in Canadian plants and that the Dominion now is sending "a few" overseas.

In the matter of shells, including rifle shells, the Minister said Canada is sending "great quantities" to the United Kingdom but he gave no actual figure.

Canada's armament program as previously outlined by Mr. Howe involves the manufacture of all types of weapons and munitions in the Dominion. Factories are operating or in course of construction for a full range of arms from rifles to heavy naval guns.

While the details of progress in arms production have not been made public in a general war it is known that Bren machine guns are in production and being shipped overseas and that some lines of heavier ordnance are also in production.

Pope Proclaims November 24 as Day of Prayer

Vatican City, Oct. 28 (AP)—Pope Pius XII today proclaimed Nov. 24 a day of "holy masses and public prayer to be offered throughout the world for the present needs of human society."

The Pope asked that the prayers be accompanied by "acts of penance and by spiritual improvement in each one's life."

He expressed hope that, as a result, "all those who died as the result of the war may obtain external rest; that exiles, refugees, prisoners and all who suffer or mourn through the calamity of the present conflict may have Heavensent comforts of Grace; that finally, order being restored in justice and minds being appeased through Christian charity, true peace may unite as brothers all the peoples of the human family, giving them back tranquility and prosperity."

THEIR MORALE CAUSES NAZIS TO GRUMBLE

Bombed out, but obviously amused at the noisy attempt made to scare them, two English women are shown emerging from the wreckage of their home carrying a few prized family possessions, house plants and a clock. German newspapers recently voiced puzzlement over the non-co-operation of the British with the German attempt to crack their morale.

Italian Note to Greece

Rome, Oct. 28 —(AP)— The following note was presented to the Greek Government at 3 a.m. today by Emmanuele Grazzi, Italian Minister in Athens:—

The Italian Government has repeatedly noted how, in the course of the present conflict, the Greek Government assumed and maintained an attitude which was contrary not only with that of formal, peaceful, good neighborly relations between two nations but also with the precise duties which were incumbent on the Greek Government in view of its status as a neutral country.

On various occasions the Italian Government has found it necessary to urge the Greek Government to observe these duties and to protest against their systematic violation, particularly serious since the Greek Government permitted its territorial water, its coasts and its ports to be used by the British fleet in the course of its war operations, aided in supplying the British air forces and permitted organization of a military information service in the Greek Archipelago to Italy's damage.

The Greek Government was perfectly aware of these facts which several times formed the basis of diplomatic representations on the part of Italy to which the Greek Government, which should have taken consideration of the grave consequences of its attitude, failed to respond with any measure for the protection of its neutrality but, instead, intensified its activities favoring the British armed forces and its cooperation with Italy's enemies.

The Italian government has proof that this co-operation was foreseen by the Greek government and was regulated by understandings of a military, naval and Aeronautical character. The Italian government does not refer only to the British guarantee accepted by Greece as part of the program of action against Italy's security but also to explicit, precise engagements undertaken by the Greek government to put at the disposal of powers at war with Italy important strategic positions on Greek territory, including air bases in Tessaglia and Macedonia designed for attack on Albanian territory.

In this connection, the Italian government must remind the Greek government of the provocative activities carried out against the Albanian nation, together with the terroristic policy it has adopted toward the people of Ciamuria and the persistent efforts to create disorders beyond its frontiers.

For these reasons, also, the Italian government has accepted the necessity, even though futilely, of calling the attention of the Greek government to the inevitable consequences of its policy toward Italy.

This no longer can be tolerated by Italy.

Greek neutrality has been tending continuously toward a mere shadow. Responsibility for this situation lies primarily on the shoulders of Great Britain and its aim to involve ever more countries in war.

But now it is obvious that the policy of the Greek Government has been and is directed toward transforming Greek territory, or at least permitting Greek territory to be transformed, into a base for war operations against Italy.

This could only lead to armed conflict between Italy and Greece, which the Italian Government has every intention of avoiding.

The Italian Government therefore has reached the decision to ask the Greek Government as a guarantee of Greek neutrality and as a guarantee of Italian security, for permission to occupy with its own armed forces several strategic points in Greek territory for the duration of the present conflict with Great Britain.

The Italian Government asks the Greek Government not to oppose this occupation and not to obstruct the free passage of the troops carrying it out.

These troops do not come as enemies of the Greek people and the Italian Government does not in any way intend that the temporary occupation of several strategic points, dictated by special necessities of a purely defensive character, should compromise Greek sovereignty and independence.

The Italian Government asks that the Greek Government give immediate orders to military authorities that this occupation may take place in a peaceful manner. Wherever the Italian troops may meet resistance this resistance will be broken by armed force and the Greek Government would have the responsibility for the resulting consequences.

BRITISH LABOR PLAYING VITAL ROLE IN CONFLICT

David Lewis of C.C.F. Says Labor Reason Why Great Britain Can Withstand German Attacks

STATEMENT ISSUED

Winnipeg, Oct. 28 (CP)—The vital role being played by the British Labor movement is the main reason why Great Britain has been able to withstand successive German attacks, David Lewis, Ottawa, National Secretary of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, reported today to the six national convention of the C.C.F.

Lewis' commendation of the Labor party in Britain was contained in a prepared statement presented to the convention on behalf of the C.C.F. national council.

"The past year has taught the world that the faith and policies of democratic socialism are indispensable not only to win greater justice in time of peace but also to win military victory in a war fought for democracy," said the statement.

"It is now established beyond question that in every case where a European democracy succumbed to the might of Hitler, it fell because of the failure, incompetence and direct betrayal of the big business interests which controlled those countries.

Common People Active

"And the main, if not the only reason why Great Britain has so valiantly and successfully withstood Nazi assault has been the power of the British Labor movement which is playing so vital a role in the government and defence of that country".

The statement added that "while in Britain, New Zealand and Australia the common people are playing a decisive part in the conduct of the war, in our country they are being ignored and exploited . . . . The government has placed contol of the Canadian economy more firmly than ever in the hands of the monopolistic interests.

"Profits have been allowed to soar, war taxes are unjust, our civil liberties are threatened by sweeping and unnecessary restrictions, the right of labor to organize is being defied with impunity even in war industries, and the farmers are left to face a winter of suffering because they have produced so plentifully.

"Your national council believes that only if the worker and farmers of Canada . . . . join forces for independent political action through the C.C.F., will be able to stem the tide of reaction in this country as they have successfully done in other countries of the British Commonwealth".

Pembroke Butcher Found Not Guilty Of Receiving Goods Known to Be Stolen

Pembroke, Ont., Oct. 28 —(CP)— John Walton, Pembroke butcher, was acquitted by Magistrate T. M. J. Gilligan in court today of two charges of receiving stolen goods, property of the Dominion Government. Judgment had been reserved from last Monday after a two-day hearing in which 15 witness were heard.

Walton was charged with receiving goods stolen from Petawawa military camp by four soldiers, three of whom previously were convicted of theft.

Magistrate Gilligan said the "only question" for him to decide was whether the accused knew the goods to have been stolen goods when he received them.

Walton previously testified that he had taken the goods in trade after being told that such a trade had been authorized by the camp.

London, Oct. 28 (CP)—The Air and Home Security Ministers issued the following joint communique Monday:-

"Reports so far received indicate that up to 4.30 p.m. there had not been a great deal of enemy activity over this country.

"During the day a few bombs have been dropped at scattered points in East Anglia and South-east England. Casualties appear to be few and very little damage has been done.

"Two enemy bombers and a fighter have been shot down during the day. Two of our fighters are missing. It is now known that three enemy bombers were destroyed during the night.

"Further information now shows that only eight of our fighters were lost yesterday. Four of our pilots are safe."

CONVICTED MAN STRIKES OFFICER

Thomas Jones, Sentenced to Six Years in Prison, Strikes Detective-Sergeant Johns in Face

Toronto, Oct. 28.—(CP)—Thomas Jones of Toronto leaned over the rail of the dock in County Court today and struck Detective Sergeant Albert Johns of the Toronto police force on the cheek with his clenched fist. The officer escaped the full force of the blow by throwing his hand up to his face.

The assault came after Jones had been sentenced to six years in penitentiary on charges of armed robbery and shooting with intent to escape apprehension shortly after he held up and robbed Morris Leneck in his downtown office last August.

William Turner, convicted of accompanying Jones at the time he entered Leneck's office with a gun in his hand and robbed Leneck of $5, was sentenced to three years for armed robbery, despite a plea of Jones that he (Jones) alone was to blame.

After the detective was struck, Judge James Parker told Jones that "I could deal more severely with you for this—I want you to apologize to the officer".

"I'll see him in Hell first", Jones replied.

Judge Parker then instructed that Jones be taken away.

S. B. Biggs, defence counsel, in asking leniency, said that Jones had gone into Leneck's office to collect a gambling debt, knowing that such a debt could not be collected in court. After the holdup, Jones fired two shots at pursuers.

JOINT DEFENCE MOST SIGNIFICANT

J. Pierrepont Moffat Says Relations Between Canada and U.S. Closer Than Ever

Toronto, Oct. 28—(CP) — The most significant development in relations between the United States and Canada has been the formation of a joint defence board for the two countries, J. Pierrepont Moffatt said today, adding that developments stemming from its formation "prove that we have entered on a period of intensive cooperation between Canada and the United States."

In an address prepared for delivery to the Canadian Club here, the United States Minister to Canada said that creation of the board was "a governmental response to two popular wills" and a recognition that the defence of the two countries is "part of one and the same problem."

There is visible proof, Mr. Moffatt said, that relations between the United States and Canada are closer than ever, at the same time as British-American and British-Canadian relations are at their closest. The "vague feeling" that closer Canadian-American relations implied a widening of the ties between Canada and Britain has passed.

"The friendship of any two thrives on the friendship of all three," Mr. Moffatt said. "In this atmosphere misunderstandings and hesitations have vanished. The slate has been wiped clean of scratches, and it is up to both of us to keep it so."

APPEAL IS ALLOWED

Toronto, Oct. 28 —(CP)— In a judgment announced today by the Attorney-General's Department, Judge Uriah McFadden has allowed an appeal lodged by the Attorney-General against a decision of the late Magistrate M. D. McCrimmon of St. Thomas who ruled that a man who fell asleep at the wheel of an automobile could not be convicted of dangerous driving.

HITLER LEAVES FOR HOME

Florence, Italy, Oct. 28.—(CP)— Hitler left for Germany with his staff aboard a special train at 6.20 p.m. (12.20 p.m. E.D.T.) tonight after conferring with Mussolini.

Loss of Empress Will be Keenly Felt by Many

(By R. K. Carnegie)

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—(CP)—People the world over who travelled in the Empress of Britain, sinking of which was announced by the British Admiralty today, will feel a personal loss in the sinking of the stately ship.

The King and Queen sailed in the Empress at the conclusion of their tour of Canada in June, 1939.

It was a proud occasion for the Empress when late in the afternoon of June 15, Their Majesties went on board at Halifax and, amid the acclaim of the thousands of the King's subjects along the shore line and whistles of the other ships in the Harbor, the Great White Liner, for the time being a Royal yacht, moved majestically out into the open sea and headed for Newfoundland.

On the evening of June 15, the Empress with her accompanying warships steamed into Conception Bay., Nfld., and waited while the King and Queen on the following day visited the ancient colony. That night the Empress started for the British Isles.

Capt. C. H. Sapsworth Commander of the Liner, was anxious to pass the ice track as soon as possible and the ship speeded along at 24 knots or more. A strong following wind helped her on her way. Next day she was well out of the ice track.

Enjoyed Leisure, Amusement

The big liner seemed almost deserted but proved ideal in providing rest and relaxation for the King and Queen after their strenuous days in Canada, United States and Newfoundland. The full-sized tennis court, the broad decks, the swimming pools and the motion picture shows in the great dining room enabled their Majesties and their suite to enjoy leisure and amusement.

Chief engineer Redmond insisted the Empress was the most economical ship of her class in fuel consumption at her regular cruising speeds of 22 and 18 knots when she was making one of her many world tours. She could be stepped up to 24 knots when required.

On June 22, 1939, the Empress sailed into the English Channel with the fog so dense a review of the fleet was called off. However, the day cleared and in mid-forenoon H.M.S. Kempenfelt (now the H.M.C.S. Assiniboine) came near, bringing the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret. They were soon on the liner's deck greeting their parents.

Hundreds of excursion boats and private vessels met the Empress as she approached Southampton. The towering white ship moved into Southampton harbor and docked in the mid-afternoon amid a demonstration of joy which everyone felt over the safe return of George and Elizabeth after a tour that had thrilled the people in all parts of the Empire.

JAPS WITHDRAW FROM NANNING

Announcement Causes One of Biggest Surprises of Chino-Jap War

Hong Kong, Oct. 28 —(AP)— The Japanese army announced today that it was withdrawing from Nanning, strategic communications centre in Kwangsi Province, which it has held for nearly a year.

The announcement, issued by headquarters of the South China command at Canton came as one of the biggest surprises of the three-year-old Chinese - Japanese war. It said:—

"The Japanese forces are evacuating Nanning, which they occupied Nov. 24, 1939, on their own initiative, as further occupation of that city has become meaningless following the entry of Japanese troops into Indo-China."

U. S. OFFICIALS WATCH RUSSIA—

Will Issue Cash and Carry Provisions of Neutrality Act Against Greece

Washington, Oct. 28 —(AP) — State Secretary Cordell Hull said today the United States government is prepared to take any required or advisable steps in connection with the spread of the war to the Balkans. He indicated, however, that a proclamation applying the cash and carry provisions of the Neutrality Act to Greece probably will not be issued until tomorrow.

He told a Press Conference that he was waiting more definite official information before acting.

Whether the government's plans involved the freezing of Greek funds in the United States was not disclosed. A decision was expected to await further developments in Greece.

Spread of the war to Greece caused State Department officials to place attention on Turkey and Russia, whose reaction to Greco-Italian hostilities was regarded as a vital factor in the changed situation.

$15,500,000 LINER WAS ONE OF 10 LARGEST

Empress of Britain Held Land-to-Land Record From Bishop's Rock to Belle Isle

HER RECENT ACTIVITY

Montreal, Oct. 28—(CP) — The Empress of Britain, whose loss was announced today by the British Admiralty, was the flagship of the Canadian Pacific Steamships Company fleet.

The $15,500,000 Empress, rated as one of the world's ten largest vessels, was commissioned by the British Admiralty shortly after the outbreak of war and helped transport part of the first Canadian troops to the United Kingdom.

Her last commercial voyage was made just after the war declaration, when she journeyed from Southampton to Quebec with thousands of Canadian and United States citizens seeking haven from the war zones.

Painted and Camouflaged

For a time she remained in Canadian ports, being painted and camouflaged. Then, suddenly, she slipped out of port in the early dawn, her destination unknown.

Later, the Empress was reported at Sydney, Australia, with the Mauretania, the Queen Mary, the Aquitania and the Empress of Canada and Asia. All were believed engaged in carrying Australian and New Zealand troops.

With a normal speed of 24 knots, the Empress held what is known as the land-to-land record — from Bishop's Rock to Belle Isle. In her early days at sea the Empress made the trip in just more than three days.

The Empress of Britain's overall length was 760 feet.

Thain Likely First Case to Come Before Fall Assize Here

Frederick Thain, Rawdon farmer, charged with the double murder of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wellman, aged residents of the same township, last January, will be the first accused person on a lengthy docket to face trial at the Fall Assize of the Supreme Court of Ontario which went through preliminary details here today.

Deputy Attorney General Cecil L. Snider, assisted by Mr. Walter Martin will conduct the prosecution at the trial being held under Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay, Toronto. Thain will be defended by R. D. McCulloch of the Belleville legal firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott.

Other criminal cases on the docket include, Alice Archer McFarland and Robert McFarland charged separately with the murder of Gordon Archer, eighteen-months-old son of Mrs. McFarland; Hubert Herrington, and Edwin Kellaway, Belleville, charged with manslaughter and criminal negligence respectively following a motor accident near Millbridge in August which claimed the life of Mrs. Jessie Allore, Trenton, and A. Storms, Deseronto, charged with rape.

Jury cases include the Canadian National Railway versus Montgomery and Parks versus Monroe. Non-jury cases, Bellinger versus Ostrom and Twiddy versus Dean are also on the docket while two motions (James B. Christie Estate), Christie versus Christie, and Sedore versus Sedore will also be heard.

The personnel of the Grand Jury and the Petit Jury will be selected late today.

The intense interest in the Thain case was seen early today when three small schoolboys strode into the court house and demanded to know the time of the trial. They had hitch-hiked from Rawdon Township and apparently had forgotten such a triviality as school.

Berlin Rumor Says German Troops About to Cross Into Spain

Berlin, Oct. 28—(AP) — Unconfirmed rumors circulated here today that German troops are about to cross or have already crossed the Pyrenees into Spain—presumably for an attack on Gibraltar.

(Reports have been rife that such a thrust by Germany would coincide with an Italian campaign at the eastern end of the Mediterranean.)

J. S. Woodsworth Offers Resignation

Winnipeg, Oct. 28—(CP)—J. S. Woodsworth, M.P. for Winnipeg North Centre, today offered his resignation as national president and parliamentary leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

It was referred to the national council of the party which opened its sixth annual convention here today. Mr. Woodsworth said he was resigning because of ill health.

BRITISH FLEET LANDS PARTIES IN CRETE, REPORT

Comes to Aid of Invaded Greece and is Reported to Have Occupied Island With Airdrome Near Corfu

'UNLIMITED SUPPORT'

Athens, Oct. 28 (AP)—The British fleet came to the aid of invaded Greece today in the first day of her war with Italy and informed sources said, took over the strategic 150-mile-long island of Crete while Greece's army fought the Italians all along the northern frontier.

British warships also were reported to have engaged Italian naval units off Corfu, island just opposite the juncture of the Albanian and Greek frontiers, and to have occupied a small island with an airdrome nearby.

Crete, reported being occupied by landing parties from other British warships, lies in the eastern Mediterranean southeast of the Greek mainland.

Still other reports, from reliable neutral sources and not officially confirmed, said Turkish troops, responding to Greek's call for help, were marching into Thrace and Eastern Greece.

In Athens, the government of Gen. John Metaxas announced that Britain is sending "unlimited support."

14 Scientists Sent To Central America

By Stephen J. McDonough Associated Press Science Writer.

Washington, Oct. 28 (AP)— The United States has sent 14 scientists to Central and South America to work with specialists of those countries in developing a rubber supply for the western hemisphere.

Faced with possible reduction in imports of rubber from The Netherlands East Indies and Africa due to war, officials of the Pan-American Republics are co-operating in efforts to develop huge rubber plantations in South and Central America and in the southern region of the United States.

With $500,000 from government funds, the United States Department of Agriculture has dispatched four groups of scientists, including rubber experts, pathologists, botanists and soils experts on tours through the Latin American countries.

Their assignment is to study soil types to choose the best locations for establishment of plantations, the best trees for development and improvement, and the diseases which must be recognized and controlled to ensure successes of any large-scale development.

It should be possible to develop plantations which would be producing rubber within five years, the earliest time at which young rubber trees can be tapped, says Dr. Loren G. Polhamus, rubber expert of the Agriculture Department.

Text of Statement Issued by Premier

Ottawa, Oct. 28 (CP)—Text of a statement issued by Prime Minister Mackenzie King today on the Italian attack on Greece follows:

The news of the wanton and unprovoked attack by Italy on Greece has been received by Canada with indignation but without surprise. After the all too familiar preliminaries of outrageous demands, false accusations, and fomented or invented incidents on the frontiers, the Italian dictator has launched an attack against the oldest citadel of human freedom.

The assault has not been provoked by any act of the defender, it is due solely to the rapacity of the Axis powers. The modern usurpers of the ancient civilization of Rome whose proud boast it was that she made war only against the strong and the overbearing, have, once more, directed their power against a small and unoffending state.

The cause of Greek freedom has, for over 100 years, attracted the chivalrous interest of the English speaking world. On many critical occasions it has been supported by the moral and material might of Great Britain.

In the present crisis, with loyalty not only to ancient friendship, but also to the cause of human freedom which is so closely associated in the minds of free men with the magic word "Greece," the nations of the British Commonwealth will gladly accord whatever assistance may be within their power.

The cause of Canada and her allies is honored by the addition of the restoration of Greek freedom to the objects for which we shall fight until victory is achieved.

CATHOLICS WANT MORE AID FOR BRITAIN

New York, Oct. 28 (CP).—Sixty prominent Catholics, including both clergy and laity, issued a statement today urging the United States, in its own interests, to send all possible help to Great Britain. The statement, among the signers of which were Bishops Robert E. Lucey of Amarillo, Tex., and Edwin V. O'Hara of Kansas City, Mo., termed Hitlerism "the denial of God, of all that makes life worthwhile for Christian peoples, and the rejection of every spiritual and moral restraint."

Bobby Coulter Emerges Hero As Argonauts Defeat Haughty Ottawa Rough Riders 11 to 9

Major Upset of Football Season Scored on Toronto Gridiron

THRILLING CONTEST

Balmy Beach Only Undefeated Team in East—Hamilton Wins First Game

(By Sydney Cruson)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

In a week-end of minor and major upsets, Toronto Balmy Beach emerged today as the East's only undefeated football club.

Their 12-2 triumph over Sarnia's 2-26 battery on the Soldiers' Home Field Saturday was the only balm to the experts after Toronto Argonauts had fought from behind to crush Ottawa Rough Riders 11-9 and Hamilton Tigers scored their first triumph of the season, 12-7 right in Montreal's backyard. These were the day's major upheavals.

At Hamilton, the Ontario Union Alerts whitewashed Camp Borden 8-0, paving the way to a dogfight to the wire for the Union's second playoff spot behind Balmy Beach. The victory left Alerts only a point behind the battery with two games to play.

Nearly 16,000 hilarious Toronto fans watched the Argos' Exhibition of courage and skill in beating back the interprovincial union champions just a week after Riders had crushed them 41-6 in Ottawa. This game was a thriller with everything a fan could ask for. At the end, Little Bobby Coulter was the hero of a great Argo backfield that had only one substitution throughout.

Fumbled into Defeat

The Riders fumbled themselves into defeat. They tossed back the opening challenge of the Argos in the first minute of the game but they had no defence a moment later, when Lenny Staughton picked up a fumbled ball on the Rider 25. On first down young Elwyn Morris fired a perfect touchdown pass into Coulter's hands as the Little Argo safety raced behind a defender and took the ball on the run five yards out.

It didn't take Ottawa long to get that back. Led by big Dave Sprague they marched 62 yards on the ground, and Sprague crashed over centre on a third down. They pecked away at each other after that outburst, Argos dominating the play but never able to set up a decent margin. Twice they were on the Ottawa one-yard line in the second quarter and twice they were thrown back.

Once in Lead

The Riders went into the lead in the third quarter, 9-8 after Sammy Sward had booted three singles to offset those by Earl Selkirk and Coulter. Early in the last period Coulter took the ball on his 52 and spun through eight rider tacklers for 30 yards, then lateralled to Morris who went another 20 to the Ottawa five. Annis Sukus kicked the game-winning placement field goal from less than 15 yards.

The victory over the battery was the first a Beaches team had scored in Sarnia, where the great Imperials held out before they were disbanded this year, for 12 seasons. Bobby Porter and Hugh Tunnicliffe combined to shatter the traditions.

March Upfield on Passes

They got together after Sarnia led 1-0 through the first quarter. The Beaches marched upfield on three passes, the last on from Porter to Tunnicliffe bringing a major score. Tunnicliffe also scored a placement field goal and Porter booted two singles, Barron winding up their scoring in the last quarter with a single.

Two pairs of football brothers—Hardy and Howard Awrey and Walter and Odie Gibb — paced Alerts to their shutout of Camp Borden, who kept within eight points only through Eddie Thompson's individual brilliance. The Awreys spent all the game reeling off large gains on kick returns while Walter Gibb booted two placements and Odie two singles.

Bill Murmylyk's converted touchdown provided Hamilton's victory margin over Montreal. He intercepted a pass 30 yards out in the last quarter and broke past a swarm of Montreal tacklers to cross the line. The Tigers should have won by a greater margin for George Wright was in position to try five placements and made good on only two.

A Tiger fumble led to Montreal's touchdown, soon after Murmylyk scored. Eddie Burton kicked a mumbled catch to the Montreal 10 where Doug Smaill fell on the ball and rifled a touchdown pass to Ray McKins. The Tiger line was the barrier on which the Montreal attack broke and on he line centre Doug Turner was the star.

THE MYSTERY MAN

"Who is he?" someone always shouts whenever the Masked Marvel appears in a wrestling ring, be it New York, Chicago, Montreal or Belleville. Tonight at the Hume Arena the Masked Marvel, sometimes referred to as the "hooded horror" meets Al Dunlop, the former Cleveland heavyweight, in the main scrap of a three-bout card. Neither Dunlop nor the "mask" have been defeated in Belleville this season and keen ring rivalry will doubtless mark this bout, as both men are anxious to win. In the opening bout of the evening Jimmie Allen meets Pedro Valdez, a return bout demanded by Valdez, who was beaten once and has a draw with Allen. George Pavich and Mike Domerko, the Syracuse football player, supply the remaining attraction tonight.

New York, Oct. 28—(AP)—Ragtime News Review: Clark Shaughnessy is still the toast of football fans from coast to coast . . . and if they were to call the roll . . . they'd nominate him for the bowl. The way Tom Harmon treated Penn . . . you'd think that Reagan wasn't in. . . . And Minnesota bugs should thank the touchdown team of Smith and Franck. . . . The Texas Ags are rolling on . . (appears they've got the coon and gone.) . . . Although Jess Neely, minus dice, keeps shooting naturals down at Rice. . . . As forecast, Dr. Miller's Yalers . . . couldn't match our doughty Sailors. . . . Ohio State bowed to Cornell . . . and did it very, very well.

It was a day of wild upsets . . . and tough on those who made form bets. Those Syracusers hadn't ought . . . to skin Columbia three to naught . . . but easily the day's worst lam . . . was handed to the Fordham Ram. . . . The Auburn crew made Georgia Tech. . . . look like the well-known rambling wreck. . . . And, we trust, it's not amiss . . . to ask what happened to ole Miss. . . . Smith Falls, Ont., Oct. 28—(CP)—Two men are in hospital here suffering from severe injuries caused when the car in which they were travelling left the road and turned over several times late Saturday night. Alfred Ranger of Brockville is suffering from concussion a possible fracture of the skull and other injuries. He is still unconscious and in dangerous condition.

William Dundas, also of Brockville is suffering from concussion, shock and possible internal injuries.

ARGOS AND ROUGHRIDERS MEET IN TORONTO

A powerful Ottawa football team, minus one of its big guns, namely Tony Golab, rode into Toronto filled with confidence that they could take Argos into camp in their home town as easily as they did in Ottawa the previous week when they handed the Scullers a 41-6 lacing. Argos, badly depleted by injuries, took the field with a determination to go down fighting—if go down they must owing to their heavy casualty list.

No. 1 Dave Sprague, of the Roughriders, is shown crashing across the line for a touch with Annis Stukus of the Scullers hanging grimly to him.

DETROIT WINGS OUT TO WIN A LOT OF LOST PRESTIGE

Ebbie Goodfellow Will be Playing Coach of the Revamped Squad

MANY NEW FACES

Goaltending Job Wide Open as Tiny Thompson Leaves to Manage Buffalo Team

Detroit, Oct. 28—(CP)—On the theory that two heads are better than one—especially if one is in the thick of the battle — Detroit Red Wings are out this year to regain a lot of lost prestige in the National Hockey League.

Surrounded by a mixture of veterans and youth, Jack Adams and Ebbie Goodfellow will get together to tell the team how to win a few more games than it did last season. Adams will sit on the bench and Goodfellow will be on the defence as playing coach.

Out there with old Ebbie will be a few of the old guard, including Mud Bruneteau, Syd Howe and Cecil Dillon. But in the main, it's the big chance for the youngsters.

Kids like Jimmy Orlando, the Montreal Italian who plays defence; Alex Motter, Gus Giesebrecht, Connie Brown and Sid Abel entered the Detroit scene last season as the club's rebuilding program began in earnest. They did not set the league afire as the Wings finished fifth but they showed plenty of promise and the Detroit bosses figure they'll shine this season.

Several Amateurs May Join

Several amateurs are trying out with the Wings and their Indianapolis farm club at daily drills at the Olympia ring here and four have been signed to professional contracts. The Wings might not win the Stanley Cup this season, but Adams, elevated recently from Wing manager to vice-president of the vast Detroit farm system, knows from long years of experience that the rookies of today are the cup heroes of tomorrow.

Because of the influx of youth, calibre of the Wings is a question mark—just as is their starting lineup for the opening league game here Nov. 3 against New York Americans. Only one thing is certain—a new goalkeeper will be between the posts.

Tiny Thompson, the old master, has left to become coach of the Buffalo Bisons of the American League. His successor probably will be Johnny Mowers, a sensation in senior amateur hockey with Niagara Falls of the Ontario Hockey Association two seasons ago. Mowers played for Detroit's Omaha farm of the American Association last season.

Other contenders are Jimmy Franks, last winter with Indianapolis and Floyd Perras, Detroit Pontiac's netminder in the Michigan-Ontario League.

The latest amateurs to join the Detroit chain are Jud McAtee, Art Herchenratter, Dick Behling and Bill Jennings. All but McAtee played in the M.-O. League last season and Herchenratter, a Kitchener, Ont., product, was the league's top sniper as a centre with Windsor Chryslers.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

(By The Canadian Press)

Boston Bruins have pitched camp in Montreal for the remainder of their National Hockey League preseason training. The Bruins, who open the season in Montreal Nov. 3 against Canadiens, left their camp in Hershey, Pa., after a 6-4 victory Saturday over the Hershey Bears, their farm club in the American Hockey Association.

There will be no danger of Art Ross' men clashing with the Canadiens during their training in Montreal this week. The Habitants have decided to remain at their St. Hyacinthe, Que., camp until the day of their opening game with the Bruins.

The 19-year-old Ottawa rookie, Johnny Quilty, is leading Canadiens' scorers in pre-season exhibition games of the Montreal Club. Johnny, making the N.H.L. jump from junior ranks, scored his third goal Sunday to give Canadiens a 1-0 victory over New Haven Eagles. In five exhibition games with American League teams, the Canadiens have defeated New Haven wice, drawn one with the Eagles and another with Springfield Indians, and lost to Providence Reds.

Two more junior stars have been given permission to sign professsional contracts by the Canadien Amateur Hockey Association. They are forward Bill Mosienko and defenceman Andy Branigan, who both played with Winnipeg Monarchs in the Manitoba junior circuit last year. Mosienko probably will line up with Chicago Black Hawks' American League Club, Providence Reds, while Branigan is expected to play with Springfield Indians, where he will be subject to recall by New York Americans.

The National Hockey League's intra-city rivals, the Rangers and the Americans of New York, are all square in their western Canada exhibition series. Red Dutton's rejuvenated Ameriks evened the series at two games apiece by defeating the Stanley Cup holders, 4-3, in Regina Saturday night. The veteran Lorne Carr bagged two for the Americans while Murray Armstrong and Jack (Peanuts) O'Flaherty got the others. For Rangers, Alex Shibicky counted twice and Lynn Patrick netted the other.

Detroit officials say that the Red Wings' contract difficulties with their centre star, Syd Howe, are just about ironed out. The Detroit management announced after a game against Indianapolis Capitals last night that Howe has not yet signed a contract but said they were "not far apart" on terms. The veteran bagged one goal, although Detroit lost the exhibition match, 3-2, to their American League farm club.

TRAFFIC DELAYED BY BRIDGE COLLAPSING

Smith Falls, Ont., Oct. 28—(CP)—Collapse of a bridge three miles east of here Saturday held up traffic almost 24 hours and caused collision of two cars. The bridge failed to stand weight of a truck driven by James Derue, Ardoch, Ont., No one was injured.

Workmen toiled Saturday night and Sunday to restore the structure.

TEN TOUCHDOWNS IN THREE GAMES

In action here is the University of Pennsylvania's backfield ace, Frank Reagan, who, in three games so far has scored ten touchdowns—two against Maryland, three against Yale and five against Princeton. Known as the poison Penn, he and Michigan's Tommy Hormon are waging a gridiron duel for individual honors this season. Reagan and the Michigan ace face each other this coming Saturday at Ann Arbor when their undefeated teams clash.

Credit Mrs. Leo Durocher with an assist in the signing of Lippy Leo for another season as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers. It was the former Carol King, ace designer and stylist of women's clothing, who smoothed the way for her husband and Larry MacPhail to get together and talk business for 1941, after they had apparently agreed to disagree.

The temperaments of both MacPhail and Durocher are what might be termed "explosive.". In Cincinnati, during the first game of the World's Series, they had words, creating a breach that almost resulted in a parting of the ways. Leo left the scene of the championship battle in a huff, but Mrs. Durocher persuaded him to return to the games at Detroit and fostered a move that brought the manager and club president together, which resulted in the agreement, approved by the directors, for Leo to return as pilot.

If MacPhail and Durocher had not come together again at the Series, it is said there would have been a new manager of the Dodgers in 1941.

The old Kingston Red Indian junior hockey team is no more. Don't be misled and think the Limestone City is abandoning minor league hockey; on the contrary the Kingston puck moguls are increasing their efforts towards the sponsorship of hockey among the teen-aged of their city. Kingston will have a junior "B" squad as usual and with Wally Elmer as manager-coach. However, the Kingston Lions Club is sponsoring the club, to be known as the Lions. New blue, red and gold colored sweaters will be introduced this year. The Kingston hockey crowd are going in for juvenile hockey in a big way this season, as they are sufficiently far-seeing in Kingston to realize the future value of fostering the game among the sub-voting age kids. With inter-college sports being abandoned at both Queens and R. M. C. for the duration of the war, Coach Wally Elmer should have little difficulty in icing a strong junior "B" team for the coming season, as the Queens juniors have already sought permission to play with the newly organized Kingston Lions juniors.

Ever since Jimmie Allen beat Pedro Valdez and left him battered, bewildered and shorn of his faith in humanity the wily Mexican has been awaiting his vendetta. Tonight Valdez meets Allen for their third bout in Belleville and the Hume Arena fans can look for action aplenty, as Pedro is seeking revenge. The boys grappled to a draw once, Allen soundly beat Valdez, but tonight's bout is over the 45 minute route and should be productive of some good action. Next in line will be the main scrap between Al Dunlop and the Masked Marvel, neither having been defeated in a local ring this season.

Do you remember when Margaret McBurney, captain of the Edmonton Grade, unconquerable girls' basketball team, retired five years ago today after 10 years as the team's captain. She had played 158 games, scoring 2,064 points. The Grads passed out of existence shortly after celebrating their 25th anniversary last year, but Percy Page, the team's coach, announced this month a new team will be formed by the Edmonton Commercial Grads' Basketball Organization.

Kay Genereaux, star catcher for the Toronto Sunday Morning Senior Softball team, was voted the Norman Craig Memorial Trophy, emblematic to Ontario's outstanding feminine athlete of the year. Kay Genereaux is well-known in Belleville, where she got her start in the softball world with Allan Meagher's old National Maids. Along with her sister Marie, the Genereaux girls were given much credit for the rise to heights of the Sunday Morning Class, in the club's drive for the championship. Both the Genereaux girls hit in a most prolific manner in the play-offs. The congratulations of all connected with the sporting fraternity in this district is extended to Kay Genereaux upon winning the No. 1 position among feminine athletes in Ontario.

SPORT SPICE—Hensall won the intermediate "B" championship of the O. B. Both will be sent to Pittsburgh for training; Knott is a product of Kingston hockey efforts........ Paced by Bobby Coulter the injury-riddled Toronto Argonauts surprised the Canadian football world by beating the mighty Ottawa Rough Riders 11 to 9........ The Ottawa loise wasn't the only football upset of the day, south of the border Fordham, Columbia and Penn State all suffered unexpected reverses, so it must have been in the air........ With Owner Eddie Shore in uniform the Springfield Indians held the Canadiens to a 3-3 draw last night and the N. H. "Foreign Correspondent"

A highly colorful and dramatic event in motion picture history took place Saturday at the Belle Theatre where Walter Wanger's latest film production "Foreign Correspondent" was given a spectacular premiere Brilliantly directed by Alfred Hitchcock, master of screen mystery and suspense. "Foreign Correspondent" must be put down by this writer as the thrill spectacle of the year, a motion picture which unreels gripping drama, breath-taking excitement, red-blooded romance and high-pitched intrigue.

"Foreign Correspondent" is played brilliantly by a top-notched cast headed by Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, George Sanders, Robert Benchley, Albert Basserman and Herbert Marshall. Its story, which unwinds on the screen with amazing speed and tempo, keeping the audience on tenterhooks, concerns a crime reporter on a New York daily who is dispatched to Europe to dig up facts. The reporter, played masterfully by Joel McCrea, digs up more than he bargains for, cracking open an international intrigue that has never before been matched on the screen for thrills and excitement.

Unfortunately, there is not enough space in this column to fully describe the magnificent job of direction turned in by Mr. Hitchcock who has already electrified the screen with such previous hits as "Rebecca", "The 39 Steps", "The Lady Vanishes" and "The Man Who Knew Too Much".

Too much praise cannot be given to Walter Wanger for the excellence and lavishness with which he has endowed the production of "Foreign Correspondent". Nor is it merely prediction to mention in passing that his new Hitchcock thriller will keep audiences glued to their seats as they participate in the action on the screen, until at the climax, they feel limp with excitement.

The final scene in "Foreign Correspondent" showing a huge Clipper plane shot down from the air and the sea disaster which follows has never before been equalled in pictures for the brilliance of its photography, the smashing impact of its drama and the daring of its realism.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Pastor Hall"

The picture proper now showing at the Capitol Theatre with a daily matinee produced in England after that country's declaration of war upon Germany and based on a play by the late Ernst Toller, German playwright, is by far the most outspoken and wholesale indictment of the Hitler system of government that has ever been offered for exhibition in America thus far. It is somewhat less expertly produced, as to technique than such works as "Four Sons" and "The Mortal Storm," but audience effect of its minor technical crudities is to intensify rather than temper the realism of the presentation.

Toller's story, prepared for screen by three writers, traces its terms of its effect upon the lives of a village pastor and his associates the coming of Storm Troopers to their community to enforce Nazi regulations and instill respect for and obedience to the code of "new Germany." The major plot has to do with the pastor's refusal to distort his theological concepts to make them fit the Nazi ideology, his imprisonment in a concentration camp for opposing Hitler's doctrine and his ultimate assassination by Storm Troopers when following escape, he delivers a final denunciatory sermon to his congregation.

A secondary plot concerns the Storm Troop leader's attempt to seduce the pastor's daughter on promise to obtain her father's freedom, a proposition she ultimately accepts but is spared by circumstances from executing.

A third plot pertains to the consummated seduction of minor child in a labor camp, refusal of the Nazi authorities to make redress or regard the matter as important save as it may increase the population and the girl's subsequent suicide.

Scenes and incidents in the concentration camp, reportedly filmed in conformity with conditions and practices described in the British White Paper on the subject, surpass anything previously offered on the entertainment screen in point of savagery, brutality violence and disregard for human life. These had the Hollywood press contingent, hardened by constant exposure to films of all varieties and ardent Hitler haters for the most part, gasping and shuddering in their chairs.

No children's tickets will be on sale for this performance. The picture simply will not be understood by children and their presence in the theatre will only spoil it for the adults. Under no circumstances will anybody be admitted to the auditorium during the last ten minutes of the feature.

NEW SESSION OF PARLIAMENT CONVENES NOV. 7

St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty Will be Up for Approval but Legislation Will Not be Heavy

SIT THREE WEEKS

By Frank Flaherty Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Ottawa, Oct. 28 (CP)—For the fourth time since war broke out a year ago, parliament of Canada will assemble next week.

The first session of the 19th parliament which started in May, continued into August and adjourned until Nov. 5 will come to a speedy close the day it reassembles.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has announced it is the government's intention to procure that session immediately and open the regular 1941 session on Thursday, Nov. 7.

From the point of view of government legislation the new session is not expected to be a heavy one. There may be a St. Lawrence waterway treaty for approval and some legislation relating to various phases of the war effort and developments in the economic life of the country, but for the most part the legislation the government wanted was passed at the last session.

So the session may be of more consequence as a forum for airing grievances, presenting suggestions from different parts of the country and bringing out information on the progress of war developments than for the legislation which will be placed on the statute books.

General Discussion Expected

Proceedings will start off with the debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne and it is likely this debate will be the vehicle for a general discussion on war matters.

Hon. R. B. Hanson, Conservative House Leader whose recent speeches in the Maritime Provinces gave rise to some presessional controversy has called a caucus of Conversative members for Nov. 4, day before the session opens. At that meeting the course of the Conservatives for the session probably will be mapped out and members may express their views on Mr. Hanson's recent utterances.

It is expected parliament will sit for at least three weeks and perhaps longer, starting with Nov. 8. Debate on the Speech from the Throne may occupy the whole of this time. If not, some of the main estimates for the fiscal year 1941-42 may be considered.

Some time in December the session is expected to adjourn until a date in January or February. After this adjournment the government's legislative program will be dealt with.

Hull Claims Axis Rulers Guilty of Deceit, Terror

Are Engaged in Effort to Reduce Mankind to Master and Slave Relationship

U. S. IN DANGER

Washington, Oct. 28.—(AP) — Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, described the rulers of Germany, Italy and Japan, Saturday night as "would-be conquerors" engaged in a relentless attempt to reduce mankind to "a master-and-slave relationship among nations and individuals, maintained by brute force".

Speaking before the National Press Club, Hull listed efforts by these nations "to take by force what they say they need or want" as he reviewed what he called "the whirlwind developments of one of the saddest and most crucial decades in the history of mankind — that of the nineteen-thirties".

"The rulers of these nations", he continued, "have repudiated and violated in every essential respect the long-accepted principles of peaceful and orderly international relations.

"Merciless armed attack; unrestrained terrorization through slaughter of non-combatant men, women and children; deceit, fraud, and guile; forced labor, confiscation of property; imposed starvation and deprivations of every sort—all these are weapons constantly used by the conquerors for the invasions and subjugation of other nations".

Sea Control Also Sought

These same nations, Hull declared —presumably in reference to Germany's reported efforts to obtain the French Fleet and Japan's warship building program—have as an objective "the securing of control of the high seas".

"They adhere to no geographic lines and they fix no time limit on their programs of invasion and destruction", he said.

"They cynically disregard every right of neutral nations, and, having occupied several such countries, they then proceed to warn all peaceful nations that they must remain strictly neutral until an invading force is actually crossing their borders.

"They threaten peaceful nations with the direct consequences if those nations do not remain acquiescent, while the conquerors are seizing the other continents and most of the seven seas of the earth".

The aggressions should not be regarded as "mere excesses or exigencies of war to be abandoned when fighting ceases". He added:

"By deed and by utterance, the would-be conquerors have made it abundantly clear that they are engaged upon a relentless attempt to transform the civilized world as we have known it into a world in which mankind will be reduced again to the degradation of a master-and-slave relationship among nations and among individuals, maintained by brute force".

Threat Seen To All Nations

As a result of these aggressions, Hull said, dangers have been created which threaten the human freedom, national independence and order under law of all peaceful nations, including the United States.

"Only once before in our national existence (during the Revolution) has as grave a danger from without threatened this nation," he said, "as the danger which looms on the international horizon."

At another point, he said that "there can be nothing more dangerous for our nation than for us to assume that the avalanche of conquest could under no circumstances reach any vital portion of this hemisphere."

"Oceans," he added, "are barriers but they are also highways. Barriers of distance are merely barriers of time. Should the would-be conquerors gain control of other continents they would next concentrate on perfecting their control of the seas, of the air over the seas, and of the world's economy; they might then be able with ships and with planes to strike at the communication lines, the commerce and the life of this hemisphere; and ultimately, we might find ourselves compelled to fight on our own soil, under our own skies, in defence of our independence and our very lives......

Defense Held Essential

"We are in the presence not of local or regional wars, but of an organized and determined movement for steadily expanding conquest. Against this drive for power no nation and no region is secure save as its inhabitants create for themselves means of defence so formidable that even the would-be conquerors will not dare to raise against them the hand of attack.

"As an important means of strengthening our own defence and preventing attack on any part of the Western Hemisphere, this country is affording all feasible facilities for the obtaining of supplies by nations which, while defending themselves from barbaric attack, are checking the spread of violence and are thus reducing the danger to us.

"We intend to continue doing this to the greatest practicable extent.

"Any contention, no matter from what source, that this country should not take such action is equivalent, in the present circumstances, to a denying of the inalienable right of self-defence."

Willkie Say Hull's Speech Example of New Deal Futility

Aboard Willkie train en route to Louisville, (AP) Wendell L. Willkie asserted today that United States State Secretary Cordell Hull's speech Saturday night was "an extraordinary documentation of new deal futility".

"The Secretary pointed up more clearly than could any contemporary critic of the new deal the serious failure to organize a national economy capable of building rapidly an adequate defence", said Willkie in a statement issued on his campaign train.

"The only solution to this crisis in our national leadership", the Republican Presidential nominee said, "is to defeat the Third term candidate."

Commenting on the Secretary of State's speech in Washington Saturday night, Willkie said Hull "has made it more than ever obvious that such a defence was essential to the maintenance of our influence in foreign affairs.

"The secretary's statement that as early as June, 1936, saying: 'Speaking for the government, I pointed out that we would not serve the cause of peace by not having adequate powers of self-defence', makes the whole tragedy of world conditions and our present precarious position in relation to them even more apparent.

"Had the President not then also been a candidate for re-election, he might have done better than merely sending up verbal trial balloons to see how the popular emotion ran toward foreign events. He could have given an effective leadership then that would have saved us from what the Secretary of State now calls 'the gravity of the present situation'.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Greece declared war on Italy today in the face of a three-hour ultimatum demanding territorial concessions and free passage of Italian troops through the tiny kingdom. Italian bombs fell on Greek soil, killing and wounding citizens while the Greek army of 100,000 indifferently armed men rushed to defence posts behind the newly-strengthened "Metaxas Line" of fortifications.

Authorities in London said the axis aggression against Greece would bring into operation the guarantee of Greek territorial integrity offered on April 13, 1939, by former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain—provided Greece resists Italy.

Plans were reported being hastened to provide Greece with all "advisable" aid without delay and it was believed likely that eastern Mediterranean units of the Royal Navy already were en route to Grecian waters.

Premier John Metaxas of Greece, faced with an ultimatum delivered at 2 a.m. when practically the whole nation was asleep, unhesitatingly rejected it and issued orders for general mobilization.

This morning Athenians rushed through the streets, waving Greek, British and Turkish flags and shouting anti-Italian slogans. Belgrade reports said Turkey also had declared war on Italy, but there was no confirmation elsewhere and the reports were believed at least premature.

The position of Turkey, an ally of Greece, aroused keen interest, however, for there was reason to believe the aggression against Greece might be a prelude to an Italian attempt to march to the Dardanelles.

Italian troops, characteristically, were reported to have struck along the Greek-Albanian border half an hour before the ultimatum was due to expire. They were said to number 10 or 11 divisions of about 200,000 men and to be supplied from bases established well before today's event.

Rome authorities who have been drumming up "incidents" along the Albanian border ever since August when they accused Greek citizens of beheading an Albanian bandit, Daut Hoggia whom they called a "patriot", claimed today that Greece was in danger of falling into British hands—the old axis excuse for conquest. Today they also blamed the Greeks for alleged bomb explosions on Albanian soil.

Greek troops faced their enemies across the wild mountainous country through which on Good Friday, 1939, Queen Geraldine of Albania and her four-day-old son fled before an Italian invasion while King Zog sought vainly to organize effective resistance.

Greece became the tenth country since Sept. 1, 1939, to find itself the victim of axis aggression. Germany's invasion of Poland started the second great war Sept. 3, 1939. Then there fell Denmark which submitted, Norway, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg and France which resisted. Rumania ousted King Carol and submitted quietly to German supervision.

Wilfred Lawson who plays the important role of the pastor in "Pastor Hall," now showing at the Capitol with a daily matinee.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 28 (AP). — The stock market today started the new week with mildly reactionary tendencies.

While dealings were relatively light from the opening on, and weakness a rarity, declines of fractions to a point or so were well distributed near the fourth hour.

Among stocks Allied Chemical dropped 4 on a few sales. In arrears most of the time were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Kennecott, Anaconda, Western Union, and N.Y. Central. Some of these eventually improved.

Ahead now and then were National Acme, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Goodyear, International Nickel and Texas Corp.

Lake Shore Mines, in the Canadian group, dipped ½ point. Distillers Seagram and, in the bond market, Canada 4s held unchanged. Other issues were inactive.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto Oct. 28.—(CP)—The Toronto Stock Market slumped under comparatively light trading through the early hours today. The gold stocks declined .81 in the index by noon and Industrials and Base Metal recorded smaller declines. Turnover totalled only 113,000 shares in the first three hours.

Chesterville, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Upper Canada and Aunor lost 5 to 10 cents. In the Base Metal list Steep Rock and Noranda were down moderately.

In dull action the newsprints, building stocks and steels lost some ground and the Foods and Senior Oils held steady.

Western Oils were practically out of the picture. Okalta was off 2 cents to 80.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Oct. 28 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at Barrie, Brantford and Stratford, bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Receipts: Cattle 1,630, calves 3,358, and sheep and lambs 6,127, hogs 2,532.

Early sales of cattle were made up of canners and cutters and a few plain steers. Canners and cutters sold at $2.50 to $3.25 and plain steers at $5 to $6.50. There were not enough sales to establish prices.

Plastic Veneer Used as 'Armor' to Protect Furniture

Chicago, Oct. 28.—(CP)—Manufacturers presented furniture with an "armor" of plastic veneer today as a comforting innovation for a housewife driven to tears over cigaret burns or alcohol stains on her favorite coffee table.

The makers said the plastic veneer on the pieces make their debut at the Fall National Home Furnishings Show in the American furniture mart is impervious to fire, water or scratches —lighted cigarettes may be dropped on it, highballs spilled on it, keys tossed on it without damage.

The new material, claimed to be 70 times stronger than wood, is used not only on tables, lamps, pianos and children's pieces, but on upholstered furniture and complete dining and bedroom suites. In fact, the show has a complete "house that plastic built".

BRITISH CENSORSHIP COMMENDED

New York, Oct. 28 (CP)—Great Britain's "frank and fair" methods in administering its censorship was commended editorially today by The New York Times which said "The German claims, on the other hnad, have been proved so wide of the mark that one should not hurry to accept the latest boasts of terrific damage to British convoys last week." Also praised was Britain's policy of maintaining the right of criticism. The Times concluded: "As long as such freedom continues, there is no need to worry over what thge British censor hides."

GREAT BRITAIN

been persistent indications recently of Turkey's determination to back up the Greeks against Italian threats and diplomatic circles here have every confidence that the Turks will stand firm in the face of Mussolini's invasion of their neighboring state and partner in the Balkan entente.

The attitude of Turkey is regarded here as vital in the sudden extension of the war to the Balkans. There have

No Information On Fleet.

Italy had ten or eleven divisions in Albania totalling 200,000 men and including one armored division and one Alpine division. This force is believed to have sufficient food and ammunition in advance bases to carry on a campaign in the Balkans even if sea communications with Italy are severed. The biggest concentration was at Argyrokastron.

Despite persistent reports, however, that the Mediterranean fleet was already steaming to the aid of Greece, authoritative sources said they had no information whatever on the possible beginning of a British campaign.

Pledge Given Greece In 1939.

Neville Chamberlain gave Greece the British guarantee on April 13, 1939, when he said: "In the event of any action being taken which clearly threatens the independence of Greece or Rumania, and which the Greek or Rumanian Governments respectively consider it vital to resist with their national forces, the government would feel themselves bound at once to lend the Greek or Rumanian government, as the case may be, all the support in their power."

"Italy had done her very best to make Greece abandon neutrality," authoritative sources said, "but the Greeks have maintained the most admirable calm. All they've done is take necessary defence measures in a most unprovocative manner."

These same sources said Emanuele Grazzi, Italian Minister to Greece, who presented the ultimatum, was the same man who assured Greece about a year ago on instructions from his government of "Italy's desire to continue the policy of peace and inaugurate a new period of mutual understanding."

Shortly after 1 p.m. it was stated that Britain has not yet replied to the Greek appeal, but that there is "no question" but that Britain will honor the terms of her 1939 guarantee provided Greece meets the conditions by resisting the attack.

Up to that time, it was stated, there had been no official confirmation here that hostilities actually had begun.

The usually well informed British Press Association earlier had said it was expected a reply to Greece's call for help would be given without delay.

The news agency said there was reason to believe details of the assistance to be given to Greece if she was attacked had already been worked out between the two governments.

Butter Eases One-Half Cent

Toronto, Oct. 28—Butter settled 1-2 cent a pound lower on the Toronto open produce market Saturday following the previous day's inactivity brought about by the query of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board as to butter stocks being held by individual dealers. The trading pace was still quiet Saturday but a little business was recorded in the first grade Ontario product at 28 1-2c a pound. Offerings remained light, with some sellers holding for the previous price of 29c a pound.

Further price shading occurred in top-grade egg prices to shipper as local demand switched to the lower-priced undergrades. Fresh receipts continued to arrive in small volume.

LINER EMPRESS

A communique said:

"The Admiralty and War Office regret to announce that the S.S. Empress of Britain has been lost as the result of enemy action. The Empress of Britain was attacked by enermy aircraft and set on fire and it became necessary to abandon ship.

"Salvage operations were commenced immediately but whilst in tow the Empress of Britain subsequently blew up and sank.

"Some 598 survivors out of the total on board of 643 have already been landed by British warships. Included in this number were military families and a small number of military personnel.

"The resolute and efficient handling of the Empress of Britain's anti-aircraft defences contributed largely to the high proportion of the total complement being saved."

Transported Canadians

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 28 (CP)—The Empress of Britain, whose loss was announced today by the British Admiralty, took part in the transportation of the first Canadian troops to the United Kingdom.

The Empress arrived here shortly after the outbreak of war and remained in port until late in December, when she sailed with troops of the First Division, Canadian Active Service Force. She returned late in December when she sailed with troops of the First Division, Canadian Active Service Force. She returned late in January and embarked more First Division troops for overseas.

First Bombed 150 Miles West of Ireland

The Empress was first bombed 150 miles west of Ireland on Saturday. The raider disappeared but soon returned and dropped more bombs. A number of persons were believed to have been killed by the bombs. Survivors said the raider also machine-gunned the ship.

Women and children were among the passengers who got into lifeboats without panic, some as long as six hours after the ship was bombed. They were picked up by British warships several hours later. Some lifeboats caught fire from incendiary bombs before they could be launched.

Babe Saved by Sailor

The youngest passenger was 11-months-old Neville Hast. He was tied with a blanket to the back of a sailor, who slid down a 60-foot rope to a lifeboat. Safe in Port Hotel with his parents and sister and brother, little Neville was laughing and trying to cram a piece of roll into his mouth when a reporter saw him.

Capt. Charles Howard Sapsworth, the commander was said to have been among the survivors. The Press Association said late today.

J. P. Donovan of Southampton, a survivor, said the captain manoeuvred the ship so that the forward part was clear of smoke and fire.

Survivor's Story

"Half an hour after the attack," Donovan said, "lifeboats from the starboard side came forward and soon filled up. We still had about 140 people in the forecastle and started making rafts in case no more boats came.

"One man who was in the water came up a rope to the deck and helped a sailor lower a boat which saved many lives.

"Because the fire was spreading quickly a number of boats got away with only four men in them, the idea being to get them safely afloat and then get people into them. The trouble was that four men could not row these heavy boats. A motorboat which could have towed them where they were needed most got a knock as it was being lowered and the engine wouldn't start. We finally came across a Royal Air Force officer and he managed to get the engine going.

"It was easy after that. I was one of the last to leave the ship Saturday afternoon between five and six hours after the attack. All these hours flames had been spreading forward and the heat and smoke were trying.

Flying Boat Brings News of Rescue Ships

"A British flying boat came along and signalled to us that rescue ships were on the way. We cheered. British warships came up about three quarters of an hour later. The Navy was grand and soon had all of us on board".

Another member of the crew said: "The German raider machine-gunned the bridge heavily but the machine-gunners there fought back bravely. The skipper was very cool. He stayed on the bridge until it was literally burning beneath his feet and he was on the forepart until the very end".

A member of the last group to leave the forecastle said the "foremast was red hot and paint was falling off like strips of canvas".

Gas Masks Worn

An engine-room officer said: "We kept the engines running about three quarters of an hour after the attack but smoke and fumes were so bad below that we had to wear our gasmasks as we went about our jobs. The lights were on but we needed electric torches as well to see what we were doing".

Several members of the ship's gun crews were killed and wounded by the raider's machine guns as they fired at it.

Some of the survivors were landed at a Scottish port yesterday and more at an Irish port today.

Experience Last December

Toronto, Oct. 28.—(CP)— The Liner Empress of Britain, whose loss through enemy action was announced by the Admiralty in London today, was lost for two days from the convoy which carried the 1st Division of the Canadian Active Service Force overseas last December.

The Empress strayed from the convoy during a heavy night fog on the Atlantic. Two destroyers protecting the convoy found her, and informed the convoy of the liner's safety by sending a Morse Code "blinker" message to "read Luke 15: VI", which says:—

"For I have found my sheep which was lost".

Montreal, Oct 28.— (CP)— The Empress of Britain met "her end gallantly in the service of the country", Sir Edward Beatty President of the Canadian Pacific Steamships Company, owners of the vessel, said in a statement here today.

All Canadians, said Sir Edward, will hear with "a feeling of deep regret that the gallant ship which for nine years proudly represented Canada in all the world's great ports has met her fate at the hands of the enemy". He expressed sympathy to the relatives of the victims.

FISHERMEN MISSING

Meaford, Ont., Oct. 28 (CP)—A search was being conducted today for a party of fishermen who were reported missing on Meaford Bay in a 30-foot cabin cruiser which is believed to have drifted out. The search started late yesterday when the cruiser, J. C. Pilligrim's "Mayflower" failed to return. It was believed a party from Brantford was aboard the vessel and that engine trouble was the cause of its failure to return to port.

(By the Canadian Press)

Ontario's week-end toll from fatal accidents was the unusually low figure of five according to reports received by The Canadian Press. Four deaths were attributed to highway accidents and the fifth to a shooting accident.

William Greenly, 63, farmer of the Eastern Ontario Warkworth district, suffered fatal injuries when he was struck by a car on the road near his home early Sunday. He died four hours later in hospital at Belleville. His son, Robert, 37, also was struck and suffered critical injuries. The car which struck them allegedly did not remain at the scene of the accident.

At the other end of the province near Grand Bend, on Lake Huron, Joseph Baker was killed instantly when a car operated by Ray Patterson of Grand Bend crashed into the rear of a cutting machine which Baker was chaining to the rear of his car. Baker was caught between the machine and his car.

Another fatality occurred at Essex, near Windsor when Mrs. Michael McCann 70, of Maidstone Township fell from a car operated by her son, Elmer, as another machine collided with it. Mrs. McCann fell headfirst to the pavement as the car door opened and she died almost instantly.

Hiram Benjamin Powers, 71, of St. Thomas was killed almost instantly when his car collided with another near London. Police said the other car, operated by Eric Facey 17, of Belton, Ont., struck the Powers machine and pushed it against a tree, throwing Powers over a fence.

The fifth fatality occurred near Port Hope when Billy Reeve, 14, of Port Britain was shot in the chest accidentally while duck shooting on the shores of Lake Ontario.

DICTATORS CONFER

Hitler arrived by special train at 11 a.m. (5 a.m. EDT).

Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German High Command, accompanied Hitler, as did Joachim Von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, who boarded the Fuehrer's train at Bologna.

Hitler was greeted by Mussolini and Italian Foreign Minister Ciano.

The Fuehrer and the Duce, standing in an open car, were followed by their foreign ministers down the road to the Palazzo Vecchia where they were scheduled to talk.

Laval Might Join Conferees

Political circles thought they might discuss terms for a separate peace for France. Usually well-informed sources thought Vice-Premier Laval of the Vichy regime might yet come to Italy to join the conferees.

Hitler presumably came to inform Mussolini of his talks with Laval, Marshal Petain, chief of the Vichy regime and Dictator Franco of Spain, observers said. Franco also may attend the conference, it was reported.

It was the second meeting of the Axis chiefs within the month. They met at the Brenner Pass Oct. 4 in a conference at which unofficial circles reported they agreed on a show-down with Greece as well as negotiations for a peace settlement with France.

ATHENS BOMBED, FOUR ARE KILLED

Italian Planes Flew Over Capital and Another Wave Visits Patras

Athens, Oct. 28 (AP) — The Corinth and Tatoi airdrome, 12 miles from Athens, were bombed by Italian planes today and three other waves of Italian bombers attacked Patras, bombing public buildings and residences with a toll of four killed and 17 wounded.

The airdrome near Athens was attacked at 11:30 a.m. (5:30 a.m. EDT.)

Half an hour earlier, a communique said three waves of five planes each bombed the port of Patras, west of Athens.

The communique said:

"Port installations, court buildings, four mills, a telegraph office and certain houses were bombed. Minor damage was caused to the buildings. Four are dead and 17 wounded."

BRITISH CAPTAIN

March, 1918. The commander and four others were lost, but Harland got away in a lifeboat and was picked up by a destroyer.

The present war found him soon after its start in the "front line" on the S.S. Rockpool, 300 miles west of Ireland.

Sub Opens Fire On Freighter.

"It was Oct. 19, 1939, at 12:45 p.m.," he relates, "when a submarine opened fire with a deck gun at about three quarters of a mile."

A hit almost certainly would have doomed the vessel, loaded with 8,350 tons of iron ore from Newfoundland.

"Our amateur gun crew commenced to return the fire, while we zigzagged the ship according to the fall of the shells.

"The battle went on for two hours; we fired thirteen shells and got three hits. The German fired between 70 and 80, and never hit us once.

"At a quarter of three I left him in a sinking condition. We later learned a British destroyer rescued part of his crew."

That exploit brought Harland the Order of the British Empire.

He took most of the Rockpool's crew to a new ship—the S. S. Hawnby. Last April 20, the Hawnby struck a magnetic mine "southeast of England", and "we all got out of the ship safely in lifeboats and were picked up by a naval pinnace."

He was in command of another freighter. On Sept 8, 200 miles west of Ireland, the ship was attacked by a twin-engined German bomber. After a 30-minute assault the bomber flew away leaving the freighter damaged but still able to navigate.

POLICE COURT

Nine persons appeared in city police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today charged with consuming liquor in a place other than their residence, contrary to the L. C. A. All pleaded guilty and were assessed "ten and costs."

The mass influx of violators of the L. C. A. was the result of a raid on the residence of C. F. Robinson, 29½ East Bridge Street, late last night, at which time city police seized a quantity of beer and liquor, it is said.

The raid came after Constables Evans and Wright apprehended three men, Patrick J. Doyle, George Boyce and Norman Gallagher, all employees of a construction concern at the R.C.A.F., emerging from the Bridge Street address. On search at the police station three bottles of liquor, one partly consumed, were found in the men's possession. Later, headed by Sergt. Arthur Booth, Constables Evans, Wright and Arnott raided the premises at 29½ East Bridge Street and seized a quantity of liquor. Today Mr. Robinson was charged with keeping liquor for sale, and after pleading guilty the matter was adjourned for one week at the request of R. D. Arnott, K.C., counsel for the accused.

Napanee Man Pleads Not Guilty

Herbert Breeze, Napanee, pleaded not guilty to a charge of intoxication and his case was enlarged for a week. The charges, police stated, arose out of the recent removal of a highway sign, which was found abandoned on East Dundas Street last week. Police allege Breeze was acquainted with the highway sign episode prank.

Makes Restitution

Fred Ward, Picton barrister, appeared on behalf of Eugene Hicks, Picton, who was charged with failing to remain at the scene of a motor accident. "My client has a responsible job at the construction of one of Canada's new airports," Mr. Ward explained regarding Hicks' absence from court. Mr. Ward also revealed that his client had made restitution in the matter, which amounted to $15.00. The charge was reduced to one of careless driving and a fine was paid.

Drunks Pay Fines

Several drunks appeared and entered pleas of guilty. One man asked for an extension of time in which to pay the assessed fine. "I am working for a firm here in the city," the accused started to tell the court.

"You mean you were working for them," remarked Chief Kidd, indicating the man was no longer employed following his arrest.

"That's pretty steep for a drunk fine, isn't it?" remarked another drunk as he learned the fine and costs amounted to $16.35.

Two motorists paid one dollar and costs after being convicted of failing to stop at a Stop Street sign in the city. "This fine will be greater in the future," warned His Worship.

Checkerboard Love

A FIRST-RUN McCLURE SERIAL.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

When Victor Quinn hurried into the Adams House bar he glanced apprehensively along the line of men at the mahogany. When Jeffrey called him he sounded as if he might have been drinking, and by this time he might not be in shape for a satisfactory conference.

"A gentleman over in the corner wants to speak to you, sir." It was a white-jacketed waiter murmuring.

To Victor's relief, Jeffrey was impeccably dressed and apparently sober. He grinned cheerfully as his friend approached, but he looked haggard in spite of the attempt. "Saw you sizing up the bar flies," he laughed. "All ready to drag me out, weren't you? Sit down. Mighty glad to see you."

"Glad to see YOU," Victor returned, scanning his face closely.

"No, I haven't been hitting it up," Jeffrey assured him. "How about a cocktail? We can eat here, too."

"In that case, I think I'll have a chop and a bottle of ale. If I remember correctly, that's something of a specialty here."

"My word! Going jolly well British, what?" Jeff beckoned to an expectant waiter and gave the order.

"You look as if you'd been working hard," Victor ventured. "What have you been doing with yourself?"

"Me? Oh, I'm in the way of becoming a captain of industry. Been working for my daddy-in-law for quite some time. He turned out to be a very decent chap after he was convinced that I was done with the fleshpots and wanted to settle down. I'm in the sales. Strange to say, I've been getting quite a kick out of it."

"That's great."

"Maybe. The old gentleman has a notion at the moment that it might be a fair idea to send me abroad for a change. There's an opening in the Brussels office and I can speak French well enough to argue for our product."

"That sounds fine. What does Mrs. Castle think? All set to go with you, I suppose."

"Not exactly. As a matter of fact, Vic, she isn't here for a time."

Victor felt his heart sink. Somethink wrong between Olive and Jeff. That accounted for his summons. "Do you care to tell me where she is?" he asked quietly.

"Reno. In residence."

There was a moment's silence, broken by Victor's sympathetic, "I'm sorry".

"But not surprised," Jeffrey finished bitterly. "I guess I asked for it. I won't contest, of course. And there you are."

"But I can't get it yet," Victor pondered. "I knew that Olive was very much averse to coming back to Parville—didn't want you to be a small-town lawyer and all that. But I supposed she would be delighted to have her father take you in."

"That's the whole point, Vic. The vice-presidents' jobs were all taken and I elected to start in and learn the business. I couldn't see my way clear to take every other afternoon off and play around all night. Anyway, matters kept getting worse and worse until the big bust came. I could have bought salvation any time by turning gigolo or something. And I couldn't."

"Naturally not. May I ask what Mr. Harrison thinks?"

"Oh, he took my side right from the start. He wants me to stay on as if nothing had happened. That Brussels idea was sort of an easy way out for me. But I can't see it, of course."

"Why?"

"Oh, maybe there is a good excuse. But I can't quite down it for some reason or other."

The waiter arrived at that point and the subject was dropped for the time being. The two men ate in silence until Victor remarked in a casual fashion: "Had a very pleasant time last evening at your house. I happened to mention inadvertently that I had a birthday, and your mother very kindly asked me to dinner."

"How are the folks?"

"Your mother didn't look so well, Jeff. I knew that she had rather a difficult winter of it, but she insists she's much better."

"Listen, fella." Jeffrey laid down his knife and fork and looked steadily into his friend's eyes. "I know what you're leading up to and you may as well understand now that there's nothing doing. Don't get the idea that I don't know what I've done to my people. You'll never know what I've paid for that, or how I've dreamed of making it up to them by becoming a success at something. And now that's all washed up along with everything else."

"Listen, Jeff. You belong there. I don't. Oh, I know you're getting read to spring that one about not knowing any law. All that job takes is a little horse sense, no professional wizardry. What's more, Miss Annie seems to be getting well. It wouldn't surprise me much to see her back looking for her old job. It would be a cinch for you. I don't want to seem to be going soft, Jeff, but I can't help thinking of your father and mother. You've no idea what it would do to them . . . for them, I mean. Think it over."

"Not necessary, old man. It's decent of you. Just what I would expect. But that's out. No matter what you do. For the present, I'm staying away from Parville. After it all blows over, that will be something else. I have no plans. But, believe it or not, this experience with Harrison's has given me a lot of confidence in myself."

"Look here, Jeff, we seem to have the cards mostly face up. Why did you call me last night? Did you really want to spill? Or are you willing to have me help you if I can?"

"Guess it was partly habit, Vic. I was beginning to feel pretty ragged and I thought maybe you could brace up the old morale a bit. You have."

"What about your father getting in on this?"

"I don't know. I've never told anybody about our last session. He practically threw me out, even if it was done with a fine gesture. Like that old Roman geezer who ordered his son to the headsman, or something."

"Maybe you're thinking of Abraham and Isaac when the Lord showed the old man the ram tangled in the bonnie brier bush. I don't mind being . . . no, don't say the goat! It WAS a ram. I remember distinctly. Anyway, let me be it. Let us tell your father. He's going to find out sooner or later. I believe it will give him a big lift."

Jeffrey drained the last of his ale and sat staring in deep preoccupation at the empty glass.

"On one condition," was the final judgment. "Exactly one, Vic."

"Say on."

"That you don't pull any fine gesture on your own account . . . about easing out of the picture and that rot."

"Maybe he'll ease me out."

"Hardly. You can make it plain that I'm not coming home to stay, now or in the future. I should like to feel free to visit, on my mother's account, you know. And in your diplomatic fashion, you might drop a gentle hint that the first move is up to him."

"O.K."

"I have your word for it?"

"My word of honor."

Victor had attended to the one errand he had in the city and daylight found him on the road to Parville. He stopped en route for a hasty breakfast and was in the office five minutes after Judge Castle arrived.

He walked into the latter's room, closed the door after him and plunged into a situation that he had been attempting to rehearse as he drove. "Good morning, Judge. I have some information that I believe I should share with you. I have just driven down from the city after spending an evening with Jeffrey."

The Judge tugged off his spectacles and frowned. "Well?" he demanded harshly.

"Jeffrey looks fine . . . been working hard. He is with the Harrison office and by all accounts is doing well."

"Humph! And did he ask you to submit that report?"

"He did not ask me to tell you anything. Not even that Mrs. Castle is residing in Reno at the present time."

The Judge sat back weakly in his chair. "Good God!" he ejaculated. "She's divorcing him. When will he be here?"

"He's not coming back, sir. Made it very plain. In fact, he's talking about going abroad. But you will be able to find him at the office or at Mr. Harrison's house. He's still staying there."

Judge Castle fumbled his massive watch from his waistcoat pocket. "I can make the nine-forty. Quinn, will you phone Mrs. Castle that I have been called away? She will hear from me this evening."

BRITISH EMPIRE'S GREATEST ASSET IS HER HONOR

Rev. J. O. Watts of Queen's University Preaching at Tabernacle United Church Anniversary Spoke on Value of Life as Beyond Material Things

"The greatest asset of the British Empire is that honor that men recognize in her. Ghandhi clamoring for home rule for India, yet advising his people against doing anything to hurt Britain in her hour of trial. Egypt, 60 years ago a dependency, now a free nation. The fundamental liability of her enemies is that none can trust them, none honor them," the Rev. J. O. Watts, M.A., mathematics professor at Queen's University, declared here on Sunday.

Speaking before capacity congregations at the anniversary services of Tabernacle United Church, the guest speaker, who spoke at both services, pointed out in his morning address that, "life is something beyond material things. Buckingham Palace is not the centre of the Empire, it is a symbol of its presence; St. Paul's Cathedral may be wrecked, yet it is not the Church; Westminster is not the Houses of Parliament. Parliament is housed in men, not buildings," he said.

"Somerset House is not an imperishable memorial of life but from it comes a fellowship that never dies, is enshrined in the hearts of people, and is something not of a material sense."

Fellowship, Biggest Asset

Assets of the Empire such as guns, planes, tanks are of a secondary nature; men, homes are real assets, but the biggest asset is that inner fellowship among her people that can never be broken on a battlefield.

The speaker deplored the fact that certain church groups are isolating themselves in their beliefs. One group, he said, have the notion they are God's chosen people. The Christian faith is not one that says any group are chosen. All people are alike in God's eyes. World forces are not all evil, for there is the predominating force of the Master's love. Hatred, evil and death are doomed to die, and the church must stand for the attitude of values that cry "Hallelujah."

Another group, Professor Watts, pointed out, would have the world a thing of evil and the best to be done is to pluck a few brands from the burning.

A Great Host

"I say, there will be a great host that no man can number, at the end. I claim the world for the God who gave it and for the Christ who died for it. There is lots of evil, but the finest things in life survive. The best things you have done will greet you at the end of the day, not an accumulation of sins," declared the speaker.

"I do not like the expressions, 'day of judgment' and 'day of reckoning'," he continued. "It will be a day of great reunion. Meanwhile the minimum we can do is spare 1 1-2 hours per week to think over the things worth while; to make up our minds about the things we should fight for and if needs be, die for."

Children should not be robbed of their heritage, Professor Watts declared, illustrating his point with the decision of the three sons of the famous German pastor Niemoeller, who have entered theological colleges because of their admiration of their father's stand.

The measure of men, he said, is not of material value but a measure eternal that goes on into the future. Rome rose and fell but Christ lived on. Eternal forces are mustering great incidents in life that are coming to men and women. The days of slums are numbered. He urged young people to make up their minds that life is better further on. The finest things await them.

Band Present

Highlighting the services were the fine melodies of the Toronto Scottish Band, formerly the Metropolitan Silver Band of Toronto. This fine musical organization played accompaniment to the hymns besides rendering several sacred selections. They occupied the choir loft while the choir sat in seats arranged to the right.

Prior to the morning service, the band paraded through the principal city streets, where their colorful Highland garb evinced admiration of church-goers and others abroad at that time. The Rev. D. T. McClintock conducted both services.

On Sunday evening Bridge Street and Holloway Street United congregations worshipped at the Tabernacle. The band of the Toronto Scottish took part in the service and rendered a special sacred concert at the close. The seating capacity of the church was taxed to the utmost by the large congregation.

Half Million Bid N. Y. World's Fair Goodbye, Sunday

(By R. J. Anderson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Oct. 28.—(CP) —The world of tomorrow passed today into the world of yesterday.

It went out in a blaze of glory at midnight last night with more than 500,000 persons crowding its 1,216 acres. At sunrise today wreckers moved in to begin the dismantling process that eventually will turn the site on Flushing Meadows into a city park.

Dedicated to peace and freedom, the New York World's Fair saw world peace crumble during its two-year run. Eleven countries lost their freedom.

It saw death—two detectives died when a bomb planted in the British Pavilion exploded during police examination.

The Fair ended on a note of sadness. At midnight a bugler walked up the heliclina, the perisphere ramp which afforded a panoramic view of the gigantic exhibition. Hushed crowds heard the soft notes of the Last Post and the World's Fair of 1940 officially was closed.

45,000,000 Attended

Billed at its opening in 1939 as an exhibition that "will predict, may even dictate, the shape of things to come," the fair officially was termed a success. Its investors will receive only 38 cents on the dollar but an estimated $1,000,000,000 was put into circulation. Some 45,000,000 paid admissions in the 365 days returned net profit of $6,000,000 to the corporation.

The World's Fair of 1939 and 1940 started out pompous and profligate and wound up penny-pinching but proud. Its site has been labelled variously as the "Harlequin Heath" and the "Loco Lea," but as it closed forever it drew from the New York Times editorial commendation for the change to "a dream from a swamp and a heap of refuge dumps."

The total two-year attendance was announced by Board Chairman Harvey D. Gibson as 45,008,365, with 19,191,920 in 1940. The record one-day throng of 537,9952 persons was set yesterday, last day of the fair. Each person received a banner: "I was there closing day, Oct. 27, 1940."

War cast its shadow over the big show. Holland, Belgium, Norway, Denmark, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Luxembourg, Estonia, overran by invading troops maintained their exhibition buildings under difficulty. Russia dropped out after the first year and its pavilion, biggest in the fair, was razed.

American reaction to Canada's display designed to attract tourists to the Dominion, in the words of pavilion officials, was "very, very good." They reported particularly large attendance at the pavilion's exhibition of scenic movies yesterday during the last-day rush.

GREEK MINISTER MAKES PUBLIC ALL TELEGRAMS

Italy in Its Ultimatum Demanded Strategic Bases in Greek Territory for Duration of War

DEMANDS REFUSED

London, Oct. 28 (CP)—Greek Minister Charalambos Simopoulos made public a telegram from his government today which said Italy's rejected ultimatum contained demands for strategic bases in Greek territory for the duration of the war.

The text of the telegram follows:

"At 3 o'clock this morning the Italian minister remitted personally a note by which the Italian government accused the Greek government of having tolerated its territorial waters and its coasts and ports to be utilized by the British fleet during war operations.

"Further: That they have favored supplies to the alien British forces; that they have allowed the organization of a service of military information in the Greek Archipelago against Italy.

"The Italian government must remind the Greek government of the provocative action against the Albanian nation by the terrorist policy that they adopted towards the population of Tsamouria; and through the consistent tendencies to create disorder on the Albanian side of the frontiers.

Italy Very Determined

"All this cannot possibly be tolerated any more on the part of Italy. The neutrality of Greece has become more and more a pure and simple appearance. The Italian government subsequently reached the decision to ask the Greek government, as a guarantee of its neutrality and as a guarantee of the Italian security, the facility of occupying by its armed forces for the duration of the present conflict against England certain strategic points of the Greek territory.

"The Italian government asks from the Greek government not to oppose itself to this occupation and not to obstruct free passage of the troops destined to execute this occupation.

Wanted Orders Issued

"The Italian government asks the Greek government to give immediately the necessary orders to the military authorities so that this occupation may be completed in a specific way.

"If the Italian troops were to encounter resistance, this resistance would be met by arms, and the Greek government would assume responsibility for the consequences.

"The Greek Prime Minister answered the Italian Minister that he considered the contents of the communication and its character of ultimatum as a declaration of war on the part of Italy against Greece.

"The Italian minister replied that the movement of Italian troops would begin at six o'clock this morning."

Chinese Communist Party Becoming Worry of Chinese

30,000 Red Troops Launch Well-Organized Attack Along 500 Miles of Japan-Controlled Railways

MANY KILLED

By J. D. WHITE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Peiping, North China, Oct. 28 (AP)—Even the Chinese are getting worried about the growing power of the Chinese Communist army in North China.

Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's followers fear that Communist successes in Guerilla warfare with the Japanese will convert residents of North China to Communism.

The Japanese are talking—with a new note of respect in their voice—about what the Chinese Communist Army can do when it takes a notion.

The biggest Chinese attack since the war began took place at midnight, Aug. 20. The war in the West squeezed the story off the world's front pages, but here's what the Japanese admit:—

About 30,000 Chinese Red troops launched a "remarkably well-organized attack" along 500 miles of Japanese-controlled railways in North China. They blew up bridges and destroyed track on the Shihchiachuang-Taiyuanfu line, broke the line and destroyed telegraph and telephone lines along the Peiping-Hankow Railway.

During subsequent clashes the Japanese maintain they killed more than 6,000 Chinese soldiers with the loss of only seven of their own troops. Reports from independent sources tell a different story, however.

Foreigners ridicule Japanese claims about inflicting heavy losses on the Chinese Reds. They explain that such losses are impossible because the Communists are so experienced at evading the Japanese that the latter never see them.

Japanese newspapers credit the Communist with 300,000 well-trained and well-equipped regulars in North China and speak of millions of partly-trained local militia in the Red reserves.

They are conducting regular Communist Governments in the northern sections of Hopeh, Shansi and Shensi Provinces and are trying to extend their influence.

CARRYING ON—IN STEEL HELMETS

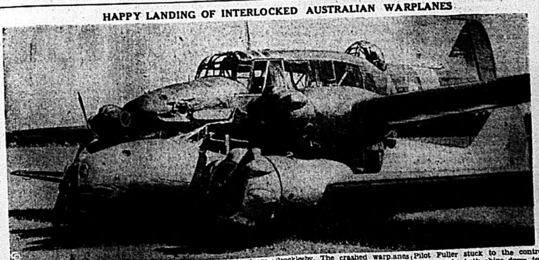
Girl workers in a North of England munitions plant are pictured after they had been supplied with steel helmets, to be worn by them when the "alert" is sounded, or when the roof-spotter warns against approaching aircraft. There seems plenty of courage in these young faces.

Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to England, is shown as he made a last-minute inspection of London's bomb wreckage before he boarded a Pan-American clipper to return to the United States. Two R.A.F. men are lifting the rope barrier to permit Mr. Kennedy's closer inspection. Reports have it that Mr. Kennedy may resign his ambassadorial post. Other reports say he is returning to the U.S. to make confidential reports to the President on the progress of the war.

VICTIMS OF NAZI BOMBS

Head bandaged, a victim of Nazi bombs, LEFT, sadly treads over a pile of rubble as he salvages belongings from his London home.. With a temporary dressing around his head another air raid victim is led away by an A.R.P. warden after being dug from the ruins of his home. He is carrying his dog who managed to get into a crevice of wreckage and more or less escaped injury. He was rescued with his master.

HAPPY LANDING OF INTERLOCKED AUSTRALIAN WARPLANES



T[illegible] of what aviation experts call "the most amazing feat in aviation history" is graphically pictured here a few moments after the happy ending to a near-tragic sky drama. Flying from the Forrest [illegible] aviation school, near Wagga, N.S.W., to Corowa, Flying Officer L. G. Fuller of the Royal Australian Air Force in a big reconnaissance plane collided with another plane of similar type, 1,000 feet above Brocklesby. The crashed warplanes were interlocked, with Fuller's plane on top, the other held fast underneath. Pilot and observer of the lower plane bailed out. So did the observer of Fuller's plane, but Pilot Fuller stuck to the controls and brought both ships down to a perfect landing and stepped out unhurt. On examination the warplanes were found to be only slightly damaged.

Probabilities

British Troops Landed at Corfu, Athens Hears

Air Base May be Established—Crack Greek Troops Hurled Against Italians

Athens, Oct. 29 (AP)—British troops were reported today to have landed on the Island of Corfu, in the Ionian Sea just off the Greek-Albanian border, as crack Greek troops were hurled into action against attacking Italians along the border.

The reported British landing brought a surge of confidence that real aid was at hand.

It was said the British Forces planned to establish an air base on Corfu from which Royal Air Force planes could help guard Greek cities from attack and, at the same time, be within striking distance for counter attacks on important Italian objectives, just across the Ionian Sea.

Reports of the landing on Corfu followed unconfirmed accounts yesterday that British naval units beat back Italian warships approaching the island and that British bluejackets landed at another Greek-defended island nearby.

Unable to Dislodge Greeks

Government circles declared that attacking Italians, striking through passes along the mountainous boundary between Greece and Albania, had been unable to drive back the Greek defenders.

The troops rushed in to hold the

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Autumn leaves! Many trees and shrubs show gorgeous leaf coloring in the fall, the green of summer turning to red, yellow, purple, and their variations. The weather is only secondary to these changes. As long as chlorophyll pigment is being actually made, the leaves stay green; but as fall approaches and the leaves have done their work, less and less chlorophyll is made. Other compounds are also present and these form the bases of the autumn colors. The particular color is hereditary, like the blue and brown eyes of people. Thus maple leaves turn red and ash leaves purple. The leaves of the same species will vary in different places and even on the same branch, due to different condition of temperature, light and moisture.

R.C.A.F. MEMBER INSTANTLY KILLED NEAR OSHAWA

2 SERIOUSLY HURT

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 29 —(CP)—Leading Aircraftman G. E. Macdonald of Toronto, proceeding to Trenton air base for further training with two companions, was killed today when the car he was driving collided with a truck on the highway 1 1-2 miles east of Oshawa.

His companions, George Angus Little of Winnipeg and Robert Hudson of Shawinigan Falls, Que., were brought to hospital here with serious injuries. Little lost an ear and two teeth and Hudson suffered a fractured skull and lacerations.

All three airmen had graduated from the Jarvis, Ont., air training school yesterday, receiving their wings on completion of training at the Jarvis school of the first class of air gunners and air observers.

Everett Hanna of Corbyville, driver of the truck carrying three horses, told police that the car driven by Macdonald sideswiped his vehicle. The car was demolished and two of the horses on the truck were thrown to the highway. Hanna and his companion Grant Cole of Corbyville, were uninjured.

The three young air force members were driving to Trenton after attending R.C.A.F. graduation exercises yesterday afternoon at Jarvis.

GERMAN PUBLIC IGNORANT OF NEW BATTLELINE

People Know of Ultimatum to Greece But Not a Whisper Given of Greece's Decision to Fight

FLORENCE CONFERENCE

Nazi Press Still Demands French Action if France Seeks Place in Hitler's Europe

Berlin, Oct. 29 (AP)—The German public knew today that Italy had served an ultimatum on Greece but it was kept in ignorance of the fact that a new battlefront for the Axis actually had developed.

Nazi newspapers published the text of the 24-hour-old Italian ultimatum with comment from Rome as to why it was sent but made no mention of Greece's decision to fight.

Instead, columns were devoted to the Florence meeting of Mussolini and Hitler, with assurances that it was all part of a development toward the Axis vision of a new Europe.

(In Madrid it was reported Gen. Jose Varela, Spanish War Minister had flown to Cabo Yubi, Rio De Oro, Africa, on a trip believed closely connected with the recent conversations between Hitler and Gen-

198,030 Tons Shipping Lost During Week Ending Oct. 21

London, Oct. 29 —(CP)— The Admiralty announced today that 45 merchant ships totalling 198,030 tons were lost as the result of "enemy action" during the week ending Oct. 21.

The losses were the heaviest for any single week with the exception of that ending June 23, when 209,984 tons of shipping were listed as lost. The latter week included losses in the withdrawal of British troops from Dunkerque.

ARRESTED FOR 8-YEAR-OLD CRIME

Ottawa, Oct. 29—(CP)—An eight-year search for Joseph Omer Leclair, 45, Ottawa, came to an end yesterday when police arrested him for converting $335 to his own use in connection with operations of a savings association. A warrant was issued for Leclair's arrest in 1932. At that time Leclair was in northern Ontario. Yesterday a woman pointed out Leclair to Constable Eric MacDonald and the arrest was made.

Tribute Paid Canadian Doctor On Empress for Saving Many Lives

By LOUIS HUNTER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 29 (CP Cable)—Six of the crew of the Empress of Britain, destroyed by German air attack Saturday, are known to be dead and 19 are missing, it was officially stated today. It is not known how many of 20 other persons unaccounted for have been killed.

All children and women, except one, who were aboard are safe. A junior ship's officer said one man out of 22 in a lifeboat was lost when the boat capsized after being lowered from the after end of the Empress. The others managed to cling to spars until they were picked up.

Survivors related new stories of heroism aboard the blazing ship. Five men with fire extinguishers and hoses held back flames from the main stairway and enabled many below to escape.

The first move of Capt. Charles Sapsworth, the ship's commander, when he got ashore was to telephone his wife.

"I told her I was quite all right and not to worry," he said. "I did not know when I would reach home so it was a surprise for my wife when I turned up at the house. Was she glad to see me?"

Survivors said the German raider dropped six high explosives. Some of them, together with a number of incendiary bombs, scored hits. The liner's gunners are convinced the plane was damaged. They said that one of its engines was missing when it made off.

Able Seaman A. Hayter of Portsmouth said the bomber scored a direct hit on one of the liner's guns. He added that "Jerry killed a woman on deck while machine-gunning."

Able Seaman C. L. Softley of Portsmouth paid tribute to the ship's surgeon, Dr. Edward Joseph Delorme of Hamilton, Ont., who rowed from one rescue ship to another dealing with the wounded.

"He worked tirelessly and saved many lives Softley said of the surgeon.

Chief Engineer E. Redmond is feared drowned. Survivors among the crew include James East, ninth engineer, and J. Brawley, chief third class steward.

JAPAN DECIDES TO 'DEFER' ACTION

Some Tokyo Papers State Japan Will Lend Italy Support but Will Remain Non-Belligerent in Europe

Tokyo, Oct. 29 —(AP)— Japan was reported today to have postponed a decision as to her obligations under her alliance with Germany and Italy with reference to extension of the war to Greece.

Tokyo newspapers said a cabinet meeting today voted to defer action "pending further developments." Some papers predicted Japan would lend Italy political and economic support but would not find it necessary to abandon her non-belligerent status in Europe.

BRITISH ARMIES TO BE AIDED BY ROYAL AIR FORCE

Government Has No Intention of Creating an Army Air Arm Says Statement

STATEMENT WELCOMED

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 29 (CP)—Britain's armies in future campaigns of the Second Great War will be aided by squadrons of the Royal Air Force —perhaps under direct orders of the army—but the government has no intention of creating an Army Air Arm.

A statement in the House of Lords by Lord Snell, government spokesman, made clear the R.A.F. will be maintained as a separate entity.

He was replying to a speech by Lord Trenchard, Chief of the Air Staff from 1918 until 1929, who denounced suggestions there should be a split-up in the R.A.F. Lord Trenchard, who served with the Canadian Scouts in the Boer War, contended the youngest of Britain's

BRITISH NAVY'S HELP FOR GREECE "ALREADY BEGUN"

Assertion Made by A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty

NO LANDING AT CRETE

Expressed Appreciation of Wonderful Aid Given by United States

London, Oct. 29—(CP)—The British navy's help for Greece "has already begun," A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, asserted today.

Military circles at the same time said Britain is giving Greece "military assistance . . . in the widest sense of the term," although these same sources denied reports that British forces had been landed on the island of Crete.

Mr. Alexander said the Mediterranean fleet's "greatest difficulty" has been caused by the Italian navy's "long periods of rest in harbors."

Long Time at Sea

He also observed that the defection of the French navy had caused British ships and men to be "continuously at sea for longer periods than at any time in our naval history."

The First Lord expressed appreciation for the United States transfer of 50 destroyers and said: "I hope the Royal Navy may look for even greater co-operation."

The reports of a British troop landing on Crete were characterized by military circles as stories circulated by the enemy to create confusion and justify Italian action.

Reports received last night indicated action along the Greek-Albanian frontier had been limited largely to artillery duels. The Greeks were reported to have retired to some advance posts, and informants said the Greek towns of Florina and Kastoria had been bombed.

PET GOAT FLUSHES GAME

Manchester, N.Y., Oct. 29—(AP)—This is a hunting story, not a fish yarn. Sam Abbott says he's using his pet goat now instead of his hunting dog to flush game. The goat proved its worth, according to Sam, when it broke loose from its tether and went pell mell after a rabbit which the hunter promptly shot. A few seconds later a loud "baaa" drew Sam's attention just as the goat flushed a pheasant. Sam bagged that one, too.

NEWS REPORTS OF HOSTILITIES ISSUED IN ROME

Dispatch Says State of War Declared in All of Albania Except Three Provinces

ITALIAN COMMUNIQUE

Rome, Oct. 29—(AP)—The first reports here that Italian forces have attacked along the Greek-Albanian frontier were published here today.

The newspaper Il Messagero published a dispatch from Tirana which said rejection by Athens of an Italian ultimatum yesterday "produced inevitable consequences along the southern frontier."

A state of war was said to have been declared in all of Albania, except the three provinces bordering Yugoslavia.

Rome, Oct. 29—(AP)—The Italian High Communique today claimed "the advance is continuing" over the Greek border from Albania. Italian troops were said to have penetrated "enemy territory" at several points.

(Reports from Athens indicated the Greek army continues to hold the Italians. There were some indications the Greeks had retired to advance posts.)

The communique claimed the Italian Air Force repeatedly bombed objectives assigned to it and that fires were started in the Port of Patras. Installations along the Corinth canal and in the naval base of Preveza also were attacked, the communique claimed.

(A Greek communique said no damage was caused in Italian air attacks on military objectives.)

Enough Grain in Canada to Fill Britain's Needs for Three Years

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 29 —(CP Cable)—Canada has "enough grain at present to meet all Britain's needs for three years," Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Canadian Minister of Agriculture, said today.

The Dominion is able to produce the United Kingdom's bacon requirements for next year, the Minister told newsmen. Canada is able to send this country enough bacon to make up the gap caused by the loss of supplies from Denmark.

Mr. Gardiner said the conclusion of agreements on the marketing of Canadian food products in the United Kingdom awaits his return to Ottawa shortly and discussions with officials there.

"No final agreements will be reached while I am here," he declared.

Britain is "prepared to take all she can" of Canadian grain. The Minister estimated it will cost approximately $600,000,000 to finance the farmers pending disposal of the existing wheat surplus. He was confident that an agreement can be reached between the British and Canadian governments on this problem.

Much Stored in Britain

Mr. Gardiner said "a considerable quantity" of Canadian wheat is at present stored in the United Kingdom but he dod not state exactly how much.

The Dominion is faced with the problem of marketing about 720,000,000 bushels of wheat after allowing for domestic consumption of 130,000,000 bushels—the average annual figure, Mr. Gardiner added. Britain's average of annual imports from all countries is 200,000,000 bushels.

"Canada has increased production in certain lines, mainly dairy products and bacon, as much as possible" the Agriculture Minister continued. "Unforeseen events resulted in our having greater supplies than was anticipated, particularly in bacon. The position has been made known to the British government and our supplies will be made available to meet Britain's needs."

Seventy per cent' of Canada's cheese production at present is coming to the United Kingdom," Mr. Gardiner said.

He added that he had had talks on "general lines" with Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, concerning news going to Canada of Britain's war effort, but nothing definite had been decided.

BONFIRE OF LEAVES GIVES BRIGADE RUN

Dense clouds of smoke emanating from a bonfire of dried leaves on South John Street brought the city fire department to the scene early today when residents at the lower end of the street became alarmed at the density of the smoke. The department searched in vain for a threatening blaze but returned to the fire station upon learning the only blaze in progress was a bonfire where leaves were being burned. "With the falling of the leaves we can expect these calls for the next few weeks," remarked one member of the department as the trucks rolled slowly back to their station.

YOUNG GIRL LODGED IN JAIL

The only arrest recorded at the police station during the past 24 hours was the result of a man who was seen walking rather unsteadily along Front Street last night and at intervals steadying the buildings which apparently were swaying before his none-too-open eyes. Today the inebriate was remanded in custody on a charge of intoxication.

A local girl, of rather tender age, was apprehended wandering at large in Trenton yesterday and turned over to Belleville authorities for safe keeping. Today, however, the teen-aged lass was lodged in the county jail charged as incorrigible. Her parents assured Detective Fred Isard they were unable to restrain the girl in her wanderings.

Last night's lowest temperature of the season resulted in an increased number of transients seeking warm sleeping quarters at the police station when 15 were accommodated.

FRACTURES LEG IN FALL FROM ROOF

Mrs. Harry Vechter, 385 Front Street, is a patient at the Belleville General Hospital as the result of a broken leg suffered on Monday afternoon when she slipped from the roof of a small building adjoining her home, striking a flight of steps some eight or nine feet below. Mrs. Vechter was engaged in hanging out the family wash when the accident occurred. She had stepped onto a platform built on the roof of the small building below and while hanging the clothes in some manner stepped onto the roof, losing her balance to fall to the steps below. The fracture was reduced by Dr. E. M. MacDonald.

OFFICIALS SURPRISED TO FIND MAN SLEEPING IN JAIL BOILER ROOM

It may have been a case of any port in a storm, or again the guy could have taken a liking to the place during his recent sojourn in the local Bastille. However, you can just imagine the surprise of county jail officials early today when they found a stranger slumbering peacefully in the furnace room at the Court House.

After recovering from their initial surprise the local jailhouse authorities discovered that a former inmate of that institution, who was without bed and lodgings last night, had merely curled himself up in the warm surroundings of the furnace room and enjoyed a sound night's slumber. The man had only been released from the local "jug" last Saturday, after spending two weeks as the guest of the city following a conviction for intoxication.

"I guess he'd been nibbling again last night and figured the safest place in town was right here in the jail", commented one jail official after chasing the man from the premises at daybreak.

Belleville's Tuesday mid - week market was sparsely attended today only five vendors of farm produce displaying their wares. No change in the prices of farm commodities were noted from those prevailing last Saturday, apples and late vegetables dominating today's displays.

Kiwanis Expect To Gather 300 Tons of Salvage

Three hundred tons of waste and salvage material including everything from discarded garbage cans to broken-down baby buggies is expected to be collected by Kiwanis Salvage Material Committee within the next few weeks during a collection campaign to start Monday next. This estimate of the waste material which is expected to be collected in Belleville is based on the results of like campaigns staged in other cities throughout Ontario.

All residents are asked to look around the cellar and garage and see what they can dig up in the way of such salvage material and any donations will be appreciated. The Chairman of the committee 's Ross Stiver, assisted by Fire Chief Wm. Lynch and a call to either of these two gentlemen will bring a truck to call for the waste material which may be offered. Look around and see what can be found as the proceeds of the campaign are being divided between two well-known War Service organizations.

Youths Given Month For Putting Obstruction On Railway Tracks

"This is altogether too serious a matter to even consider a suspended sentence. Their actions might have resulted in the loss of many lives and the destruction of many thousands of dollars' worth of railway property," sternly remarked Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in Napanee police court yesterday, when two youths appeared before him charged with placing obstructions upon the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks near Robindale some weeks ago. The lads' names were given as Percy Hay of Belleville and Bruce Lasher of Robindale, north of Napanee. The boys were convicted and given one month in the Lennox County jail after His Worship denied a plea for a suspended sentence.

The placing of the obstruction, which was found on the C.P.R. tracks near Robindale earlier in the month by a section man, was investigated by Mr. W. Ramsay, special C.P.R. constable and detective Fred Isard of Belleville. When the attempt to derail a train was discovered, cord wood sticks, large tree limbs and even medium sized boulders were found wedged inside the frog of a C.P.R. switch near Robindale. Section men removed the obstruction before any damage resulted.

"This is a very serious matter and will have to be dealt with in a serious manner," commented Magistrate Butler as he committed the boys to jail.

$20,000 Objective Set By B. C. I. in Sale of War Savings Stamps

Demonstrating what the schools of Canada can accomplish in the way of selling War Savings Stamps, the Belleville Collegiate Institute has made the sale of $20,000 worth of stamps their annual objective for the duration of the war. In speaking at the Kiwanis Inter-Club meeting on Monday evening, P. C. MacLaurin, Chairman of the Belleville War Savings Committee, told members that the local B.C.I.V.S. students had already sold over $4,000 worth of stamps and this merely represented what other schools in this district might accomplish.

The Canadian War Savings Committee have made the sale of $100,000,000 worth of War Savings Stamps their annual objective, 60 percent of which is expected to be raised through the employee-employer section of the campaign which encourages the regular and systematic purchase of stamps by industrial employees. Hastings and Prince Edward Counties have been organized by the local committee for this purpose and the campaign is to start immediately.

Canadians Must Awake to Importance Of Canada in Her Duty to the Empire

Judge Mott Gives Address to Local Service Clubs Last Evening

TASK NOT TOO GREAT

Declaring that the problems of the present day, together with the seriousness of the war situation demanded a self analysis and a self awaredness on the part of every true Canadian, Judge Hawley S. Mott of Toronto, urged that "we emerge from our lethargy, and from our passiveness to a fuller realization of our duty towards Canada and the Empire", as he spoke before the members of local service clubs at an Inter-Club dinner meeting held at the Quinte Hotel on Monday evening.

In opening his address, Judge Mott gave local service club members a comparison of the industrial and financial position of Canada at the present time as compared with her position at the outset of the war of 1914-18, stating that although the days ahead present an unsolved mystery, the task is not beyond our reach and the challenge to Canadians is one of the best. Since the last war, industry has been more than doubled and the acreage of arable land has been likewise doubled. Gold production today is $500,000 per day, and other production has increase enormously, while industries are being created so fast that they are almost creating themselves. Judge Mott compared the per capita debt of Canada today with that during the last war and declared that the future presented a time when man must turn his full mind on self and toward the full realization of his duty.

"This is not the only time the Mother Country has been in difficulty", declared the speaker, quoting the words of William Pitt when entering the premiership of Great Britain during a period of national strife. "I know I can save England", he quoted Pitt as saying, and "he did", declared Judge Mott.

Judge Mott reminded the members "that we are at war, a total war" and declared that "our path of duty is the path of glory". "Men who know what freedom is, will know their line of duty, we must not be passive, we must be active", he said.

The speaker asked, "to what measure were we passive yesterday, and to what degree are we becoming active?" Are we creative or are we passive?" was the first question which confronted Canadians, said Judge Mott.

"There was no limit to the possibilities which the individual might undertake. Our possibilities are enormous and every Canadian must ask themselves what they can do in this great cause. "Our cause is not lost", assured the speaker stating that while he had no doubt as to the immediate outcome of the conflict in which we were engaged, the seriousness of the situation was such that if we are going to do the job we must sell ourselves to it and take it on. We must endeavour to pay our debt to our ancestors and to pay our obligations. Our problem demands that we feel the pulse of being, to feel the urge to realize reaction which comes as result of a thing well done. This is our challenge, your duty and mine", concluded the speaker.

Chairman Dick Flynn presided over the meeting with P. C. MacLaurin introducing the guest speaker. Morley Wyman introduced members of the War Savings Committee who were guests at the meeting. Leo Riggs acted as pianist for the community singing. Don Roe representing the Kinsmen, and Harold Carruthers, the Kiwanis, acted as song leaders. Jimmy Bankier rendered two appropriate solos, which were much appreciated by the members. Mr. J. O. Herity expressed the appreciation of the members to Judge Mott for his address.

WORLD CHEERED BY HEROIC ACTION OF GREECE

The courage of the Greek Government in defying and resisting the dictator of Italy in his aggressive move against the country which has given modern civilization much of its finest characteristics is something which cheers the democratic world. Greece, not one of the great powers in might but truly one of the really great powers in her spirit and in the clearness of of the vision of her leaders, has seen through the machinations of the Fascists. She will not put one iota of faith in the word of the Italian dictator. She knows the perfidy of Mussolini's promises for he was the very man who promised Greece a path along the way of peace, only a short time ago. But that was a Duce promise which means nothing. Since then Fascist Italy has been racking its brains for a quarrel with Greece as Germany did to cover up the awful crime of deliberately provoking war on Poland. But her guile does not fool the clear-minded Greeks, descendants of the heroic Hellenes of two and a half millenniums ago, who held aloft the light of human freedom, for they see the aim of the Hun and the Italian is to loot the world.

The free nations of the modern world have had an intense love for Greece as the mother of European civilization. She was the first expression of the modern spirit of emancipation of the mind and intellect. The Greek spirit was the spirit of inquiry. It permeates a great deal of the structure of modern civilization. Ancient Rome, which thought more of domination by the sword and built up the greatest empire in area in the old world of two thousand years ago, bowed to the wisdom of Greece and the beauty of her poetry and her philosophy, for the noted Romans took Greek models for their poetry, architecture, art and thought as far as possible.

Ancient Greece was not powerful in the sense in which Rome was potent, but she reigns yet in the minds of men, who love her works because of their beauty, sincerity and artistry. Liberty, which is the chief expression of the spirit of inquiry whether in the intellectual or the political realms, found its cradle in old Greek cities like Athens.

It was the Greek conquest of the spirit which opened up Asia Minor and the Near East to western influences. Alexander the Great, a Macedonian, one of the greatest men in history, took the Greek language and thought and with it and his soldiers penetrated into the East as far as the borders of present day India. Greek civilization, being more definite and more clear than the nearby and earlier civilization of Egypt, has had a vastly greater influence upon the world, for the Greeks though in contact with the Near East and represented by colonies in Asia Minor were essentially western in the fullest sense, not in the Roman sense of the use of material power.

Greece has long been the friend of Britain. It was the British who championed the cause of Greek independence and liberation. Greece with her free-spirited leaders today sees that she, like the rest of the world, can take only one step, the step she has taken, namely to resist the invading Italians. To acquiesce in the Italian demands would have been death to her idealism and to the cause of Greece and freedom. It is liberty she cherishes and that she finds not in the Fascist ranks but in the English stand. She knows that without British victory, life would be miserable in this world. Fascist and Nazi domination would cast a blight upon the world worse than death, for it would be a reign of crime and brutality intensified even beyond the brutality of the Nazis and Fascists of the present if they were given full sway.

The best portion of the world prays that Greece will soon see the day when she will be among the victors over the crew of Hitler and Mussolini and their vile companions in crime. Greece fought the battle of civilization many centuries ago and saved Europe. Once again she is on the side of liberty and freedom.

WHAT OF FASCIST NAVY?

Italy, by the lack of action of her fleet, has caused considerable comment on the reason for their little success since the Italians went into the war. What has the Italian fleet been doing? has been the question. Three or four engagements have been disasters to the Italians at sea and the Italian record on land is not too good. Fascist Italy gave promise of mighty acts as the associate of the Huns led by Hitler. Then came Italy's chance to get into the war when France was collapsing. Still after that Italy did not do much. So much remained unaccomplished that Hitler may have decided it was time to make his partner do something.

Italy's warships rarely can be found, as they seem to have carefully avoided any contact with British warships. To maintain a fleet which does nothing except try to dodge the British is a pretty expensive thing for the Italians. For some reason the Italian navy has given little account of itself, even though it possesses a large submarine fleet if the world's guess is correct.

The present situation will demand of the Italian navy to assume obligations to try to justify its existence. And there should be plenty to do in carrying on a struggle of aggression in a country which is separate from Italy with the resultant need of an active navy.

The earliest reports tell of movements of the British warships in the East Mediterranean and offer promise of events of great importance.

THE STARS AND HITLER

Royal Gazette, Hamilton, Bermuda.

This is one mistake we must positively not make—that is, of over-estimated Herr Hitler's dependency upon stars and underestimating his preparations to cooperate with them. The superstition-ridden little beast firmly believes that the stars, is his stars, are going to help him, but he is not going to let that stand in the way of his helping himself, and he has proved himself to be an indefatigable self-helper. Laugh as much as you like; it will do you good; but do not be convulsed to the point of dropping your guard. That would be to help Hitler and his stars, and you may be sure that he and his fellow star addicts are quite aware of it. A fanatic is always a despot, and the combination is no laughing matter.

ONLY 90 BILLIONS.

Minneapolis Star-Journal.

The American Museum of Natural History opines that some 90 billion human beings have been born in this vale of tears since the dawn of man.

Ninety billion seems a pretty large figure until you remember that there are more than two billion people alive today—more than 2 percent of the grand total from Pithecanthropus Erectus to Clark Gable.

It begins to look small when you consider the job man has done since he first started scratching pictures of elk in the caves of southern France . . . the civilizations he has built up and torn down, the tremendous task he has performed in making Nature knuckle to his needs, the legends and art, the supernal beauty and tragic horror he has created, the myriad threads of communication he has woven between ages and places.

Ninety billion seems hardly enough for the achievement — and wreckage — man has wrought in the millions of years he has swarmed, a slight ferment, on the face of this ball swinging in space.

MINING FROM THE AIR

Aircraft loaded with mines can make the way into narrow roadsteads, shallow channels, and even into harbors where no surface vessel could possibly penetrate in the face of enemy defences, and within the past five months aircraft of the Bomber Command alone have laid more than 30 separate minefields.

One advantage of mine laying by air is the speed with which a minefield can be sown. Once they wanted us to mine a certain enemy channel 600 miles away from our base without delay. We received the order at six o'clock one evening. By midnight that minefield had been laid. Minelaying has to be dead accurate. If you don't put the mine exactly in a shipping channel it will be practically useless. International law, too, quite apart from the risk to our own ships, requires that mines should be laid only within the limits if a clearly defined area. Each man is given a pinpoint on the chart and that pinpoint is where he has got to plant his mines, or bring them back.

The aircraft used are Handley-Page Hampden bombers, but instead of the usual bomb load, each aircraft carries a single mine. It is a pretty big mine—a long flat cylinder about 10 ft. long and weighing close on three-quarters of a ton, and it packs as big a punch in the way of high explosive as a 21-inch naval torpedo. It can do a lot of damage to even the biggest ship; the wrecks of several 10,000-ton supply ships which can still be seen in the Baltic are evidence of that.

The mine is stowed away inside the bomb compartment and enclosed by folding doors in the underside of the fuselage. There is a parachute attached to the mine and if the bomb doors are open and the mine falls clear, this parachute automatically opens. It checks the rate of fall so that the mechanism of the mine won't be damaged by too violent a contact with the water. The mine doesn't make much of a splash as it goes in and it drags its parachute down to the sea bottom, and the mine sits there until a ship passes overhead.

Compared with a bombing raid, a mine-laying trip, of course, is a bit tame from the crew's point of view; almost a rest cure in fact. Still, the job has its compensations. We are given a couple of consolation prizes each trip, in the form of two high explosive bombs. After we've planted our mines, we can use these.

When we first started mine-laying, our only means of retaliation were our machine guns, and I remember once in the Great Belt, we sighted an enemy destroyer a few moments after we had dropped our mine. We would have given a lot for a couple of bombs just then, but as we hadn't got them we dived down almost to mast height and shot up the destroyer with every gun we had. Then the destroyer did a bit of shooting up on his own account and I reckon we were lucky to have got away with only one hole in the wings.—London Listener.

Nazi Prestige Hurt In Latin Americas

Germany's prestige has suffered severely in Latin America through her failure to deliver German merchandise sold under contract late last Spring for Oct. 1 delivery, according to advices reaching exporters here from their representatives in Central and South America.

The propaganda move, which seemed impressive at the time when Germany's military machine was moving through the Low Countries and France on a timetable schedule, is said to have backfired in a manner that has cost a huge sum and alienated many Latin Americans who had come to regard Germany as invincible in commerce as well as war.

Five or six months ago, with the military drive in Europe at its height, German agents created a sensation in Latin-American markets when they canvassed buyers for orders for all types of manufactured goods and raw materials. The theme of their sales talks was that Great Britain would be conquered by Sept. 15 at the latest and freighters loaded with German products would be on route to Latin-American ports in time to deliver their cargoes by the first of this month.

Low Prices Quoted

The most impressive features of the selling arguments were the low prices quoted, 25 to 30 per cent under those of United States competitors, and the willingness of German salesmen to post cash guarantees equal to the amount of each order, collectible if the merchandise failed to arrive on the date specified.

American foreign traders were advised this week that few of the cash guarantees had actually been collected. Contracts were so cleverly worded that German-made goods about which the salesmen spoke so glibly were not actually specified, and the seller was able to discharge his obligation by substituting similar goods made in other countries, including the United States.

Large quantities of electric cable, chemical products shipped in drums and later transferred to old containers of German origin, some steel shapes, wire and bars, electrical appliances, machinery and tools were among the American products the Germans purchased at high prices and supplied their customers at discounts of 25 to 30 per cent.

Until American exporters became suspicious late in July and began a check-up of the numerous rush orders from German houses in Latin America, the Germans were able to hedge on their commitments here. Once the uses to which American products were to be put became generally known, however, shippers here began refusing to fill orders. Almost immediately agents for the Latin-American buyers made their appearance in the local market with certified checks offering to pay in advance for the raw materials and other products they needed. When these offers were refused here, the Germans turned the business over to Japanese exporters where possible.

One manufacturer of chemicals reported having been approached with an offer of cash payment for $10,000 worth of chemicals to be shipped immediately to a well-known importer of German chemicals in Latin America. Suspicious of the proposal, the manufacturer declined the order, despite the buyer's insistence that he was entitled to consideration because he was offering cash payment in dollars and none of the usual credit or exchange risks was involved.

Another manufacturer, producing electrical goods, received an offer of $25,000 to be paid in cash the day the order was signed, for small electrically driven motors to be made up without trade-marks or name plates and delivered to an Argentine importer.

This order also was declined on the excuse that the producer had more commitments than he could fill and had to take care of regular customers first. When the buyer persisted the manufacturer explained that the company's trade name was cast into the metal framework of its motors. To fill such an order, he said, new molds would have to be made. An offer to pay for those led finally to a statement that the work on such an order would disrupt regular production in the plant.

In some countries, notably Brazil, German houses had built up stocks sufficient to last for two years at the time the war broke out, and these are being drawn upon to fill contracts.

Some bonds have been forfeited in Brazil, a few in Colombia, Nicaragua, Chile and Uruguay, exporters said.

In Columbia the Germans also were compelled to refund passage money for Fall trips to Germany booked through a special office opened by the Hamburg-American Line in Manizales last July. The opening of the office was accompanied by a widespread advertising and publicity campaign in which low round-trip fares for October visits to a victorious Germany were featured.

The office is still open, according to exporters, and is affording amusement to passers by in the Colombian city. The principal legitimate activity of the staff is said to be refunding passage money to those persuaded by the July publicity campaign.—Chas. E. Egan in N. Y. Times.

Injecting Nerve Roots to Cure Asthma

It is only within recent years that physicians have been seeking the cause of asthma in their patients. In former days the cause was unknown and treatment for the attack by nitroglycerin and more recently by epinephrine (adrenalin) was all that was done and believed could be done.

To-day the physician tries to find the cause of asthma searching for nose and throat defects, allergy or sensitiveness to pollen, food, fur, feathers and other substances, and finally the nervous or emotional condition of the patient.

Even after prolonged search the cause is not always found and so there are many asthmatics to-day who still depend upon nitroglycerin, amyl nitrite, epinephrine, to stop their attacks and in more severe cases the use of ether in olive oil as an enema, or breathing in 100 percent oxygen.

In extreme cases surgical operation to cut the roots of the nerves causing the little air vessels to close, is performed. That this operation in extreme cases is not always necessary is reported by Dr. Hyman M. Wilensky, London, Ontario, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. He points out that asthma seems to strike persons of more than average intelligence who become prematurally aged in appearance and discouraged by the frequent asthmatic attacks with little or no relief. It is not to be wondered at that they are willing to undergo surgical operation. Dr. Wilensky then outlines a method of injecting the nerves supplying the little air tubes in the lungs and thus preventing the spasm which causes the attack. The patient takes a sitting position, leaning over and spreading his shoulder blades well apart. After the use of a little anaesthetic under the skin the needle containing alcohol is directed to the roots of two or three nerves and the alcohol injected therein. This is done in the physician's office with no loss of time by the patient from work.

Of the 18 patients treated with these injections of alcohol, 6 were completely cured, 4 received marked benefit in that attacks were reduced in number and severity, 4 had slight relief. There were 4 where it was felt an insufficient amount of alcohol was injected.

The point here is that in very severe cases where usual remedies fail and surgery appears to be the only means of relief, this method of injecting alcohol into the nerve roots might well be considered.

WILL USE FLAG IN MINIATURE ON MAYOR'S LETTERS

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 29 (CP))—A brightly-colored British flag in miniature, bearing the motto "There'll Always Be An England" may soon be affixed to letters from the mayor's office in the town of Westover Hill, Texas. Mayor John Farrell of the Texas town has written to Mayor Lyle Telford of Vancouver, asking how he can obtain the stickers, which are used on mayor communications in a number of Canadian cities. The use of the stickers was first suggested by Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa.

TURKS WARNED BY GOV'T PAPER WAR MAY SPREAD TO TURKEY

Question Whether Turkey Will Join Britain in Support of Greece Against Italians Unanswered

NEWS TAKEN CALMLY

Ankara, Turkey, Oct. 29—(AP)—The Government newspaper Ulus warned the Turkish people today that war may spread to their land, and official Turkey kept in close contact with her embattled friend, Greece.

The question whether Turkey would join Britain in aiding Greece against Italian invasion remained unanswered.

But Ulus, on this 17th birthday of the Turkish Republic, declared: "We prefer the hell of war to a dishonorable peace.

"No one can assure the citizens until the storm of fire is over that our roofs will not catch after it. We are passing through a test of fate which demands clean hearts, strong confidence and complete cooperation until death. We recognize no limit of sacrifice."

Capital sources pointed to a recent government statement that Turkey would aid Greece in the event of an Italian attack provided Britain made good her promise to help the Greeks, but the Italian-Greek conflict brought no new declaration.

Britain Aids Greeks

(In London, King George and Prime Minister Churchill yesterday pledged Britain's fullest aid to Greece.)

Foreign observers said Turkey's attitude was believed to depend principally on Russia, and some speculated whether a German-Russian secret agreement covered the axis moves in the Balkans and the near east.

The Ankara radio raised the question whether the Italian invasion "is a straw man attack in order to bring British forces from Egypt while a bigger attack is ordered there."

The nation took the news calmly but much activity was reported in official circles.

Turkish Inner Cabinet Meets

Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu was understood to have reported on the Greek situation in a 2 1-2-hour meeting of the Turkish inner cabinet yesterday.

President Gen. Ismet Inonu received the Greek ambassador yesterday and talked by telephone with Greek Premier John Metaxas.

Semi-official Turkish quarters, expressing admiration for reports of Greek resistance, declared: "We are convinced the Italian pressure on Greece will not give positive results."

In a broadcast on the eve of the 17th anniversary of the election of Kemal Ataturk as Turkey's first president, Premier Refik Saydam said last night the nation is "stronger than ever," but made no mention of the Italian action.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 29 (CP)—Abe Cohen and his family returned to their London flat after taking refuge in an Anderson shelter and found the front wheels and front axle of a taxi had crashed through a window into the living room. The cab had been blown through thae air over a row of three-storey houses from a bombed garage on another street.

Mrs. Gily Townsend went to Central London from her home in Maida Vale with a basketful of tags to collect for a hospital where she had been a patient last February. Within an hour she was back at the same hospital with injuries to her right arm and leg received when a bomb struck a building near where she stood.

A royal command has been flouted by the abandonment of this year's Newmarket town plate for the first time since the race started in 1666. Charles II, its founder, ordered "The plat is to be rid for yearly, the second Thursday in October, for ever."

To commemorate bravery of Londoners under the Nazi air attacks, the Daily Express suggests a badge of recognition. One proposal is a replica of St. Paul's dome and an inscription, "Citizen of London, 1940."

Britons will have to count the currants, sultanas and raisins going in this year's Christmas puddings. The Food Ministry announced the quantity will be limited because shipments from the Mediterranean will not arrive before January or February. Prices, however, will not be allowed to increase.

Rev. G. H. Simpson, minister in charge of a Brighton Methodist Church, has appointed a roof-spotter to watch for enemy each service starts he tells his congregation "We have eyes and ears on the roof so you can worship in content." If it becomes necessary to take shelter, he announces the order from the pulpit "in a quiet way" and the organist plays a hymn while the worshipers file to the refuge.

A London family living in a house numbered 13 went one night to a public shelter instead of using their Anderson shelter. Returning they found their shelter had been wrecked by debris.

A woman who invariably went to a shelter, stayed in her London home because her mother-in-law was visiting her. Both were killed when a bomb fell on the house.

TWEED SCHOOLS ENDORSE PLAN FOR SALE OF SAVINGS STAMPS

Tweed — The third dose of diphtheria toxoid was administered to children of Tweed Consolidated and Tweed Separate Schools on Friday by Dr. M. G. Dales, M.O.H., who was assisted by Miss Patricia Quinn, Reg. N.

On Thursday afternoon the teachers of Tweed High, Separate and Consolidated Schools met in the Separate School where they were addressed by Mr. Clark and Mr. P. C. McLaurin, Principal of Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School on the subject of participation in Canada's War Effort through the sale of War Savings Stamps and Certificates.

Mr. MacLaurin, who was introduced to the teachers by Mr. Clark, explained in detail how they and their pupils may aid in the raising of the sum of $100,000,000, which it is hoped will be raised throughout the Dominion through the sale of War Savings Stamps and Certificates. It is proposed that not only should the children be urged to purchase stamps and certificates themselves but that they would undertake their sale throughout the village. "In Belleville and other places, where this is done", said Mr. McLaurin, "the students call regularly every week or month on certain purchasers who have become regular customers for the purchase of stamps. This method has been found very effective."

Mr. McLaurin pointed out that while the objective of $100,000,000 is a large sum, it can be attained within the year by the purchase of stamps and certificates to the value of $8.37 by every man, woman and child in Canada. In many cases of course, it was realized that this apparently small amount was beyond the reach of some Canadians. This difficulty could easily be surmounted by others purchasing beyond their average share.

Mr. T. E. Moffat, B. A., Principal of Tweed High School, expressed himself as being very much in accord with the scheme to enlist the aid of school pupils in the sale of War Savings Stamps. Sister Mary Thrasilla, Principal of Tweed Separate School, and Mr. S. H. Connor, principal of Tweed Consolidated School, expressed similar views. The latter reported in response to a question from Mr. McLaurin, that the pupils of Tweed Consolidated School had, during the month of June purchased with their Penny Bank Savings, stamps and certificates to the value of nearly $200. This was done following a request from the Minister of Education made to all schools of Ontario.

Mr. Robert E. Sweatman, B. A., of the High School Staff was named Chairman of the local committee. The campaign sponsored by the local schools will be launched in a short time.

Rev. Sterling of Shannonville was the preacher at Tweed United Church and Sulphide on Sunday in the absence of Rev. H. L. Morrison, B. A., who was guest speaker at the Anniversary Services held at Foxboro United Church.

Mr. Clare Morgan, supervisor of music in the rural schools of Centre Hastings, presided at the organ of the United Church on Sunday in the absence of the regular organist, Miss Lois Richardson.

Tweed Army and Navy Veterans held a business meeting at the Veterans' Hall on Friday night with the chairman, H. W. Crosbie in charge. Several matters of business were discussed. It was decided to continue the Friday bridge parties during the winter, part of the proceeds of which will be used to send tobacco and other comforts to the soldiers overseas.

The sum of five dollars was voted to the British Air Raid Victims' Fund sponsored by the Tweed News and Tweed Consolidated School. The Veterans decided to observe Poppy Day on the Saturday preceding Remembrance Day, November 11th, which falls on Monday. Pursuant to a suggestion from Legion Headquarters in Toronto, poppies will be given to every child in the local schools. They may pay for these any amount which they are able, from one cent upwards. If they are unable to make any payment, the poppies will be given to them without charge. It is hoped in this way to fix in the minds of the younger generation the debt which they owe to those who fell in the first Great War.

The Veterans decided to sponsor the collection of scrap metal and certain other materials which may be used in the production of war material. The depot at which this scrap will be stored is Mr. Ed. Ward's barn.

Tweed High School Rugby team defeated Marmora on the latter's grounds at Deloro by a score of 22 to 5 on Friday afternoon. The victory places Tweed in a tie for first place with Madoc.

Tweed's score came from touchdowns made by Wagar, with two and a convert, Rivers and McTaggart. Cassidy converted the final touchdown. Marmora's touchdown followed a fumble behind Tweed's goal line, Marmora recovering for a major.

Tweed line-up: McCrea, Arber, Fisher, Vance, Ruttan, L. Rivers, McTaggart, Doyle, Wagar, Cassidy, Meagher, Shannon, Elliott, M. Rivers.

Constipated? Get rid of the cause!

Doctors know that the cause of your constipation is probably easy to find, if, like too many people, you eat — bread, meat, potatoes. Perhaps your diet does not form enough "bulk." And "bulk" does not mean quantity of food, but the kind of food that is not completely assimilated and leaves a soft "mass" in the bowels, that helps the bowel movement.

If this is your case, the solution is a crisp cereal for breakfast — Kellogg's All-Bran. All-Bran helps form the necessary "bulk" and contains Vitamin B_1, the natural intestinal tonic.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink lots of water, and see life through rose colored glasses. Made in London, Canada, by Kellogg. At all grocers.

LIGHTEST NIGHT RAID OF WAR STAGED BY NAZIS

Comparatively Few Bombs Dropped on London Area During Night

2 SHOT DOWN

A Number of Casualties Reported From a Town in the Midlands

London, Oct. 29—(CP)—Air raid sirens sounded London's first daylight alarm today several hours after the "all clear" ended a night of light raids.

The "raiders passed" signal was given after less than an hour, during which a German plane, diving out of the sun, dropped a stick of bombs from a low level, climbed and dropped another stick while anti-aircraft shells burst all around it. At the same time, other German raiders were reported over Merseyside, dock and ship-building section of the Liverpool area.

Royal Air Force bombers staged "successful attacks" on objectives in Germany and on Nazi-occupied ports and airdromes on the continent during the night, the Air Ministry announced today, but over England the air war lagged.

The government disclosed no other details of the R.A.F. offensive immediately.

In London, comparatively few bombs dropped as the 52nd consecutive night of aerial attacks brought one of the lightest night-time raids of the war.

Little Gunfire

Sounding of the "all-clear" signal at dawn disturbed a quiet that in the later hours of the night had not even been broken by gunfire.

Earlier, however, Nazi planes were estimated to have flown as low as 5,000 feet in stabs at the London area.

Two raiders unofficially were reported shot down—one over Enfield and one over the Scottish coast—although the government claimed a toll of only one.

The government said the night raids caused a number of casualties, including some fatalities, in the London area. Shops, houses and other buildings were damaged and a few fires were started, but these were reported extinguished, or brought under control.

Few Casualties

In a midlands town, a communique said, a few casualties resulted from a night raid during which Nazi airmen loosed a large quantity of incendiary bombs, causing many fires.

"These were mostly in shops and in every case were soon extinguished or brought under control," it added.

German air activity also was reported in the southeast and northeast, but with little damage resulting.

Defer Injunction Over Semi-Automatic Rifle

Boston, Oct. 29 (AP)—An injunction action brought against Captain Melvin M. Johnson, inventor of the Johnson Semi-Automatic Rifle, by the United Automatic Rifles, Inc., of Delaware, was deferred today after the corporation said it did not wish to interfere with military defence. The firm had contended it had a proprietary right in thet weapon on the grounds that Johnson developed it while in the firm's employ.

C.N.R. ENGINEER DIES

Montreal Oct. 29 —(CP)— Benjamin J. Chapman, 60, Canadian National Railways locomotive engineer, died here Monday. A native of Brockville, Ont., he lived in Ottawa for a number of years before coming to Montreal 15 years ago.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. W. Lang of Ottawa and Mrs. M. Hanse of Biloxi, Miss., four sons, Benjamin, Kenneth and Frederick of Ottawa, and Harry of Toronto, and two brothers, Harry and Murray of Ottawa.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at Ottawa with burial at Prescott, Ont.

Edmonton, (CP)—Although married and a housewife, Mrs. Helen Masciuh of Edmonton is determined to finish her schooling and perhaps attend University. She has enrolled at a city high school and attends classes regularly. Mrs. Masciuh says "it is exciting and a lot of fun," although she is ten years older than most of the students. One day she forgot to do her homework and was "kept in" twenty minutes like any other student in the school.

London, (CP) — A housewives' service, a system which already has won its spur in Air Raid Precautions work in London and elsewhere in England, is being organized in the midland region. Aim of the service is to co-operate with the wardens and other A.R.P. workers and to promote a feeling of confidence and neighborliness. Members of the service meet in street groups and take training in A.R.P. and accident aid.

New York, (CP)—They are showing a fur-trimmed velveteen boot with a rubberized lining of plaid fleece, and a slide fastener inconspicuously placed on the inside of the leg.

Rifle Taken to Woods To Shoot Mister Bruin Is Guarded by Bear

Maybe its because the bears of North Hastings are becoming sissies.

Or perhaps the bruins that roam this country's northern timberlands have decided it is time conditions were reversed, and they should carry the gun instead of their ancient enemies, the humans.

Anyway here's the story.

Martin Bierworth, living 12 miles south of Bancroft, noticed the tracks of a large bear at the base of a pile of wood he had cut. The next day, he carried his trusty rifle with him to the woods, just in case—.

Arriving at the pile, he found fresh footprints of bruin, but no other sign was apparent.

He leaned the rifle against the woodpile and started for a point some distance away where his axes and other wood-cutting implements were stored.

Returning to the woodpile, his eyes stared wide in amazement. He became paralyzed in his tracks. He opened his mouth but no sound came forth.

For there in front of him, squatting lazily beside his rifle was a large black bear.

The big fellow waved a paw in the direction of the firearm and knocked it down.

Bierworth suddenly galvanized into action and took to his heels. He returned some time later, picking his way carefully through the woods, but bruin still enjoyed the shade of the woodpile, and the safety of the gun.

It was over two hours later, when the bear decided he had given his human friend a lesson, and ambled off into the woods to seek other diversions.

Hitler and his staff, including Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, left Florence for Germany at 6.20 p.m. (11:20 a.m. EST) yesterday aboard Hitler's special train.

German newspapers hammered again and again at the thesis that if France wants a hand in the new Europe being molded by the Axis chieftain she must act now to redeem herself by getting on their side.

Reports Choice of Laval

In this connection, official news agencies reported the selection of France's Vice-Premier Laval as Foreign Minister in the Petain cabinet shortly after his conference with Hitler and Petain somewhere in France.

German press agencies claimed in dispatches from several Balkan capitals assurances that these countries either were maintaining well-disciplined neutrality or were glad to chorus approval of Italy's action against Greece.

There was not a solitary whisper in the press or elsewhere as to what the newest development in the Balkans meant to Russia.

The National Zeitung for Oct. 19 was sent to American correspondents with a marked article which alleged Britain was pursuing a "hopeless course" in trying to wean Russia away from Germany.

Meanwhile, Hitler was overlooking no bets. Even as Turkey was confronted with a crisis by the Italian invasion of Greece, the Fuehrer sent Turkey's President Ismet Inonu a telegram congratulating him on today's 17th anniversary of the establishment of the Turkish Republic.

Both her attendants were dressed alike in coral taffeta frocks made on simple lines with shoulder length veils of matching tulle. They carried nosegay bouquets of roses and pompoms.

The reception following the ceremony took place in the Queen's Hotel, bronze pompoms adorning the bride's table. The bridal couple left later on a motor trip, the bride wearing for travelling a nutria shade crepe dress under a beige coat trimmed with brown squirrel and brown accessories.

They will reside in Montreal.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Parker, Mr. and Mrs. J. Owens, and Mr. and Mrs. N. Bowers, of Trenton, Ont., and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Parker of Renfrew, Ontario.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When the Bride Needs a Friend, and Mother-in-Law Fills the Bill

Mrs. R. was young, pretty and domestic, and had been married four months. Before that, she had worked in an office as a stenographer, earning $30.00 a week.

But she was the domestic type, and while she tapped the typewriter her mind often strayed to "a home of her own", with a charming living-room, replicas of early American furniture in the bedroom, and a blue and white kitchen—especially the blue and white kitchen.

These day-dreams threw a certain amount of glamour around Mr. R., who was good-looking clever, but had an irritating habit of putting down every penny he spent in a little account book. He would even do this when he took the girl out to dinner. But she explained it to herself by saying, "That's just his way".

The dream came true. She had the charming apartment with just what she wanted after she married Mr. R., and the first thing he presented her with was a notebook in which to put all the items of household expenditure. She had put a thousand dollars of her savings into their joint housekeeping scheme, which gave her the comfortable feeling of being independent.

In spite of being independent, loving the blue and white kitchen, and feeling certain there never had been a baby like the one she was expecting, Mr. R.'s penny pinching began to get on her nerves.

Oh, for the blessed give-and-take of the office, and the pay envelope that came 'round every week, and the good times she and the rest of the office bunch had together. Not only was it the nickles and dimes Mr. R. questioned her about, but actually one night at dinner, he said the pie crust wasn't flaky and the tea-towels had a grayish look. Mrs R. cried herself to sleep on the studio divan, and decided after the baby came she'd go to Reno.

Next day she called on her mother-in-law, whom, despite the relationship, Mrs. R. really liked immensely. She confided the whole tale of woe about the account book, the non-flaky pie-crust and the grayish tea-towels.

Her mother-in-law, who had a swell sense of humor, burst into laughter and said, "A chip off the old block". Then she whispered something in the girl's ear and both laughed heartily. "I went through the same thing with his father—that's your remedy."

A fortnight later, dish cloths were white as snow and the pie crust was flaky. And when the He-man asked about the expenditures and the household book, Mrs. R. answered, "I don't keep accounts any more—putting down two cents for a postage stamp, three cents for parsley, five cents for carrots, and making it all add up right takes too much time. When I worked in an office my time was worth about seventy-five cents an hour."

The He-man gasped.

"Besides, all that putting down two cents for this and that interrupts making the clothes for the baby".

He never said anything when she discussed the baby—all that was beyond his grasp. He wound up a bit embarrassed, "Well, darling, I've been looking at the dish towels, and they're white as snow, and the pie-crust is flaky, just like mother's".

"Yes," she answered, "it ought to be. I buy the pies from the same bakery your mother did, and I send the tea towels to the same laundry. We talked things over a couple of weeks ago when I was considering going to Reno. She advised laundry and bakery first".

Teacher's Health

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Properly parents expect the very best for children from the teacher. In order for her to give of her best she must be well and strong, physically and emotionally. She must have good mental health as well as good physical health. Having such health, she will possess sympathy, understanding, calmness, poise, self-control. She won't be irritable, excitable, jittery. She will have a quiet, cultivated manner and a gentle voice.

Teaching all day is a trying ordeal. It's no job for the physically and mentally unfit. Unfortunately some of these unfit persons are teachers. The day will come when fewer of such will be trained to teach or appointed to teach and when the health department of the public schools will weed them from among those who have been teaching.

We parents wish more teachers would aim to improve their physical and mental health. Let me entreat the teacher to get ample sleep, rest and recreation. Don't wear yourself out seeking pleasures at night nor deny yourself sufficient fun. Avoid excessive reading of test papers. In emergencies of course, you will share domestic duties and help nurse the sick. But don't do this continually while teaching.

Rest After School

When you feel very weary after school it might relax you to lie down on the floor or bed. A brief walk might do as well. Perhaps your health would be better if you walked to school instead of riding. Learn to play more social games.

Some teachers find valuable outlets in clubs and church groups, or in sharing living quarters with young business women. The church and Sunday school are fortunate to have the services of the teacher and she may widen her usefulness to the community through such service. Yet many a teacher will wear herself out doing good.

Wider Interests

Some teachers have personal problems they should talk over with a psychologist or psychiatrist. A few should strive to cultivate wider interests. Many a teacher who otherwise would have excessive worries finds rich and wholesome outlets in studying the problems of her children in discovering ways to help the parents change the personality and behavior of these children.

We parents can help promote the mental health of the teacher by showing her more appreciation, by helping her celebrate her own successes and by finding ways for her to have better social contacts.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

No Binding Rule Concerning Giving of Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are going to be invited to a church wedding. There is not going to be any kind of reception afterward. We are puzzled about whether or not we should send a wedding gift. We have been to two big showers for the bride-to-be, and have, of course, taken shower gifts to these parties.

T. Y.

Shower gifts don't customarily "count" as wedding gifts, but if, having given two shower gifts to the bride-to-be, you feel that these are all your budget will bear, I am sure that the bride-to-be will completely understand.

There aren't any definite rules and regulations about whether or not we should give a wedding present. There really couldn't be. For as in the case of giving any other kind of present, we give one if we wish, and don't if we feel that we can't afford it.

Naturally if the bride or groom or their families are close friends of ours, our inclination is to give a wedding gift for their new home. But if your budget is limited, and if you have given a consequential something to the shower, you may rightly consider that this is enough. It all depends on your own choice, and on your own pocket-book!

Fifteenth Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I will appreciate it very much if you will tell me what is the proper gift for a Fifteenth Wedding Anniversary.

M. R.

The Fifteenth Wedding anniversary symbol is crystal, and a very lovely one too, especially when such beautiful crystal and glass items are offered us at such reasonable prices.

However, it should be said that people do not abide by the given symbols for wedding anniversaries as strictly as they did formerly. They are just as apt to disregard the symbol, if they decide that something else would be more appropriate and welcome to the home of the couple who are celebrating their anniversary Any gift for the home or any item that can be used by both husband and wife is an appropriate gift.

Gracious Compliment to Respect Elders

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other day I noticed that the young daughter of a friend of mine—she is about seventeen — rose when an elderly man was introduced to her. I had thought that a girl or woman did not rise when a man is introduced to her. This girl's mother is well-versed in all questions of manners. Was her daughter correct in rising?

Reader

Yes, this girl has apparently been brought up to show this gracious compliment to an elderly man, and it was quite correct for her to rise when he was introduced to her. She showed her mother's wise and thoughtful training.

Stoke Up and Curves Appear

Exercise is necessary, but not as necessary as a restricted diet.

By HELEN FOLLETT

We hear that some of the pretties of Hollywood keep slender through exercise and eat what they like, but don't you believe it. If you stoke up on fat-producing foods curves will appear. And, alas! these curves develop into little hills and ugly bumps and then the beauty jig is up. Exercise is necessary, but not as necessary as a restricted diet. Diet alone will bring the figure back to normal. Plenty of good things to eat, no need of starving and getting criss-cross and fussy.

The enemies of the heavyweight are fats, starches and sweets. They cannot be dispensed with entirely; one needs a small amount of each to supply energy. But they should be cut down to the limit.

Be wary of pastries. A rich cake contains just about everything you shouldn't have—butter, flour, sugar. Instead, take fruit for dessert. Eat lean meats, fish that is not fat, fowl, vegetables that grow above ground, green salads, cottage cheese. Drink buttermilk and unsweetened lemonade.

Speedy reducing upsets the digestion, acts unfavorably upon the nervous system, brings premature wrinkles. Delete five or six pounds a month and be content. You are on your way to slenderness.

x x x

Hollow cheeks may appear attractive on the ladies in the fashion magazine but in real life they make you think of famine victims.

To attain a more normal facial contour apply a heavy cream, stroking upward from chin to temples. Place fingers and thumbs outspread on the cheeks, pull up the trumpeter's muscles with a clawing movement. Follow with a brisk slapping and tapping. While the cream remains on, friction the flesh with an ice cube.

That should be the nightly beauty ritual. In the morning use cold water freely, dry, apply a thin cream. In half an hour remove the emollient. Then you are entitled to play with the contents of the make-up kit.

A Day With The Quins

We get a great many queries from all over this continent asking how the Dionne Quintuplets spend their time; what schedule they follow; if they do follow any rigid schedule; if they always have their meals at the same time, and all that sort of thing. Well, we are changing our schedule to suit the winter which will soon be with us. And so, I thought it might be a good time to talk about this new schedule.

When I first studied this schedule after the nurses and I had made it out, the first thing that struck me was that the Quins are still spending nearly fifteen hours out of the twenty-four in bed. A great many children suffer physically because they don't get regular rest. But not our Quins. We see that they get plenty of it.

Long ago, we realized that since children need to spend a lot of time in bed, we should make their beds as comfortable and as sanitary as possible. Comfortable, because if they are to spend so long in them and be happy about it, they must not be too hard, or lumpy. Sanitary, they must be, because if infection of any kind were allowed to linger around the mattresses or the bedding, we could never keep all five children well. So, our bedding is washed often and thoroughly, and our mattresses are aired and they are sanitized to keep them sterile.

The children go to bed at seven, and get up at seven-thirty in the morning. Of course, they don't always go right to sleep when they go to bed, so they get about twelve solid hours sleep. It is very seldom any of them needs to go to the bathroom during this twelve hour period, so the sleep is uninterrupted.

Then in the afternoon, right after dinner, the children go to bed for an afternoon nap. This lasts at least two hours, sometimes a few minutes longer. And the children really sleep during this period.

Twice more during the day, the children go to bed too. They lie down for fifteen minutes just before their dinner, or midday meal, and another quarter hour just before they eat supper. We have found these short rest periods of great benefit to the children's digestions and appetites. They play hard and vigorously, and if we let them come to the table straight from the play yard, they would be excited and nervous and not ready to eat. They wouldn't eat much and what they did swallow wouldn't do them much good.

The children don't always fall asleep during these rest periods, but they do remain absolutely quiet, and so the tension they have worked up playing is gradually eased, and the children become absolutely relaxed. During these pre-meal rest periods, we always play music on the phonograph for them. We started this years ago, and now the children demand it. Besides it helps greatly in getting them to relax. We find that music plays a very important part in the lives of these children.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, October 30

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ANOTHER high-pressure and aggressive day is read from the forceful combination of potent planetary figures. Affairs may be expected to move decisively, strenuously, perhaps belligerently and drastically, toward the goal of great objectives. This probably in coalition with groups, societies or organizations of vast scope and power. Weighty matters of both business and private character may be in the balance, which may be swayed from one polarity or the other by the ability to exercise good judgment, sagacity and definite constructive programs. Precaution and tact are enjoyed, since there are signs of strange or surprising angles should impulse or personal entanglement complicate or undermine promising circumstances. Love intrigues may be imminent and dangerous.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of great activity and stress, in which ultimate issues depend decisively on the use of wisely directed energies and faculties toward constructive and progressive objectives. Powerful groups are involved, whose influence may be for public humanitarian educational or social welfare, and these should be approached with finesse and practical plans rather than over aggressively or insistently. Enticing complications of a sentimental, romantic or intriguing nature may arise to nullify some very hopeful and promising conditions.

A child born on this day should have an abundance of energy and talents for attaining its highest ambitions, which may lie in practical channels or in great creative expression in cultural lines. It will be sound and dependable although having a subtle, intriguing and captivating personality.

CITY COUNCIL TO OBTAIN VOTE ON QUESTION

Will Ask Ratepayers to Vote on Changing Control of Management of Waterworks and Gas Departments

PETITIONS PRESENTED

An expression of opinion to be obtained by vote at the next municipal election will be given on the question of the removal of control of management from the Public Utilities Commission of the Waterworks and Gas Departments of the Corporation, to the Corporation, the City Council decided at their regular meeting on Monday evening. Some years ago the control of management of these two departments was turned over the Utilities Commission but, the members feel that the control should again be vested in the Council and the people will be asked to decide. The necessary by-laws to obtain an expression of opinion and a recorded vote were passed through the various stages last evening.

James Fraser, acting for a number of merchants in the city, appeared before the Council with a number of petitions covering every group of store owners and managers in the city asking that a Wednesday half holiday be permitted for ten months of the year. The Mayor stated the Council would accept the petition and if the Clerk in checking found the required number of names were on each list for each group, by-laws would be prepared in accordance with the statutes and passed through Council. It requires three quarters of each group signing before a by-law can be passed. Mr. Fraser asked that a penalty be placed in the by-laws for non-compliance, if the by-law was passed and this was promised by the Mayor. The lists will be checked by the City Clerk and it is likely the by-laws will be ready for passing at the next meeting of the Council.

Sell Fire Hall

The request of the Hastings Motors for purchase of the former Fire Hall was granted providing $100 was paid on November 15, 1940, December 15, 1940 and January 15, 1941. If these payment were not met on the time set, the property would revert to the city. B. S. Welsh will be paid $125 a year to service the city clock and Garfield Reilly was sold a barn for $15. A store sign will be erected at Evans and North Front Street. The Auditor will be paid $100 for breaking down the accounts of 1937, '38 and '39 and prepare a budget plan for 1941 in order that all accounts for each department will be kept separate and the chairman of each will be able to see at a glance how his department stands. Alderman Rollins Clarke and Armstrong were appointed as a committee to investigate complaints of citizens relative to signs on McDonald and Highland Avenues.

P. V. Belcher was sold the Walton property on Station Street for $1,200. The city will donate stone for the sports field at the Trenton Airport but at no cost to the city. Alderman Rollins stated that the stone was free to the city but they would not pay for transportation. A committee of Aldermen Clarke, Logan, Armstrong, and Graham was appointed to investigate and report on G. K. Graham's application for tax adjustment. The account of the Martin Funeral Home for $263 for indigent funerals be paid but the Council cancelled the agreement with the W.C.A. with respect to indigent funerals. Henceforth the family will be able to select their own funeral director but after the selection is made the authority of the Comptroller must be obtained by the funeral director before the city will become liable. The cost of any indigent funeral is not to exceed $20.

Concur in Resolution

The council concurred in a resolution to ask the Ontario Government to share in the maintenance of connecting links of Provincial Highways passing through municipalities. The Municipal Board approved the grants made by the city of $250 each to the 2-26th and 32-34th Batteries and this money will be paid immediately. The council accepted an invitation to visit the Bata plant when the Chamber of Commerce makes their Goodwill tour to Frankford. The Kiwanis Club was given permission to collect scrap metal for war purposes and the co-operation of the Public Works Department will be freely given. Ross Neal by by-law was granted an extension on the property purchased for another two year. Chief Lynch was given authority to deal with the various oil companies. There being no further business the council adjourned.

Loses Assault Case, Sent to Jail Herself

London, Ont., Oct. 29 —(CP)— Sadie Johns, 28, of the Six Nations Indian Reserve, Brantford, lost an assault case against George Hughes, 32, London, today and was herself sentenced to 30 days in jail when she pleaded guilty of vagrancy.

Both the woman and Hughes were arrested early this morning after she had run into the street clad only in a man's overcoat and had phoned police. She charged Hughes with assaulting her in his home.

Commenting Miss Johns' story was "unusual," Magistrate D. B. Menzies dismissed the charge against Hughes.

Germany Has Concentrated Seventy Army Divisions In Southeastern Europe

British Military Expert Estimates That Since Fall of France Germany Has Steadily Been Moving 1,250,000 Men Towards Balkan Area—Gives His Opinion on German Viewpoint on Russia

London, Oct. 29 (CP)—Germany has concentrated about 70 army divisions in southeastern Europe, a British military expert declared today.

(This would be about 1,250,000 men).

Ever since the collapse of France, he said, Germany steadily has been moving troops towards the Balkan area and now has a gigantic striking force there besides other troop concentrations in Poland and farther north.

These concentrations, in the expert's view, indicate that the Germans feel Russia is preparing for any eventuality and that Germany wants to insure that the Soviet does not interfere with her plans.

London Fire Brigade Shows How to Fight Air Raid Fires

London, Oct 29 (CP)—The London fire brigade sponsored its first press conference in history today for the benefit of three visiting firemen from New York.

In the words of Daniel Deasy, Chief of a Bronx battalion, the Americans came "as pupils to a master" to learn organization for fighting air raid fires "before they give us a rap in the lung."

Other members of the party are Frederick Wedemeyer, Chief of the Marine Division, and fireman Geo. Scott.

Deasy remarked that "a little fire in New York creates more excitement than a 200-pumper here."

Comment Declined on Story Of Seaman Deadly 'Time Bomb' Found on U.S. Army Transport

Seaman's Story was That Ship's Master of Arms Found Contraption and Threw it Into Sea

Panama, Panama, Oct. 29 (AP)— An official source aboard the United States army transport Republic refused to confirm or deny today a seaman's story that a deadly "time bomb" had been found aboard the ship shortly after she sailed from San Francisco with 3,000 troops and passengers.

According to the seaman's story, H. F. Dodd, the ship's Master of Arms, discovered in the after hold a box containing "a mechanical contraption" and enough nitroglycerine to blow the vessel "clear out of the water."

"Praying All the Way"

Dodd was said to have carried the box on deck, "praying all the way," and dumped it overboard. Most of those on the Republic were unaware of what had happened, the seaman said.

An inquiry was reported held aboard the Republic following her arrival here yesterday, but Col. Joseph Bibbs, the ship's Adjutant, answered queries with:-

"I have no statement to make."

The Republic was expected to sail from Cristobal for New York tonight after making the eastward passage through the canal.

Indications Incident Known

San Francisco. Oct. 28 (AP)— United States army authorities declined comment on details of a reported plot to blow up the transport Republic, but there were indications they knew of the incident a week ago.

Major Robert H. Wylie, Acting Superintendent of Transport Service at the Fort Mason Docks here, said his "hair stood on end" until the ship arrived at Panama, but he would disclose no information concerning an investigation.

The Republic arrived here directly from Honolulu and sailed after loading at the transport docks. She touched no other port between here and the Canal Zone.

Italian Supply Line Across the Adriatic Endangered by British

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, Oct. 29 (AP).—Italy's invasion of Greece has dropped a match in a powder barrel that could blow up in the faces of the Nazi-Fascist partners. It may already have exploded if Athens reports of the British-Italian naval battle at Corfu are confirmed and victory there rests with the British.

If British sea power is engaged at Corfu it is perilously close on the flank of the Italian supply line supporting the attack on Greece from Albania. The island of Corfu, off the Greek coast at the Greek-Albanion border, is virtually at the Strait of Otranto, entrance from the Mediterranean to the Adriatic. A sea fight there would mean that British naval units are stabbing to cut or confuse Italy's communications with her Albanian bridgehead across the Adriatic.

Even if the reported action at Corfu goes unconfirmed, however, there are elements in the situation possibly more favorable to Greece than the overwhelming odds now against her would indicate. It remains to be seen what Turkey and Russia will do.

Russia's Role Vital.

Russia's role is the vital missing piece in the war-picture puzzle. That Greece elected to risk all without some positive knowledge, not only as to Britain's ability to aid her, but also as to Turkey's intentions and what Russia would do, seems improbable.

It is also unthinkable that the Hitler-Mussolini team would risk attacking Greece without carefully weighing the probable role of Turkey and Russia. The Fascist attack on Greece hints that they may have set the stage carefully in Rumania to induce Russian quiescence so long as they do not attack Turkey, Russia's friendly neighbor.

Growling of the Russian bear over German military occupation of Rumania, and the approach to the Black Sea was clearly audible. The Italo-Greek conflict suggests that the axis armies hope to push the war against Britain in the Eastern Mediterranean from closer-up Greek bases and without attempting a land attack across the Dardanelles and through Turkey. The object might be to appease Russia.

The Italian spearhead from Albania seems aimed first at Salonika on the Aegean coast of Greece. It is some hundred miles closer by air from there to Alexandria and the Suez Canal than from any base in Italy.

Gives Britain Bases.

The logical British answer to the new axis move is occupation of the Greek island of Crete, and Athens reports that has already been achieved. Crete is less than 400 miles from the British base at Alexandria, Egypt. It also would afford Britain a sea and air power springboard for attack on Italy at relatively close range.

North of Crete is Morea, or Peloponnesus. The southern lobe of Greece proper, it is cut off by the wide waters of the Gulf of Corinth from Northern Greece except for a slender and canal-cut isthmus. It is easily defended even if the rest of Greece is overrun, and would afford Britain bases for a close-up flank attack on axis thrusts toward Egypt by air and sea.

With or without Turkish aid the British-Greek allies, backed by the Royal Navy, interpose a powerful veto on whatever plans the axis allies are maturing to press the war against Britain in Egypt. If Turkey joins in at the approving nod of Moscow, that powder barrel set off by Italian invasion of Greece would blow up the axis.

F.D.R., OPENING, DRAFT LOTTERY, SAYS YOUTH READY

Survival of Liberty and Justice Depends on Strength to Defend Against Attack

FIRST NUMBER 158

Washington, Oct. 29—(AP)—President Roosevelt, opening the United States draft lottery, said today that America's young men "are ready, as all of our country must be, to play their part" in the country's defence.

He spoke in an auditorium beside a huge bowl of draft numbers. The order of their drawing will determine the order of service of a possible 17,000,000 men in the United States first peacetime conscription.

Mr. Roosevelt said "That in the present world the survival of liberty and justice is dependent on strength to defend against attack."

"We are mustering all our resources, manhood and industry and wealth to make our nation strong in defence," Mr. Roosevelt said.

Only the Strong May Continue to Live in Peace

"For recent history proves all too clearly, I am sorry to say," the President continued, "that only the strong may continue to live in freedom and peace."

To the men who will be called for service, the President said: "You have the confidence, and the gratitude and the love of your countrymen. We are all with you in the task which enlists the services of all Americans—the task of keeping the peace in this new world."

Holders of draft serial number 158 became first in order today for a year's military service.

That number was drawn by War Secretary Stimson who handed it to President Roosevelt for announcement.

The second number today was drawn by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and the President announced it as 192.

Attorney-General Jackson drew the third number which Mr. Roosevelt announced at 8,239.

Glass Aquarium Used

A 23-year-old glass aquarium which Lieut. Col. Charles R. Morris, inactive Reserve Officer of Elizabeth, N.J., bought out of his own pocket for the first United States draft lottery of 1917 contained the numbers determining the order of army service for possibly 5,000,000 men.

Within 20 days, on Nov. 18, the first 30,000 of the 5,000,000 are scheduled to be in camp for a year of training, which will be the beginning of 15 years in the United States Reserve Forces for most of them.

400,000 to be Called by March

Before next March, the army intends to have called a total of 400,000, and by June 15, 800,000. Under the law, 900,000 additional can be called each year until the conscription act expires May 15, 1945.

Each of the 17,000,000 men between 21 and 36 who registered for military service has been assigned a serial number by one of the 6,175 local draft boards throughout the country.

Enclosed in bright blue, non-transparent capsules, numbers from one through 8,500 were placed in the historic draft bowl. These numbers correspond to the serial numbers already assigned to registrants by their local boards.

The order in which the capsuled numbers are drawn from the jar determines the order in which the men holding that number in every local draft district will be called up for possible service.

Not every one called up, of course, will be ordered to actual service. National headquarters expects that 12,000,000 will be deferred because of their jobs, families or lack of fitness.

Says Attack Bombers Likely for Use of Royal Norwegian Force Training at Toronto

Ottawa, Oct. 29—(CP) — Attack bombers, built at Santa Monica, Calif., for delivery in Canada, are probably for use of members of the Royal Norwegian Air Force training at Island Airport in Toronto, a source in close touch with Canadian air facilities said today.

The fact that Norwegian pilots are in training in Canada quite apart from Royal Air Force activities, together with the fact that the planes were ordered by the Norwegian Government and are undergoing inspection at Santa Monica by Cmdr. Kristian Ostaby, head of the Royal Norwegian Military Mission to the United States, suggests the Norwegian fliers in Canada will get them.

At present these student fliers are using preliminary training type planes.

Following a three-hour ultimatum from Rome, which was rejected by the Greek government, Italian troops poured from Albania across the Greek border as the latest Axis "grab" got under way. The strategically important island of Crete will probably now play an important part in British naval operations in the Mediterranean.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Beyond Tomorrow"

For downright entertainment of the finest order the new R.K.O. Radio release, "Beyond Tomorrow" current feature attraction at the McCarthy theatre, can be classed as tops, a picture so far off the beaten track—so daring and beautiful and unusual in theme, so full of rich human hope and love and desire, that you'll sit entranced through its telling.

Charles Winninger, C. Aubrey Smith and Harry Carey, as three elderly construction engineers, start the story off by tossing three wallets out of he window facing Fifth Avenue on Christmas Eve. In each of them is a ten-dollar bill and their cards. Richard Carlson as a young Texan in New York trying to make a stake to get back home, and Jean Parker worker in a children's clinic, return two of the wallets, stay for dinner and switch the point of view of the elderly men almost immediately.

A short time later the three men are killed in a plane accident. Winninger leaves $10,000.00 to the young couple, which leads Carlson onto the radio where he sings and immediately becomes a favorite of the airways. He is signed for a role in a Broadway musical opposite beautiful Helen Vinson, who at once starts to set her cap for him. Carlson who has already become engaged to Miss Parker, stops seeing her and spends his time with Miss Vinson. And then an amazing feature creeps into the picture, for we see the spirit of the departed men return to their earthly home to plan ways of stopping Carlson from falling for the wiles of Miss Vinson. Throughout the rest of the exciting picture Winninger's spirit in particular takes part in the most thrilling moments of the story.

Winninger, Carlson and Miss Parker have never appeared to better advantage. C. Aubrey Smith, Harry Carey and Maria Ouspenskaya gives distinguished performances and Miss Vinson is right at home with the "other woman" role. You are urged not to miss this excellent screen hit, plus an outstanding program of short featurette subjects including, Fox News, an amusing Walt Disney technicolor cartoon and a twenty minute comedy treat entitled "Coat Tales" now showing at the McCarthy.

Barranquilla, Colombia, Oct. 29—(AP) — The 2,947-ton Hamberg-American Line freighter Heligoland, which dropped anchor in Puerto Colombia Bay at the beginning of the war, sailed last night without bothering with the formality of clearance papers.

The ship's captain left two letters addressed to the customs administrator and the Line's agent. It was reported that some pilots of the Scadta Line, a German commercial air line operating in South America, were on board.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Pastor Hall"

The Hollywood reporter review on "Pastor Hall" now showing at the Capitol with a matinee daily. "Pastor Hall" is, without question, the most dramatic screenplay this reviewer has ever seen. The stark drama of the story is made more vivid because of the truth behind it, based on the happenings to Pastor Niemoeller, the Lutheran minister, who dared oppose many of the Hitlerian edicts. As a production, it could not be improved upon.

The picture deserves everything it can win at the boxoffice and, further, it deserves the inspection of every man, woman and child in every community in Canada, because it tells them actually what did happen in Germany, even though its lens is focused on but a single incident in the Nazi forge to the front. It speakes the truth and speaks it in a language easily understood by everyone. It may be that this truth is so shocking that audiences will shy away from it.

Based on an unproduced play by the late German dramatist, Ernst Toller, the screen story leans entirely on the Pastor Niemoeller incident in Berlin, which created world-wide attention at the time. In the picture the minister presides over a parish in a small German town, and, when he refuses to bow to the principles of the Nazi regime, he is thrust into a concentration camp, where, for sheer tragedy, cold horror and stark brutality nothing like it has been seen on the screen.

Lawson Truly Great

The enormously responsible task of enacting the exacting role of the pastor falls heavily on the shoulders of a truly brilliant actor—Wilfrid Lawson—who delivers an inspired performance throughout the picture, rising to great heights at the end, when, after a tremendously suspenseful escape from the camp he returns to his parish for his final sermon, from his pulpit, knowing it will be his last, with a storm trooper firing squad waiting outside for him.

Film Perfectly Cast

There is much to say for the rest of a perfectly blended cast, Nova Pilbeam as the pastor's daughter, the gruff, stoical "old line" general of Seymour Hicks, the tragically bewildered betrayed girl Lina Barrie, and other impressive roles by Percy Walsh, Brian Worth, Bernard Miles, Peter Cotes and Edmund Williard.

Woman Hears Son's Number Called

Washington, Oct. 29 (CP)—When President Roosevelt today announced the first number—158—in the United States draft a woman in the auditorium screamed.

She told reporters her name was Mrs. Bell of this city and that her son, Robert Bell, who holds No. 158, was 21 last Aug. 27.

Mrs. Bell later walked to the platform and shook hands with Dr. Dykstra, director of the draft.

AT THE BELLE

"Foreign Correspondent"

For the first time in the history of motion picture making, the reactions of passengers aboard a great trans - Atlantic seaplane disabled in the air and spinning into the sea was filmed for a spectacular sequence of the new Walter Wanger romantic, thrill drama, "Foreign Correspondent" now on the Belle Theatre screen.

A master of realism and suspense, Director Alfred Hitchcock discussed the matter at length with Producer Wanger before the picture started.

"Of course I know it will be tremendously expensive," he said. "It probably will cost ten times as much as using miniatures, the customary method. However, it has the advantage of novelty—no one has ever attempted it before, and it will add tremendously to the drama of the scene. The audience will know exactly how it feels to go through such an experience when they see it on the screen. It will add a fitting climax to a series of progressive situations which are more and more suspenseful.

On Hitchcock's guarantee that it probably would be the most exciting scene ever made, Wanger immediately okayed the extra expense in line with his production policy of always striving for the best possible effects in telling a story.

"Making the audience suffer" is a trick of Hitchcock's which he has found highly successful.

"I make them a part of the story," he explains, "and they go right along with the characters. Sometimes they know more than my people when it is necessary to heighten the suspense, again they are taken completely by surprise. Any picture at which audiences have exclaimed aloud in alarm or gasped with fright always has been a great success."

Walt Disney's latest color cartoon "Donald Duck's Vacation," precedes the feature attraction.

Truck Driver Drowned As Vehicle Plunges Over End of Dock

Midland, Ont., Oct. 29.—(CP)— Harold Scott, 40, Midland, was believed to have drowned early today when a two-ton truck plunged from a coal company dock here into Midland Bay. A diver will attempt to locate the body.

Scott drove on the dock shortly after last midnight and threaded his way to the end of the slip where he took a wrong turn. He apparently was attempting to back out when the truck slid over the edge of the dock.

Finlay McDonald, dock watchman, notified police after he saw the truck with one wheel hanging over the dock. He attempted to persuade Scott to leave the cab, he said. The truck apparently crashed into the water after the watchman began his rounds.

The truck was loaned to Scott last night by his employer, T. G. Wilcox, so that he might take home a mattress. A long-armed crane was employed today in an attempt to recover the truck but efforts later were abandoned pending arrival of a diver. The crane, however, brought up the mattress from the truck.

FORMER MAYOR OF DETROIT, MICH. IS KIDNAPPED

Frank Couzens Forced to Drive Miles in City by Drink - Crazed Colored Bandit

ROBBED OF $50

Detroit, Oct. 29 (CP)—A drink-crazed colored bandit kidnapped Former Mayor Frank Couzens from the driveway of his home last night while his wife looked on helplessly, forced him to drive several miles and then robbed him of $50 and his personal possessions.

During the wild ride which lasted for almost half an hour, the bandit fired a shot into the floor of Couzens' car, which the latter had purchased two hours earlier.

"I was going to take my wife for a ride in the new car," said Couzens. "She had gone back in the house to get something."

Couzens said he heard the door on the right hand side of the car open but thought it was his wife.

"A man stuck a gun in my shoulder and said, 'Drive, you ———, drive.' The man had a strong odor of liquor on his breath.

"Just then my wife came out of the door and I yelled, 'Go back, dear. Go back'."

Mrs. Couzens Saw Bandit

Mrs. Couzens saw the bandit and ran back in the house. She immediately called the police.

Meanwhile, Couzens was forced to drive down Longfellow Avenue to Third Street. It was at this time that the thug raised the gun and fired into the floor boards. He then took Couzens' watch, glasses and several loose bills.

They turned from Third onto Edison Avenue and proceeded east. At Woodward Avenue Couzens attempted to stop the car to await an opening in traffic before attempting to cross, he said. "If you stop this car I'll blow your brains out," Couzens quoted the bandit as saying.

Passed Police Scout Car

During the ride they passed a police scout car and the bandit threatened to kill Couzens if the police stopped him.

The ride finally ended in a side street off Russell, the exact location of which the former mayor could not recall.

Couzens returned home before a broadcast could be put on the air with a description of the car.

Description of the thug given police by Couzens was a brown-skinned negro about 30 years of age, wearing a gray hat and carrying a blue steel gun.

U. S. Marine Officers Ordered to Move Into Defence Sector

Shanghai, Oct. 29—(AP)—United States marine officers have been ordered to move into the American defence sector of the international settlement, it was disclosed today, following the departure of their dependents.

Many officers at present live in the French concession or Japanese-controlled extra-settlement districts.

Observers interpreted the new order as designed to consolidate the marines in their area, although officials asserted it had no special significance.

The United States navy has not taken any such action with regard to its officers living outside the American defence sector.

Meanwhile the arrival of the U.S.S. Gold Star, supply ship, on a routine voyage from Guam and Chinese and Japanese ports, revived periodic rumors that withdrawal of the United States marines and navy personnel from Shanghai was imminent. Officers said the rumors were without basis.

DEMONSTRATIONS REPORTED

London, Oct. 29 (CP)—The Norwegian Telegraph Agency reported today that it had received information that there have been "violent demonstrations against the new order in Norway, especially at Bergen."

The Agency said there have also been demonstrations at Trondheim.

BUNNY DUNLOP TOO ENERGETIC AND EARNS DISQUALIFICATION IN TRYING TO "UNMASK" MARVEL

Referee Would Not Join in Fun and Wrestling Closed for Season in Gladsome Way

FIRST BOUT GOOD

Slap-Happy Pavich Has Too Much Punching Power for Pavlos

The identity of the Masked Marvel that "hooded horror" of the wrestling world, still remains a deep dark secret insofar as Belleville grappling fans are concerned and the more rabid patrons can take it or leave it, because the bemasked gent waltzed out of the Hume Arena last night unscathed and the winner, when his main bout opponent, Al Dunlop, was disqualified, after each top-biller had obtained a previous fall.

However, Dunlop did his utmost to please the fans and tried in vain to reveal the countenance of the hated "Mask," but in so doing provided his own downfall, as his zealous efforts in his efforts to unmask resulted in Dunlop getting slightly too energetic and his pugnacious efforts were in no way appreciated by Referee Faux, who after warning disqualified Dunlop, and saved the Marvel from exposing his perhaps homely mug.

It must have been a torrid bout, simply because the "Hooded Horror" dashed Dunlop's head against a ring post in the first round and as Al was listening to the birdies sing "tweet, tweet," the Mask merely flopped on him for a fall. And that was that. A cold shower revived Dunlop.

Now we've arrived at the second stanza in the last modern wrestling scrap to be staged at the Hume Arena this season. Dunlop had been pondering over that battle with the ring-post at the hands of the masked gent and re-entered the squared circle with ideas of his own and it didn't take him too long to put them into practical use as Mrs. Dunlop's BIG boy promptly picked the barrel-chested Mask up bodily and with what is known in the "rassling" business as a backbreaker, turned the Mask into a pretzel and dropped him gently to the canvas to even matters, much to the satisfaction of at least 500 fans; well anyhow a goodly number of feminines.

Marvel Tossed Around

The Mask returned after he had usurped Dunlop's place in the shower for a cooling off, and almost frightened a couple of paid customers into a sound sleep, but his efforts were to no avail, as Dunlop, the old meanie, tried to unmask the Mask. (This just ain't done in the best of wrestling circles nowadays.) Here's where the patrons leaned forward in their seats. Dunlop tossed the masked gent around in a rough, pugnacious (no foolin') manner. As a matter of fact Dunlop got so energetic in his efforts to unmask the "hooded gent" that Referee Faux took exception and disqualified Al and thereby saved the revelation of the Masked Marvel's identity. That made Dunlop really sore, (well, he hit the masked one hard after the decision), so now we must wait until next Spring and the defeat of the Masked Marvel to learn his identity.

However, there was a good exhibition, as wrestling exhibitions go, in the curtain-raiser, when Jimmie Allen (and he needs no introduction) grappled to a draw versus Pedro Valdez, the Mexican lad. Jimmie is still one up on Pedro after two meetings, however. Joking aside, the patrons actually applauded the work of these boys, their fast, agile and acrobatic efforts were well received and appreciated. Allen won the initial fall following a series of Irish whips, while Valdez took the second fall with a rolling figure four arm lock. In the third round Allen tried in vain to twist Valdez's arm off, presumably to use for a buggy whip, but the lithe Mex. weathered the attacks and all was even after 45 minutes of pleasing entertainment.

Pavich Declared Winner

Then there was the second bout of the night between Jack Pavlos and George Pavich, and mind you both of these lads saw their first daylight in Greece and yesterday the Greeks went to war against the Italians, but apparently neither Pavich nor Pavlos had heard the latest war communiques. Pavich was declared the winner after being slapped twice on the back to Pavlos' once in a best-two-in-three bout, but there was no evidence of wrestling during the entire 27 minutes in which the pair stumbled and staggered around the ring.

Pavich was the better at making faces, but Pavlos outdid him at grunting and groaning. When the pay-off came Pavich, a former pug, used his fists to advantage and when he wasn't attempting to sock Referee Faux, he did manage to get a punch into the mid-section of Pavlos and actually that's how he won both his falls; simply by punching Pavlos to the canvas with kidney punches and dropping on him for the count. Pavlos tried in vain to figure out means to keep from being pinned, which is the object of the game, but he just couldn't put the object into practice.

And Mister Compositor, you won't be bothered with any more of this grunt and groan business until after we have a very successful hockey season at the Hume Arena, or at least we sincerely hope so. Adios.

C. CONACHER SCORES 2 GOALS

Firmer Toronto Player Assists Americans in Defeating Rangers 3-2

Winnipeg, Oct. 29 (CP)—Big Charlie Conacher nonchalantly scored two late first period goals here last night to lead New York Americans to a 3-2 triumph of Rangers, their intra-city rivals of the National Hockey League and send them ahead for the first time in pre-season exhibition series.

Previously each team had won twice. They continue with a game at Port Arthur Wednesday.

Conacher tallied his first counter after left winger Tommy Anderson had tallide the game's opening goal on a three-way play with Murray Armstrong and Lorne Carr just before the game's first change of forward lines.

The big defenceman broke away from one of the power plays the Rangers sometimes stage when they are short-handed, took Anderson's pass and beat Goalie Dave Kerr from close in on the left wing. The teams were even when he flipped in his second counter from a right wing spot.

Both Ranger goals came in the second period while Conacher and the rookie line of Allen, Bus Wycherley and Billy Benson of the Americans were on the ice. Bryan Hextall drilled one past Earl Robertson from 10 feet out and Lynn Patrick got the other after stickhandling through the American defence.

TAIL-END TEAMS HAVE CHANCE FOR PLAYOFFS

Tigers Must Defeat Ottawa and Argos and Have Help From Montreal

CHANCES SLIM

Balmy Beach Sitting Pretty With an Undefeated Record of Four Games

(By The Canadian Press)

Hope springs eternal so far as football players, are concerned, which is the reason why the big four teams of Montreal and Hamilton still believe there is a chance of making the two-team league playoff.

Hardly a football fan in the East would give a wooden nickel for such a thing to happen, yet the teams themselves refuse to be counted out despite the fact only a miraculous combination of events could make it so.

Here is the setup: Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders, with four games gone, are tied for top place with six points. Hamilton Tigers and Montreal's unnamed team likewise are tied with two points apiece, having victories against each other.

The Tigers, to get a playoff chance, must defeat both Riders and Argonauts and have the help of a Montreal victory over one of the two leading teams. It's the same way with the Montreal team, which believes that it can take both Ottawa and Toronto and is counting on a Hamilton victory to help out.

But despite these Hamilton and Montreal hopes, the way seems clear for both Toronto and Ottawa to finish out the season with two more victories over the cellar teams and wind up in a tie for first place.

In the Ontario Rugby Football Union Toronto Balmy Beach has a clear-cut lead, being the only undefeated team in the east. The Beaches have won all four of their games. The big battle in the O.R.F.U. looms between Hamilton Alerts and Sarnia 2-26 Battery. The Battery hold a point edge with two games to go.

TOTAL WAGER AT ALL TRACKS WILL BE HIGH

Poor Support of Tracks Last Spring Offset by Response to Autumn Meets

MORE CONFIDENCE

Money in Circulation Becomes Greater and Patrons More Confident in Victory

Ottawa Oct. 29 (CP)—Despite the war—or perhaps because of it — Canadians went to the races this Autumn in just as great crowds as they ever did and at some tracks did even better than that setting all-time high records for attendance.

It is expected last year's total wagerings at all tracks in Canada, $21,696,523, will be equalled this year regardless of the bad business in the first half of the season.

Figures are not complete yet, but officials in charge of such statistics here said today they are confident the unusually poor support racing got last spring was offset fully by the response to Autumn meets.

This reversal in the public attitude towards the Ponies, it was believed, reflects a basic change in attitude regarding the war itself, although other factors probably enter into the picture at the same time.

Last spring was marked by a degree of general uncertainty, the officials said. Now a definite confidence had developed. The man on the street was more certain of ultimate victory, even though reconciled to a long, hard struggle, so he continued his usual diversions—such as racing.

There was more money in circulation , too, because hundreds of millions of dollars were being spent on war orders.

Still another factor might have been the weather. During the spring and early summer meets at many tracks the weather was cold and wet while this fall generally it was fine, encouraging attendance.

Greatest upswing in Autumn track business was in Ontario and British Columbia, the officials said, although business also was improved at Winnipeg and on the Prairies generally. Track patronage in Quebec and Ottawa was comparatively stable, although total figures for the season are not yet available.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

(By The Canadian Press)

Everything happens to Chicago Black Hawks. Paul Thompson's charges ran into trouble while training at Hibbing, Minn. when the ice gave out several times after the players had skated for less than five minutes. Now the Hawks are in St. Paul, Minn., for a week of training and exhibition games. They intended to drill yesterday but the refrigeration plant in the rink broke down.

Manager Jack Adams has finally decided on the man to fill the goaltending job with his Detroit Red Wings. Adams announced yesterday that red-headed Johnny Mowers, 24-year-old Niagara Falls, Ont., product, will take over the spot vacated by Cecil (Tiny) Thompson, now manager of Buffalo Bisons of the American League.

Mowers has played only a half season of professional hockey, going to the Omaha club of the American Association last year after starring with Pontiac of the Michigan-Ontario Amateur League. Most serious opposition in training was Jimmy Franks, who was goalie last season with Indianapolis of the American League.

George Mantha, veteran left winger, is out of the National Hockey League for the first time since he turned professional in 1928. Mantha with Canadiens for the past 12 seasons has been sent to New Haven Eagles with Polly Drouin and Peggy O'Neil. The three players are subject to recall.

Toronto Maple Leafs have broken camp at St. Catharines Ont. to start a three-game exhibition series. Decision as to which players will get Leaf berths will be made on their showings in the games. Coach Happy Day intends to split his squad into two teams for the first game which takes place at Brantford tonight.

New York Americans are making their best showing in many seasons in their present exhibition series with New York Rangers. Each season the teams engage in a series and the Rangers generally haven't had much trouble. But this season things have been different. The Americans now hold a 3-2 edge in games having won the fifth contest 3-2 last night at Winnipeg.

Boston Bruins are in Montreal now for a week's training prior to opening the National Hockey League season with Montreal Canadiens. Coach Cooney Weiland says that the Bruins are standing pat on the lineup that won the N.H.L. championship last season. Says Weiland: "This club was good enough to win the championship last season. Barring injuries it should be good enough to go on from there."

LOWER CLUBS OF LAST YEAR GET OVERHAULING

Canadiens, Americans and Redwings Will Present Nearly New Lineups

MANY NEW FACES

Canadiens Have Added Largest Number of Rookies to Their Squad

Toronto, Oct. 29 (CP)—Listen this season, you National Hockey League fans, to the vendor's old cry that "ya can't tell a player without a program!" It won't be just the old sales talk when Montreal Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings or New York Americans are in town.

Band them all together and they could go on the road as "new faces of 1940-41," with their promoters guaranteeing that if nothing else they will thrill you with the speed and dash of youth. Soon now, the promoters will have a chance of eating their words or throwing them into the faces of the rival bosses.

It's not hard to tell just by looking at the fall training camps how the National League clubs wound up last April. The old adage to ride with a winner still holds good and it's the clubs which bogged down that are given an overhauling.

Starting from the bottom, the biggest rebuilding job has been done to Montreal Canadiens, who finished last. No less than six absolutely new faces to the N.H.L. may be seen with this season's club. The Americans, sixth last year, will introduce five young men to the ways of the big league and the big cities and the Red Wings have at least two for display.

Many New Faces

For the approval of Montreal fans, who were tired to a state of staying away with the Canadiens of 1939-40, the Messrs. Tommy Gorman, Dick Irvin and Frank Patrick will show a streamlined model with such innovations as Elmer Lach from Moose Jaw; Jack Adams (no relation to Detroit's of the same name) from Vancouver; Ken Reardon from Edmonton; Tony Graboski from Sydney, and other points; Johnny Quilty from Ottawa and Joe Benoit of Trail.

Some of the comforts of the old model are still around, such as Toe Blake, but mainly it's the club's youth which is attracting attention at the moment. The Canadiens will also have a comparatively new goalkeeper, Bert Gardiner from Philadelphia Ramblers who saw a little action in the N.H.L. with New York Rangers.

Scrapped Foundation

Red Dutton scrapped his American foundation and brought in Bill Benson from Winnipeg; Bus Wycherley of Brandon, Man.; Squee Allen from North Battleford, Sask.; Johnny O'Flaherty from Toronto, and a man whose name should give the sports writers some glee, Pete Slobodzian from Brandon and Regina.

The Red Wings' rebuilding was started last season and is pretty well completed with the replacement of the veteran Tiny Thompson by Goalie Johnny Mowers of Niagara Falls, Ont., and the addition of Jud McAtee, a junior with Oshawa, Ont., a year ago.

There'll be no first-year men with New York Rangers, Toronto Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins or Chicago Black Hawks. At least there won't be any until their bosses see whether they can keep on the winning ways that assured last year's players their jobs for the start of a new season.

Grandeur That Was Rome Declined to Mean Bravado of Bully Says N. Y. Times

New York, Oct. 29.—(CP)—"The grandeur that was Rome has declined to the mean bravado of a bully, striking at those who are not expected to strike back".

Thus the New York Times commented editorially today on the "unprovoked assault on one more small nation, launched on an even flimsier excuse than usual".

But the newspaper saw the Greek resistance to the Italian aggression a "bright sign in the darkness", for in its long story Hellas has never been a great power; it has survived many invasions and defeats because it is what its few million people remain in their resistance today—a great nation".

The Herald Tribune said Mussolini has "opened a new phase of the great struggle; and it is a phase in which courage and bold decisions can earn, as always, a possibly great reward".

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

When the A.A.U. of C. functioned as the dominating sports tribunal in Canada, once a promising amateur hockey player joined the moneyed ranks he was isolated from the simon pure ranks forever. Of recent years the amateur heads, especially the C.A.H.A., have taken a more lenient stand in such matters, but the most sane suggestion is yet to come, we hear. Don't be at all surprised if the heads of the amateur hockey on this continent come forward with modern regulations pertaining to young amateur pucksters, who sign professional hockey contracts and then fail in making the grade. According to some authentic grapevine sources an agreement has already been reached whereby a young player, who plays professional hockey and is let out by the moneyed ranks, can regain his amateur status within 15 days from the date of his last pro game.

There may be one other hitch in the proposed regulations, however. The player must be given an outright release from the professional club with which he signed, while every other club in the pro league must also waive on his services. After all this is completed the player may return to the club from which he played amateur hockey last. If adopted by all, and we hear the ink is already dry and announcements in the making, a youngster who wants to see what he can do in the pro. hockey ranks will not hesitate, as he knows full well he won't be kept out of hockey for the rest of his life even if he misses the big hockey train. If the International Hockey Association moguls adopt this unannounced program it will be the next thing to perfection, as this corner favours the English system of mingling amateurs and professionals, and then only is realized the pure state of amateurism.

Do you remember when a Babe Siebert Memorial Benefit hockey game at Montreal a year ago today realized $15,000 for the family of the Canadiens' defenceman who drowned at Zurich, Ont., two months earlier. The Canadiens played a National Hockey League All-Star team.

It is understood everything isn't bread and honey in the city Interscholastic six-man rugby group. Convener N. A. (Pete) Beach has been diving into the archives and at least two local squads will be found in violation of the group playing regulations. Before bringing the matter to light, however, convener Beach is personally investigating every player in the group and only those getting his O.K. will continue. There are certain rules and regulations adopted in any organized sport which must be adhered to and the age limit rule is one of them.

Don't be too sure that Steve O'Neill will be with the Detroit Tigers as a coach in 1941. O'Neill did resign as manager of Buffalo to assume coaching duties with the Tigers, but although it hasn't been announced as yet, don't be at all surprised if O'Neill returns to the helm of the Bisons in 1941. Why? Simply because Buffalo will have a working agreement with the Tigers and therein lies some of the answer. Apparently Detroit isn't going to lose the services of 90 odd rookies again this year.

They pulled the curtain down on professional wrestling at the Hume Arena last night and not before the fans pulled the arena down on the heads of the grapplers. That Pavich-Pavlos bout really smelled, Pavich resembling more of a slap-happy, punch-drunk ex-pug, than a modern agile grappler. The patrons of the modern wrestling show desire for action, that is to say the agile, acrobatic style, displayed by Jimmie Allen and Pedro Valdez in the curtain-raiser. Actually the patrons gave these boys the "gladhand," which proves John Public knows what he wants. Insofar as the main bout was concerned, had Referee Faux left Al Dunlop alone and gone home to count the eggs his chickens laid, maybe the fans would have seen the Masked Marvel's homely mug. However, the patrons enjoyed a certain amount of glee when Dunlop did try in vain to unmask the "hooded horror" and although the brawl did terminate in a disqualification, we'll all be waiting for their return next spring.

Jewel Ens, former Pittsburgh and Cincinnati coach, who managed the Indianapolis American Association club last season, was an unsung hero of the 1940 World's Series, asserts Dan Daniel of the New York World-Telegram.

First, Ens scouted the Tigers on special assignment from Bill McKechnie and arranged the book from which Derringer and Walters pitched to the Detroit batters. Then he talked McKechnie into temporarily sidetracking Junior Thompson for the fourth game in favor of another chance for Paul Derringer.

Walter (Big Train) Johnson, one of the best pitchers ever to grace a major league baseball diamond, has now entered the big leagues of American politics. Johnson is running for Congress at the forthcoming United States federal elections next week. For 21 years Walter Johnson was the idol of Washington baseball fans, during which time he pitched 113 shut-out games and now he's trying to shut out his political opponent.

SPORT SPICE—Well, at last it was officially announced, Oscar Vitt has been fired by the Cleveland Indians. . . . There are many who would like to see the two-fisted Rogers Hornsby at the helm of the Indians. . . . There wouldn't be too much crying then, Hornsby would merely slap their ears down. . . . The experts say Bill Cook has one of the most powerful minor hockey clubs ever garnered together for the Cleveland Barons this season. Umpire-referee Bill Stewart, of Boston, was the principal speaker at the tenth annual Niagara Falls Baseball Association banquet last night. . . . Incidentally the ball banquet staged by the diamond moguls at the town of the Big Roar, is the biggest thing of its kind in Canada.

RALLIES GREEKS

"I expect every Greek to do his duty," declared King George of Greece in a special proclamation broadcast calling on the Greeks to resist the Italian invaders. The king went on to say, "The nation is united and will fight as one man—will fight for its altars and its homes to final victory."

Checkerboard Love

By JOSEPH McCORD

A FIRST-RUN McCLURE SERIAL.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Victor Quinn put in a disquieting two days during Judge Castle's absence, unable to overcome a vague foreboding that made him as restless as a caged animal. This last turn of affairs might affect his future almost as much as Jeffrey's.

It was a queer thing. His affection for Jeffrey was genuine; he believed that he had proved it. Jeff had said that he would not return to Parville under any circumstances, but that was before he had seen his father. By this time the two Castles would have had their encounter. The Judge would bring great pressure to bear on Jeffrey in order to induce that young man to come back. He just might succeed. And then what?

The answer seemed rather obvious. Of course Jeff would be taken into the firm. He should be. But the practice would not warrant the addition and both young men would be subsisting on Judge Castle's charity to some extent. In this it would be apparent that Victor was the odd man in the combination.

"Shyster, Flywheel and Shyster," he muttered to himself as he stood at the window, drumming with his fingers on the pane down which the rain was trickling.

The mention of that fictitious triumvirate brought Audrey into his consciousness with a pang. Try as he might, with all the logic at his command, Victor never could quite rid himself of that earlier premonition that Audrey and Jeff cared for each other more than they knew. So many little things had suggested it. Well, one thing was certain. He might have muffed his great opportunity, but he wouldn't run to Audrey with this news of Jeff. It would be as good as telling her that her childhood friend had failed to find his happiness, but shortly would be in a position to try it again. It wouldn't take the Harrison money and influence long to cut the knot. It hadn't the other time.

Victor gave a grunt of disgust and turned from the window. He'd better quit his mooning and write some letters. He had inserted paper in the typewriter and was trying to assemble his legal thoughts when the door opened and the Judge entered. Victor jumped to his feet. "You're back, sir? I'm sorry you didn't call and let me come over to the station for you. I hope you didn't get wet."

"No. A friend happened to be passing and brought me over. Come into my room, Quinn, if you please. I want to talk to you."

Seated in his swivel chair back of the desk, the Judge seemed uncertain how to express what he had in mind, but sat tapping his spectacles against the palm of his hand. "You must understand," he began deliberately, "that my trip to the city concerned you as well as Jeffrey. I gave the matter considerable thought on the way up."

Victor said nothing. Waited.

"I came to the conclusion, Quinn, that if I went directly to Jeffrey there would be danger that one or both of us might let our impulses get the better of us. So, instead of attempting to contact Jeffrey, I called Harvey Harrison and asked if he would join me at lunch. He is quite a remarkable man in some respects, Quinn."

"I imagine he might be, sir."

"He is. Very confidentially, Quinn, I may tell you that he was frank in condemning his daughter. Rather violently so, in fact. It seems that Jeffrey was sensible enough to want to learn the business from the ground up. Mrs. Castle appeared to think it was an attempt to humiliate her. When all her efforts failed to effect a change in Jeffrey's plans, she started divorce proceedings. I was equally frank in telling Mr. Harrison of the hopes I always had entertained for the boy. I trusted that this turn of events would mean that he would come back here and take his rightful place."

"Surely."

"Wait a moment, Quinn. I wish to make it clear that it was my idea that the sign out there should remain as it is. Naturally, I planned that you two boys would carry on together and relieve me completely from the practice, unless it might be in some advisory capacity. I have to admit, however, that Harrison talked me out of that."

"May I ask how, Judge?"

"Certainly. He told me that he had been receiving very flattering reports of Jeffrey's ability and initiative and was averse to having him leave the corporation. He told me he was satisfied that the boy is not of a legal turn of mind and never would be a credit to the profession. Later, Jeffrey suggested that I ask you to corroborate that fact, but I appreciate that you would not care to express an opinion."

Victor smiled slightly but made no answer.

"I was about to add that Mr. Harrison insisted that Jeffrey stay with him, that the divorce matter would in no way have any bearing on his business career. It was his idea that Jeffrey associate himself with the Brussels office for a year or two. If he decides to stay abroad permanently, that can be arranged. He was quite eloquent about it. All this before I had talked to Jeffrey, you understand."

Victor nodded.

"The upshot of the matter was that Harrison called Jeffrey and asked him to come down to the club The boy apparently is a little sensitive about the whole business. He wished to sever his connection with the company. Strange as it may seem, I found myself supporting Harrison's contention and that is the way it was settled."

"Then Jeff is going to Europe?"

"In the very near future. Of course he will be down here to spend a little time with us, first. And incidentally, Quinn, that solution leaves nothing for you and me to discuss. Things will go on here as they have. For that I am glad."

"I'm glad for Jeff's sake," Victor answered simply.

"I am glad for all our sakes. We will try to forget the whole unhappy incident. It will be a pleasure to go home and tell Mrs. Castle."

After Judge Castle had taken his departure, Victor lighted a cigarette and lifted his feet to his desk top to ponder the situation anew. A number of issues had been settled, mainly the one affecting his future in Parville. And he was sincerely glad that peace had been restored in the Castle family. As a matter of fact, he ought to feel happy about the whole thing since the complications seemed to have vanished to a great extent. And he wasn't. He felt distinctly depressed. When his phone rang stridently, he sat and looked at it until a second summons came. "Castle and Quinn's office," he admitted.

"How important we sound!" answered a laughing voice. "Do you know who this is?"

Victor's feet came down and a bright smile lighted his face. "I hope I do!"

"It's the shameless equestrienne. Very discreetly calling from the drug store booth. And slowly roasting in her raincoat."

"Fine! I mean . . ."

"I understand. I just wanted to say that I was coming from the beauty parlor a few minutes ago and saw the state coach rolling by. Have you finished for the day, too?"

"Yes, indeed. Where . . ."

"My car is parked just around the corner from here on West street. It isn't a very pleasant evening, but I know that Julia is having chicken and corn fritters for dinner and I was wondering . . ."

"I'll be at your car in exactly half a minute!" Victor hung up before any change in the procedure could be suggested. In the specified time he was gazing at Audrey through the window of her car with his heart in his eyes.

"How's this for boldness?" she laughed.

"Heavenly! You can't appreciate how I've been wanting to see you!"

"I thought perhaps your car had broken down. That's why I suggested I take you out."

"Never mind. Just so long as you're here and I'm here. Are you ready to go now?"

"If you are. We'll have time for a cocktail before dinner in honor of my birthday."

"Don't tell me that this is your birthday! That would be incredibly perfect!"

Audrey was too busily engaged backing her car from its parking space to answer for the moment. When she was straightened out in traffic, she observed: "It's nothing to gloat over, I should think. And today isn't my birthday, either. But I have one coming this year and I thought it might be a good idea to get the celebration out of the way. I inherit those forehanded notions from my New England ancestors, I suppose."

"Well, I'm certainly in favor of this one. You said chicken and corn fritters, didn't you?"

"That was the idea when I left home."

"What will this bus do if it's pushed?"

AFTER R.A.F. RAID ON "INVASION PORT"

German workmen are shown attempting to clear away debris after bombers of the Royal Air Force had paid one of their nightly visits to a German-occupied city on the French coast. The repeated raids by the R. A. F. on these "invasion ports" are largely responsible for Hitler's failure to launch his long-threatened invasion of England.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I said, Hay pop, and he said, Where have I heard that hay before?

Meaning what, and I said, Has ma called Mrs. Hews up yet?

I dont know, what about? pop said, and I said, About whether you're going over there to play bridge tonight. Mrs. Hews called ma a while ago and asked her and ma told her she'd call her after supper and let her know if you felt like it, I said.

I dont feel like it, pop said.

Wich just then ma came in the living room saying, Oh here you are, Willyum, are you having a nice smoke?

Sounding like an introduction to bridge, and pop said, I'd be having a better smoke if my concience was clearer, I've been thinking about those bureau draws that have been annoying you by sticking and jamming. I think I'll get to work on them right now, it may take me some little time, he said.

Why Willyum such a time for such a suggestion, ma said, and pop said, Well for Peet sake you dont want me to stay home from the office and fix them, do you?

Certainly not, but life is full of Sundays and Sattiday afternoons, and anyways the matter isn't so pressing as all that for land sakes, I mean I been struggling with those draws for months now, ma said, and pop said, And I been struggling the same length of time with my conscience, but by gollies I'll lick it tonight, leed me to those draws, leed those draws here.

Wich just then the telephone rang and ma answered it and came back, saying to pop, That was Maud Hews. I thought we might be seeing them tonight but it seems they hae unexpected company. I dont deny I'll be glad to have those draws working smoothly, she said, and pop said, I think I'll tackle them Sattiday afternoon as you suggested.

Wich he probably wont.

Egg and Butter Prices Steady

Toronto, Oct. 29 — The Toronto egg market opened the week with an improved tone yesterday as demand quickened for the light receipts of top grades. Prices paid to shipper on top quality graded eggs advanced 1 cent a dozen, with government inspected shipments of these grades selling at a premium of 1 cent. Dealers reduced grade A-large and A-medium a full cent a dozen in the retail section of the market, apparently to adjust quotations in line with the graded section, which showed a substantial decline last week. Inspection of eggs for export for the week ended Oct. 19, were reported at 18,810 cases.

Caution remained a keynote on the butter market in view of the move made last week-end by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Holders were not offering large quantities, but available supplies proved ample for the very slow buying. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids continued to sell for 28 1-2c a pound, although some points endeavored in vain to obtain higher prices.

and "numerous anti-aircraft batteries."

The Air Ministry named Kiel, Wilhelmshaven, Bremen, Hamburg, Emden and Cuxhaven as shipyard sites attacked.

In Boulogne, it said, shipping was attacked; at Homburg, Cologne and Hamburg, fires were started in oil plants; at Krefeld, Cologne, Koblenz and Manheim, railroad centres were bombed.

One plane failed to return, the communique said.

Warships under construction at Hamburg, Bremen and Kiel were attacked, the Air Ministry news service added later, and "extensive damage" was caused by bombs and fires.

Warehouses and dockside factories were set aflame at Bremen, it said, and great fires were left burning in Hamburg and Kiel shipyards after repeated raids.

Relays of bombers caused explosions and fires on Wilhelmshaven barracks and docks ,the report said and incendiary bombs fell across the gasoline storage area of the Emden naval base.

British Patrols And Warplanes Chase Italians

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 29 (AP) — British patrols and warplanes caused the "precipitate withdrawal" of strong Italian reconnaissance parties on the Nile three days ago and inflicted casualties on it in an overnight chase, a British communique reported today.

NEATLY ATTIRED

the elderly farm couple were found in their farm buildings by a mail courier on January 31st.

Wellman had been shot from behind while milking in his stable, while his wife had met death in bed in her home where she had been suffering with a heart attack.

Thain was arrested by Inspector A. L. Ward of the C. I. D. three days after the discovery of the murder while eating supper in his home. Previous to his arrest, the accused had identified the dead bodies of the slain couple during the preliminary police investigation.

Assistant Attorney-General Cecil L. Snider, K.C., acted for the Crown, assisted by Acting County Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson. R. D. McCulloch represented the accused man.

Case Outlined to Jury

In his charge to the Petit Jury, Prosecuting Attorney Snider outlined the story of the murder of the Wellmans. He told of the gruesome discovery on the morning of February 1st by a rural mail courier, of the shattered bodies of the slain couple.

He did not think it wise at this time to describe "the horrible injuries suffered by the dead couple."

Wellman had gone to a grist mill the day previous where 1,100 pounds of feed had been ground. This grain was missing when the investigation got under way. The theory of the Crown is, the crime was discovered on February 1st and it is believed it was committed on January 31st. The Crown also believes Mr. Wellman was killed about 4.30 p.m., January 31st, while milking a cow, and Mrs. Wellman was killed while in bed writing a letter.

Points Crown Has to Prove

The Crown will also prove that the accused went to a nearby store and purchased five shells. Keep this in mind, the Crown said. In the barn where Wellman's body was found two discharged shells were found. In the home of the accused were found two discharged shells, one live one and a shotgun. The Crown will prove that the shells found in the Wellman barn were fired from the same gun.

Mr. Snyder warned the jury of admissible and inadmissible evidence. "You must keep in mind that this particular trial is concerned only with the murder of Arnold Wellman," he said.

Jury Must Decide

"You twelve men must decide if one of your citizens murdered another of the residents of this county. It will be your responsibility to determine whether or not Fred Thain is guilty of the murder of Arnold Wellman.

Thain, well-dressed in a medium grey suit with white shirt and blue striped tie, flashed a quick glance around the crowded courtroom when he entered a few minutes after ten o'clock.

He answered in a firm voice, "Not guilty, Your Lordship" when charged with the murder of Arnold Wellman. He repeated the plea after the second charge was read.

He appeared to be interested in the court procedure but the carefree attitude that characterized him in the preliminary hearing was absent. He sat in the prisoner's dock during the selection of the Petit Jury, his hands clasped in his lap. He carefully scrutinized each juror as he was called, a smile playing occasionally over his face when he recognized someone. He smiled at the Bench and answered in the affirmative when asked if he understood the procedure of selecting the jury.

Told of Finding Bodies

Harry E. Faulkner, 27, rural mail courier, told the court he had been delivering mail on R. R. 2 Harold during the months of January to March. He had known Arnold and Nancy Wellman for the past 20 years, also Dr. Lorne Wellman, Dr. Marvin Wellman and Dr. Victoria Wellman.

He had often called at the Wellman house because of Mrs. Wellman's condition and the age of Mr. Wellman.

Mr. Wellman always started milking early, about 4 p.m., to save taking a lantern to his barn, the witness said. He had called at the Wellman house about ten o'clock on the morning of February 1st. He entered the west kitchen door.

Witness Knows Accused

"Do you know Fred Thain?"

"Yes, I have known him 10 years. The Thain farm was the first to the west of the Wellman property," witness said.

It was witness' habit to open the door and yell "Good morning." Receiving no response on this particular morning he walked in. The house was cold and the pantry door was open.

"I then walked to the bedroom door. The Wellmans used two beds in the room. I noticed Mr. Wellman's bed had not been slept in. I looked at Mrs. Wellman's bed and she was apparently asleep. I then went to the stables, the horses were whinnying and cattle lowing. I saw Mr. Wellman lying on the floor of the stable and became alarmed.

Told of Stock Holding

Answering a digressive query, Faulkner told the Crown Wellman had two heifers, one calf, three pigs or sows and three horses.

He then returned to the house and called Dr. Carleton, Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Reid, neighbors, witness' mother, and Dr. J. J. Robertson, Belleville, "because he was a friend of the family."

He and Reid later went to the barn, where the latter said Wellman was dead. Other people, including Dr. Robertson, Mrs. Fred Thain and police officers including Sergt. Harry Thompson, Constables Irvine and Smith arrived shortly afterwards.

Suffered Heart Attack

Mrs. Wellman had suffered from heart trouble, Dr. E. A. Carleton, Stirling, stated, and he had given her treatments. He had treated her some five days before her death.

He had been called by Eddie Faulkner to the Wellman home on February 1st where he found Arnold Wellman lying on the stable floor. By the light of a flashlight he saw that the whole top of the head was gone. The brains were gone and the skull split to the nose. The stable walls were spattered with blood and brain symptoms. The top of the head was lying some 14 feet from the body. A black and white cow was spattered with blood and brain material. Later, witness had seen the body of Mrs. Wellman.

Post-Mortem Held

Dr. Carleton had witnessed a post-mortem examination of the body of Arnold Wellman by Dr. Frankish, medico legal expert, and Dr. W. L. Robinson.

Under cross-examination by Defence Counsel McCulloch, Dr. Carleton stated he was of the opinion Wellman had been dead six hours. The body was stiff but not frozen.

Dr. W. L. Robinson, Professor of Pathology at the University of Toronto, who conducted a post-mortem examination of the body of Arnold Wellman, told the jury the skull had literally been blown off from a gunshot wound at the back of the head. Little pittings of the skull could have been produced only by a gunshot and not a bullet. Cause of death was attributed to this gunshot wound.

Nancy Wellman had come to her death in a similar manner, the witness testified.

"Was the condition of Arnold Wellman's head the result of one discharge or two?" the Crown asked.

Two Shots Fired

"In my opinion the explosive nature of the wound was caused by the simultaneous discharge of two shots," Dr. Robinson replied.

Under cross-examination, the witness stated the two shots entered the head as one mass as there was only one hole. His opinion that two shots were fired was based on the explosive effects on the skull and its "terribly shattered condition."

He had known Arnold Wellman for 40 years, Theodore Reid, Wellman's neighbor testified. He had seen Wellman the Monday previous to the discovery of the body, at Robert Fleming's mill in Springbrook. It was shortly before noon. Later Wellman left with between 10 and 12 bags of grain, weighing about 75 pounds each, on a wagon.

Saw Grain In Barn

On February 1st the witness had seen grain in the Wellman barn, but it was not in bags nor was it ground. Previous to this he had let the cattle out of the barn but he did not know Wellman was dead until the arrival of Dr. Carleton. He had pointed out a black and white blood-spattered cow to Dr. Carleton.

"I heard gunshot reports about 3.30 p.m. on January 31st," the witness stated. "The wind was in the northwest and the reports were clear. They came from the direction of the Wellman home. The first report sounded like a double discharge while the second was not so loud. We did not pay much attention as we thought it was someone hunting foxes."

Did Not Own Sleighs

"Wellman had a shotgun," Reid said, "but very seldom used it."

"Did Mr. Wellman own any sleighs to your knowledge," the Crown asked.

"No, he did not."

"Was the cow which you say you saw spattered with blood and brain matter, the same cow under which Wellman's body was found?" the Crown asked.

"Yes," replied Reid.

Mrs. Eleanor Reid, wife of previous witness, had gone to the Wellman home after being notified of the tragedies. She had seen the body of Mrs. Wellman in the home, but had not gone to the stable.

Charles Mott, Belleville city engineer, identified plans of the areas pertaining to the scene of the crime.

NANNING RETAKEN BY CHINESE ARMY, SAY SPOKESMEN

Chinese Break Into Japanese - Occupied Coal Mines, Annihilate Japanese Guards

WAR INTENSIFIED

Hong Kong, Oct. 29. — (AP)— Chinese news dispatches indicated today an intensification of the three-year-old Japanese-Chinese war.

The Central (Chinese) News Agency reported Japanese troops in Southern Honan Province had stated a three-column offensive in the direction of the western slope of the Tepeis Mountain range, scene of several bloody battles.

The Agency also said Chinese troops in Northern Honan began a westward drive last week along the Taokow-Chinghua railway, broke into Japanese-occupied coal mines at Thiatso and Linfeng, and annihilated Japanese detachments guarding them.

Chinese army spokesmen officially announced recapture of Nanning, strategic communications centre in Kwangsi province which the Japanese said yesterday they were abandoning.

Chinese dispatches to Chungking also said Chinese forces yesterday recaptured Shaohsing, famed wine-making centre of the coastal province of Chekiang, and that Japanese troops were retreating in the direction of Hangchow, south of Shanghai.

Little Girl Gives Alarm of Fire

Toronto, Oct. 29 —(CP)— A little girl pounded on the door of a St. Clarens Avenue home early today and warned three women, two of them invalids, that their building was afire. Identity of the girl was not learned.

"I'm certainly grateful to her," said Miss N. K. Fliff, one of the adults living upstairs in the building. "She got away in the excitement. I aroused my mother and sister."

The fire ate quickly through the wall separating a store from the dwelling. Interior of the store was gutted.

BREN GUN CARRIER NOW PRACTICALLY IN PRODUCTION

Canadian Plants Intensely Busy on Armored Tanks, Says Col. Ralston, Defence Minister

TOUR IN EAST

Halifax, Oct. 29—(CP)— Bren Gun carriers are practically in production now and will start coming off the assembly lines early in November, Defence Minister Ralston said here yesterday during a tour of the Dominion's eastern defences.

Reviewing progress in the mechanization of armoured units, Col. Ralston said that Canadian factories are at work on tank production with the Canadian Pacific Railway's Angus shops working "most intensely" on tank orders.

Today Col. Ralston planned to fly to Saint John, N.B., before visiting the military camp at Sussex, N.B. Later in the day he will fly to Summerside, P.E.I.

The Defence Minister said he was particularly impressed by the development at Debert, N.S., during his tour of Maritime Defences. There, thousands of workers have carved out a camp with accommodation for 20,000 men from a wilderness of spruce and fir. He said the camp would be ready for use by the New Year.

Coastal guns in the Atlantic area appeared to be "the last word in effectiveness and in security for the crews", Col. Ralston said.

He announced that no general recruiting for the Canadian Active Service Force is anticipated for the time being, because "recruiting conditions have been so satisfactory".

1,800,000 Tons of Greek Shipping Placed With Britain

New York, Oct. 29 (AP)—A British broadcast picked up here today by National Broadcasting Company said that Great Britain has gained "a total of 1,800,000 tons in additional shipping" because Greece has placed her ships at Britain's disposal.

32 British Ships Lost

British shipping losses during the week ending Oct. 21 were put at 32 ships totalling 146,528 tons.

Allied losses were listed as seven ships aggregating 24,686 tons, while neutrals lost six ships of 26,816 tons.

The average loss reported during the previous weeks had been 57,000 tons.

Last week's heavy losses authoritatively were said to be due to a large German submarine concentration in a particular area in the north Atlantic, not, however, without loss to the Nazis.

Precautions are being taken in the hope of preventing similar losses in the future it was said.

The largest losses were on a scale comparable with those in April, 1917, when the Germans sank 881,000 tons to give Allied shipping its most disastrous month of the First Great War.

GRAND JURY RETURNS TRUE BILLS AGAINST FRED. THAIN CHARGED WITH MURDER OF AGED COUPLE

Accused Will Immediately Go On Trial Before Justice Keiller MacKay and Jury

OTHER INDICTMENTS

A Hastings County Grand Jury brought in a true bill against Frederick Thain, 46-year-old Harold farmer, charged with the double murder of Arnold Wellman and Nancy Wellman, aged Rawdon Township farmers last January, at the opening sitting of the Fall Assizes of the Supreme Court of Ontario under Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay yesterday afternoon.

Thain faced the first charge of murder today with Deputy Attorney General of Ontario Cecil L. Snider, assisted by Deputy Assistant A. G. Walter Martin, conducting the prosecution. R. D. McCulloch of the Belleville legal firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott appeared for the accused man.

Five Indictments Presented

Five indictments were presented to Mr. Justice MacKay by the Crown shortly after the Assize opened. Included besides the double charge of murder against Thain were two changes in the original bills. Edwin A. Kellaway, Belleville fruit dealer, formerly charged with criminal negligence in connection with a motor accident near Millbridge late in August, that claimed the life of Mrs. Jessie Allore, Trenton, will, with Hubert Herrington, Belleville, driver of Kellaway's truck involved in the fatality, face charges of manslaughter.

Alice Archer McFarland and her husband, Robert McFarland, Frankford bridal couple, will face charges of the murder of Gordon Archer, 18-months-old son of the woman. Both indictments are joint ones and the principals in each case will be tried at the same time, providing true bills are brought in.

The last case on the heaviest criminal docket in the history of Belleville is Rex versus F. Storms, Deseronto. Storms is charged with rape, attempted rape and assault.

Following his charge to the jury, Mr. Justice MacKay requested them to hear the evidence in the case of Thain and return their decision to the court before proceeding with the other indictments. The jury heard several witnesses under Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson, and returned a true bill within one and one-half hours.

A Brilliant Charge

In eloquence that bordered on the brilliant, Mr. Justice MacKay in his formal charge to the Grand Jury stated "We face a war-wasted, war-distracted world, one in which ceaseless changes are taking place. In the last twenty-four hours, another nation in defence of its liberty and freedom has been compelled to declare war."

"What the future holds, we do not know," His Lordship declared, "but we do know the destinies of mankind are in the balance. We live in a world in which tyranny, aggression and despotism are arrayed against law and reason."

"The very law which you have been called to administer today has been challenged. The legions of Central Europe are hurling themselves with reckless abandon against the beleaguered British Isles whence came our laws, liberty, civilization and inspiration. The object of the forces of tyranny is to obliterate all traces of freedom from the earth."

"Should we, as shareholders in the Empire, need pleading to do our duty, or disaster to terrify us? Our duty is clear. Your high standard of duty is plain and you will use that judgment that is right and proper."

"If the priceless heritage, which we call our law and those qualities of freedom and liberty torn from tyrannous kings 800 years ago by your ancestors, who have handed them on thus far unimpaired are to remain, remember, in performing your function, you are but carrying on that which has gone on and on, because law itself must widen out if it is to live in the esteem of mankind," His Lordship said.

Duty is Important

"Your duty is an important one," he continued. "Democracy is something we must work on every day of our lives and you are called upon today to exercise some of the principles of this great system."

"You have heard and read," His Lordship went on, "that Democracy was a weak and unsatisfactory type of government. Fifth columnists and others have tried to misdirect the people. I ask you, if you waiver at any time, to remember that if there is any human force that cannot be withstood, it is the power and influence of a free community and the majesty of responsibility."

"You live in a community long recognized as one of outstanding loyalty, one which made great sacrifices at home and abroad and which is prepared to make even greater ones. I have no doubt whatever, that there is one single man from this county who will not say in his heart of hearts, that he will at all times remain true and faithful to the dictates of his own conscience," Justice MacKay declared.

"Eight hundred years ago, your ancestors had courage to tear from vested authority, the liberty we now enjoy. We have had a continuous line of courageous, God-fearing men, whose genius for, and passionate love of liberty, has given you an institution upon which you are serving today."

His Lordship reviewed the origin and progress of the grand jury. "Its function," he said, "is to say to the state if it has adduced sufficient evidence to warrant the accused man to stand trial."

Defined Legal Terms

"But, remember," stressed His Lordship, "it is not for you to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused man." He defined the meanings of the terms "murder, homicide and other causes of death." He pointed out that in a joint indictment a person is equally guilty of a crime, who aids, abets, procures or counsels that person who actually committed the crime. His Lordship closed his charge to the jury with instructions to visit, inspect and report on various county institutions.

The Grand Jury is composed of Messrs. Fred W. Fisher, Bancroft, foreman, Leslie Adams, Julius Abramsky, Belleville, George Arnott, Frankford, Howard Burlanyett, Bangor Township, George Caldwell, Carlow, Clare Carter, Huntingdon, Jules Ethier, Deloro, Robert Kellar and Alex. McKibbon, Dungannon, Thomas Reid, Faraday, Herman Vardy, Dungannon, and George Barr, Bangor.

Absence of a number of county residents empanelled for petit jury duty brought the warning from the Bench that "this is a stern duty of every citizen. We want to know why these men are not here," he said.

Court adjourned until ten o'clock this morning at this point.

TIMES REGRETS LOSS OF LINER

Says No Ship Ever Fitted Name More Truly Than Empress of Britain

New York, Oct. 29.—(CP)—The New York Times, commenting editorially on the loss of the Canadian Pacific Liner Empress of Britain, said today:—

"No ship ever fitted her name more truly than the Empress of Britain. She was indeed an Empress, with pride and grace and dignity in every inch of her. She had millions of devoted subjects, in many countries; for she was primarily a cruise ship, and she had been seen and admired in more out-of-the-way harbors than any other liner. Her white paint was a coat of ermine that set her apart from the throng. It was always a thrill to see her, in the blue Mediterranean or in more distant ports of call; it was always an event in our own harbor when the great white Empress came in.

"She had many proud moments in her reign of only a decade, notably when she brought the King and Queen home from Canada. But we suspect that the proudest of all were the months when the Empress wore her uniform of gray in wartime service. She carried thousands of troops from the free Dominions to the Old Country; she played her part in keeping England free. She now lies blackened and twisted on the ocean bottom, the largest of all the ships that have gone down in this war; but she lived up to the traditions of her flag to the very end, for the Admiralty has praised 'the resolute and efficient handling' of her anti-aircraft guns in her death struggle. The memory of this fine ship will survive until a new Empress of Britain inherits her name".

BRITISH ARMY

fighting services had "done its job better than anyone ever dreamed possible."

Said Lord Snell: "It would be imprudent to lock up with the army a proportion of our air resources and preclude its being exercised at the decisive time and in the decisive direction."

The army's air requirements should be treated not in isolation but as part of the air situation as a whole, he said. A certain number of air squadrons might in the future be placed under direct orders of army commanders. but Britain would rely on the air force proper for the general support the army required.

Assailed Agitation

Lord Trenchard assailed agitation which he said existed in some quarters for altering the set-up of the R.A.F. He told the Upper House the junior fighting service "has been the chief instrument in avoiding defeat and will be the chief instrument for victory."

Attributing the achievements of Britain's airmen—achievements in which Canadian and other Dominion fliers have had a prominent share—Viscount Trenchard said in personnel, equipment and training the R.A.F. had attained a superiority over the German air force such as it rarely reached in the last war.

He said a more efficient air force will go through a less efficient one "like a hot knife through butter."

Both The Times and The Telegraph editorially commended Lord Trenchard's views and welcomed the statement by Lord Snell that the government agreed with them.

OFFICER'S EXPLOITS AT DUNKIRK DISCLOSED BY NAVAL OFFICERS

Sub.-Lt. R. W. Timbrell, of Vancouver, Won D.S.C. at This Engagement

SAVED OFF MARGAREE

Ottawa, Oct. 29 (CP)—A day after announcing the rescue of Sub.-Lt. R. W. Timbrell of Vancouver from the sunken Canadian destroyer Margaree, Naval Service Headquarters Monday disclosed details of the officers' exploits at Dunkerque which won him the Distinguished Service Cross.

"Not content merely with accepting a limited responsibility, the young Canadian showed great courage and initiative in salvaging and manning stranded craft and tripling the number of men he would ordinarily have been able to evacuate," the Navy said.

The Margaree sank last Oct. 22 after a night collision with a merchant-ship in the North Atlantic. Thirty-one members of her crew, including Sub-Lt. Timbrell, were saved, but 140 others are missing and believed lost.

Sub-Lt. Timbrell was in command of a 90-ton yacht for his first night's work in helping remove the British Expeditionary Force from Flanders. Through his initiative on this night he was responsible for evacuating about 200 men instead of the 100 he counted on getting back to England, the Navy said.

Story of Officer

In recording his exploits, Sub-Lt. Timbrell said:—

"We went over to Dunkerque (the first night) and anchored as close to shore as we could get—which was pretty close. A bomb dropped so close to the ship that the vessel gave a terrific lurch breaking her cables. We drifted in to shore and found ourselves stranded.

"There was a wait of six hours before the tide would come in and float us free. I could see nearby two yachts that had been beached and abandoned. I figured I could salvage them and divide my crew to man them. I undertook to do this, and with the invaluable help of my men, I was able to get the yachts manned so that when the tide came in they were useful ships. There was quite a bit of bombing but fortunately there were no casualties among my men or the three yachts."

Refloated Vessels

"The second night across I found there were a couple more stranded yacht-type of vessel", Timbrell continued. "Once again we were able, when he tide came in, to refloat and man these vessels. There was still a lot of bombing, but it was at night and once more we forwithout serious misho ap.eld..R tunately were able to get back without serious mishap.

"We found we frequently were attacked by German U-boats. They would swoop in to about 25 yards and sweep us with machine gun fire. We had a few of the army's Bren guns on our ships and in every case we were able to drive the U-boats off—and we did not have a single casualty as a result of U-boat fire. The second night we brought out approximately 200 men in the three vessels.

"The third night", he said, "was the final night of the evacuation. They put me in command of three yachts going over. On the way over one became unseaworthy and we had to sink it—after, of course we had taken off the crew. We got over to Kinkerque and it was a pretty frightful piece of business. The bombing was bad and the shelling, too, was terrific. However, we were able to get away with about 275 men this night. On the return trip a trawler ahead of me was sunk by a magnetic mine. We picked up two of the crew of 15 —all we saw".

BRITISH TROOPS

Metaxas defence line are known as "Evson"—special units of mountaineers recruited from the district they are now defending. The "Evson" distinguished themselves in the Balkan wars and the Asia Minor campaign.

Increasing confidence was expressed in Government circles that the Greek army, rapidly being reinforced by reservists, would be able to hold out defensively and perhaps even have strength to launch a counter offensive into Albania against the Italians.

Look For Support

Greeks, who heard nation-wide broadcasts of promises of aid by King George and Prime Minister Churchill of Britain, looked for quick, strong support from British naval units reported to have beaten the Italian fleet to Key Greek island bases in the first day of fighting.

Athens was blackened out overnight, and other Greek cities which had their first bombings yesterday worked feverishly to expand hospital facilities and air raid defences.

The capital passed a quiet night, and no air raid alarms had been sounded up to 9 a.m. today (3 a.m. E.D.T.) since 3 p.m. yesterday

Reports indicated 50 were killed and more than 100 injured in the first bombing of the Greek port of Putras.

In the capital itself, anti-aircraft gun in Mt. Lycabettus, 900 feet above the streets, fired at raiders seen repeatedly over the ancient city once guarded by the walls of the Mistocles. No bombs fell on Athens yesterday, but the city's airport was bombed, and other raiders dropped explosives on Piraeus, port city of Athens.

Attempt to Damage Canal

Italian bombers also were said to have attempted to damage the important Corinth Canal, short-cut waterway across the narrow land link between Northern Greece and the Peloponnesus.

A communique from defenders of the Metaxas Line, built by Greece's Premier John Metaxes after the Italians took over Albania, said fighting was "localizing in the border".

Greek troops were said to be clinging stubbornly to strong points guarding mountain passes despite hard Italian thrusts along miles of the frontier.

The direction of the Italian attack was taken to indicate that Salonika, on the Aegean Sea, is the first main objective of the Fascist Legions.

That would cut off Macedonia and Thrace and sever the Greek defenders from friendly Turkey by land.

Although there was no sign what course Turkey might take, cheering crowds carried Turkish banners along with their own and British flags, and hoped for help.

Talks With Turkey

Premier Metaxas talked by telephone with President Inonu of Turkey yesterday, soon after the first firing along the northwest frontier.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation reported anti-Italian demonstrations in Yugoslavia, and said Albanians were revolting in such numbers that Italy would need 50,000 troops to keep her control there.)

Full mobilization, military and economic, was geared to top speed as King George II of Greece named Alexander Pagugos as Greece's Commander-in-Chief.

Trucks and trains took singing reservists, expected to bring the army strength up to 600,000 men, toward the front. Crowds cheered as the trains passed through stations.

Greece's small navy was reported in the upper Aegean, guarding Salonika, but Greeks hoped British seapower in the eastern Mediterranean would shield their whole harbor-indented coastline.

This hope was strengthened by reports Britain already had pushed naval wedges between Greece and Italian sea power in the Ionian Sea to the west and the Dodecanese Islands to the southeast.

Splendid Work of Navy

Britain was reported yesterday to have beaten Italian warships away from the island of Corfu, landed bluejackets at another nearby island in the Ionian Sea and occupied the 150-mile long island of Crete, which Greece won in 1912 from Turkey.

Athens had a quiet night except for the rumble of heavy troop transports through darkened streets. The populace seemed calm. Shops and restaurants were open again today for "business as usual." Flags were displayed everywhere.

Newspapers displayed extensive stories of London assurances Britain would aid invaded Greece. They had no official confirmation, however, or reports which said some British naval units already had arrived.

Reports of the first phase of the border battle brought a mounting conviction among some neutral military observers that Rome had underestimated Greek resistance.

U.S. ASKS VICHY

American naval and military experts consider that relinquishment of the French fleet—or the Dakar air and naval base—to Germany would be detrimental both to American interests and to the security of the western hemisphere.

It was learned authoritatively that the State Department had approached the French Government on the question of the French navy "before and since the Armistice" and while there was no official confirmation, it was understood that renewed representations had been made in recent days.

The French fleet, according to the latest unofficial figures, consists of 192 warships (64 of them still under construction) and could play an important role in the Mediterranean or off Dakar.

Roosevelt's Message

President Roosevelt's message to Marshal Petain, chief of the Vichy regime sent last week at the moment Petain was conferring with Hitler, was interpreted as designed to reinforce the previously expressed questions and views transmitted by State Secretary Cordell Hull. No official information on this subject, however, has yet been released.

The Roosevelt message was generaly understood in informed circles, nevertheless, to have been an appeal to Petain not to submit to any German demands which might force France into belligerent action against its former British ally, or cause a clash between French and American interests.

American apprehension over the future of the French fleet was made plain, it was learned, just before the French Government was forced to flee from Paris. Renewed representations have since been made at Bordeaux, Tours and Vichy, the successive subsequent capitals of unoccupied France.

"LORD HAW-HAW?"

This a photo of William Joyce, renegade Englishman, who, the British believe, is the broadcaster with the mellifuous Oxonian accent who broadcasts the perfidy of Albion from a Berlin radio station nightly. The British, who enjoy the broadcast, call him "Lord Haw-Haw."

Italian Attacks Delivered Under Artillery Barrages

Italian Aviation Activity 'Very Light'—Some Greek Ports Bombed

Athens, Oct. 30 (AP)—The Italians pointed a heavy attack into the western sector of Greece's defences today, apparently driving for Ioanninna (Janina), 30 miles from the frontier and about the same distance from the coast.

Neutral military quarters said the Greeks were resisting strongly, although the advance guards who faced the border at the outbreak of hostilities were slowly retiring to the main defence lines.

The fighting was the heaviest since Italy attempted invasion, they said, and heavy artillery thundered throughout the night on the lower flank of the battle in Northwestern Greece.

Move Deeper is Claim

Rome, Oct. 30—(AP) — Fascist troops were claimed to be moving "deeper" into Greece from the Albanian frontier today without encountering "serious military difficulties."

A Fascist source acknowledged the Greeks are resisting, but Italians denied they had driven any counter thrust into Albania.

On the African front, a high command communique said British mechanized units made two attacks on Eritrea from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Italian losses were described as "slight."

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

War and weather! General Washington once wrote: "A very heavy storm of wind and rain frustrated their design"; that is, the enemy's effort to take Dorchester Heights in March, 1776. The rain fell in torrents, and a gale of wind caused a dangerous surf, making it impossible for the opposing forces to land. Temperature, wind, precipitation, and fog or clouds are most important in either aiding or hindering military operations. Military commanders now insist upon complete current weather information when planning operations, and full cli[illegible]logical data before prepar[illegible] expeditions aboard, as the kind of clothing and other supplies depend upon what weather may be encountered.

BRITISH MINE WATERS AROUND GRECIAN COAST

Military Circles Also Say No British Troops Have Landed in Corfu or Crete

SHIPPING WARNED

London, Oct. 30 (CP)—The Royal Navy, moving to the aid of Greece, has mined approaches to important ports on both the east and west coasts of the kingdom, the Admiralty announced today.

The announcement said portions of the Gulfs of Corinth and Patras had been mined and that a mine field had been sown in the waters lying north of Crete along the east coast of the Peloponnesus.

Included in the latter area is the Gulf of Aegina—approach to Piraeus, port of Athens.

Shipping was warned of the danger of navigating in the specified areas.

British military circles declared no British troops have been landed in Corfu or Crete, and that they have no confirmation of a reported Italian landing at Corfu.

Charalambos Simopoulos, Greek Minister to London, conferred with Greek shipping representatives here today on the problem of transporting volunteers from Britain to Greece.

British Are Masters Of Mediterranean Says Soviet Army Paper

Moscow, Oct. 30.—(AP)— The "Red Star", Soviet Army newspaper, declared today the British fleet is master of the Eastern Mediterranean and forecast a hard battle between the Allied British and Greek forces and Italy.

The Soviet Government was informed of war developments by the Greek Minister.

"The location of Greece in the eastern part of the Mediterranean, where the British fleet is master, ensures aid from her British Allies who are interested in keeping so advantageous a battlefield in Greece," the paper said.

"The limited possibilities of Albania as a base for the Italian front, having only three or four highways, make it difficult for Italy to concentrate overwhelming forces.

"With the appearance of British aviation in Greece, the Italian bases in the southeastern part of Italy itself will be subjected to blows from bombers. Under such conditions, operations in the Albanian-Greek theatre of war do not promise quick decisive development."

Berlin, Oct. 30—(AP)—Well informed German sources hinted today that the axis powers, seeking to counteract Britain's strength in the Mediterranean, soon may hand Turkey an ultimatum similar to that which preceded Italy's invasion of Greece.

Turkey, like Greece, is a friend of Britain, which has guaranteed to help her in event of aggression by any European nation involving Turkey in war in the Mediterranean.

Conant Seeks To Ban Magazines On Sex Subjects

Toronto, Oct. 30—(CP)—Attorney General Conant said today that writs will be issued at Osgoode Hall immediately seeking to restrain publication of several magazines dealing with sex subjects deemed prejudicial to public morals.

The Attorney General's statement said the magazines "Sex Secrets," "The Body Beautiful," and "Health and Sex," all published in Toronto, were being singled out for action in a province-wide drive against such publications.

Mr. Conant said he was asking Federal postal authorities to ban these publications from the mails, and where the publications are being transported by express he would ask Federal authorities to exercise control under express regulations.

SUFFERS SHOCK IN CAR ACCIDENT

Port Hope, Ont., Oct. 30 —(CP)— Miss Margaret Bolster, Cobourg, was admitted to Port Hope hospital last night suffering from shock following a motor accident on Highway No. 2, east of Port Hope. The car in which she was a passenger was driven by J. J. Haynes, Oshawa, and skidded on the wet pavement. The car was wrecked.

J. T. Kennedy and two passengers, Mr. and Mrs. W. Murphy, all of Cobourg, were admitted to hospital following a crash on John Street, Port Hope. Police said the car driven by Kennedy crashed into a parked truck.

U.S. Completes Lottery To Send 800,000 Men To Camp for Training

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 30—(CP)—The United States today completed the lottery that will send 800,000 young men to camp for a year to form the nation's first peacetime conscripted army, although officials lost six out of the total of 9,000 draftee numbers and wound up officially with two more than they should have had.

Finding of the missing numbers necessitated a subsidiary "little lottery" which took only a few minutes. There was no clue to how the missing numbers, discovered through a wrong total and a check of the master list, disappeared in the first instance.

President Roosevelt, who faces next Tuesday the greatest test at the polls his long career has brought him, launched the complex draft machinery yesterday.

Three hundred newspapermen scribbled and a huge battery of cameras recorded the historic scene in the blue and gold auditorium of the Labor Department.

And the undertone was a wierd, high pitched scream of a mother when the President read the first number—158—the number held by her 21-year-old son.

The President was loudly cheered as he declared "the young men of America have thought this thing through and they thoroughly understand the necessity for national defence."

Grim-visaged and obviously wearied from his political tour and the grave events abroad which kept him locked up most of the day with State Department officials, the President declared in a low, serious voice:

"Recent history proves, I am sorry to say, that only the strong

ARTHUR HEMING, CANADIAN ARTIST, DIES AT HAMILTON

Famed for His Portraying Wild Life and Early Voyageurs

WAS AUTHOR ALSO

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 30. —(CP)— Arthur Heming, well-known Canadian artist, died early today at the home of his sister, Mrs. Robert B. Acres, Hamilton.

Heming was 70 years of age.

He gained his greatest fame as an artist for portraying wild life and the early Canadian voyageurs. He was 60 before he began to paint with colors and his announcement last January that he was putting aside his brush shocked the Canadian art world.

As a youth he studied in New York and London and he was only 16 when he took his first trip into the bush to see first-hand the life he was to portray so well on book and canvas.

Heming was an illustrator in the early part of his career. He was sent into the woods more than 30 years ago to make illustrations for a writer who accompanied him. When the writer failed to do the story, Heming wrote so that his illustrations would not be wasted.

The result was "Spirit Lake", an immensely popular book which was followed by "The Drama of the Forest", and "The Living Forest", both tales of the woodlands which won universal applause.

Mr. Heming, who was an art instructor in Hamilton in the 1890's had lived here since his retirement last January.

R. A. F. BATTLES, REPELS NAZIS HIGH IN CLOUDS

27 Nazi Planes Shot Down on Tuesday Revised List Shows

SCOTTISH BAG 8

London, Oct. 30 (CP)—German raiders crossed England's southeast coast today apparently headed for London but were engaged high above the clouds by Royal Air Force fighter planes and turned back.

London had only a brief daylight alarm.

The British fighters gave the invaders battle just after they crossed the sea. From the cloud banks hiding them from watchers below came the rattle of machine-gun fire and the whine of diving planes. In a short time the Nazis flew off.

No Casualties in Long Range Firing

German long-range guns mounted on the French coast fired across the misty Dover Strait into the Dover area this afternoon, but no casual ties or damage were reported when the firing ceased at 3 p.m.

London's second alarm of the day was sounded in mid-afternoon.

This evening the Air Ministry said "Only a number of small enemy formations" crossed the southeast coast without penetrating far inland. A few bombs were dropped "and little damage done and few casualties caused."

The communique stated that 28 German planes were destroyed yesterday and two bombers during the night.

BRITISH BOMBERS DROP FLARES TO FIND TARGETS

Cold Mist Forms Into Ice on Planes of British Airmen on Way to Berlin

FLY BY INSTRUMENTS

Industrial Plants and Military Objectives in Germany and Nazi-Held Territory Attacked

London, Oct. 30 —(CP)— Carrying on through cold mist which covered their planes with ice, Royal Air Force fliers last night bombed Berlin and dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs on numerous plants and military objectives in Germany and German-occupied territory, the Air Ministry said today.

Fires were started at oil plants at Homberg, Sterkrade and Magdeburg.

Again the R.A.F. roared down on Bremen and Wilhelmshaven, Germany, and on Den Helder, Ymuiden and Flushing, Holland, and Ostend, Belgium, attacking shipyards and docks.

Airdromes Raided

Other planes raided railway communications, airdromes, searchlight batteries and anti-aircraft gun positions. Two planes were lost in the operations, the Ministry said.

Its news service reported the British airmen ran into snowstorms and had to drop parachute flares to find their targets at Berlin. The heavy fall of snow prevented observation of the results. The pilots flew by instruments.

"We had hoped to get clear of snow before reaching Berlin,"' one said, "but if anything it was worse when we arrived. Still we managed to find our target, a large electrical works, and bombed it through the snow."

RCAF Officials Deny Bomb Sight Is Received

Ottawa, Oct. 30.— (CP)— Air force officials flatly denied today any suggestion the famed United States secret bomb sight had been received in Ottawa in a shipment by air from the Sperry Gyroscope Company, manufacturers of the device.

They said if a special shipment of sealed wooden crates, reported by the New York Herald Tribune to have been shipped from the company chartered plane to Ottawa October 22 had been made, they were unaware of it.

In the second place to their knowledge no such plane had arrived in Ottawa.

At the same time it was recalled here that Air Minister Power, speaking on air research at his press conference last week said Canada, the United States and the United Kingdom have been co-operating for some time on research in air matters.

Bras D'Or Was On Duty in Lower St. Lawrence R.

Navy Holds Only Slim Hope Vessel Might be Found

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP)—The Navy announced today the sturdy auxiliary minesweeper H.M.C.S. Bras D'Or, guardian of the gale-whipped lower St. Lawrence, is overdue with Lieut. Charles Avery Hornsby of Halifax and 29 officers and men aboard.

Next-of-kin already have been notified and the Navy held only slim hope the captor of the Italian merchantman Capo Noli might turn up.

The official statement said: "The search will continue until the vessel is found or until it is considered that hope should be abandoned."

The announcement followed by two days the disclosure of loss of the Canadian destroyer Margaree with 140 officers and men. Last June there was the loss of the destroyer Fraser with 45 men, both destroyers going down in collision.

Loss of the Margaree reduced Canada's destroyer strength to 12. Canada's present strength in minesweepers is not known. She had four at the outbreak of war in September, 1939 and the Bras D'Or was added later. Only recently, Navy Minister Macdonald said 18 were under construction, and others besides the Bras D'Or may have been added in the past year.

There was no suggestion in the navy statement that anything other than Autumn storms was responsible for non-appearance of the Bras D'Or, but if worst fears of the navy prove correct the loss would raise total naval casualties since war started to 243.

A spokesman said "if there is any hope it is only of the slimmest kind."

Messages sent to next-of-kin said she was "nine days overdue." And while the navy statement omitted the "presumed lost" commonly used in such announcements, it emphasized the foul Autumn weather prevailing in the area through which the vessel was travelling.

The Bras D'Or, under her 44-

SOCIAL CREDITERS REJECT PROPOSAL

Will Not Join Coalition Gov't. Proposed by Premier John Bracken

Winnipeg, Oct. 30 (CP)—Proposals of Premier John Bracken of Manitoba for a non-partisan government have been rejected by the Manitoba Social Credit League.

At a convention which adjourned at 1 a.m. today, delegates adopted a resolution against the five Social Credit members of the Legislature joining the proposed administration.

The rejection of the proposals followed an address by Hon. W. A. Fallow, the Alberta Minister of Public Works.

He voiced opposition to Premier Bracken's proposals, and said:

"For the life of me, I can't see what they hope to accomplish by it, or how this will aid the war effort."

Mr. Fallow said that a good business executive never looks for a partner when prospects are good.

"When principle has to be sacrificed for political expediency, decay has already begun to set in."

An amendment to the resolution urging coalition in matters pertaining to the war effort, was ruled out of order by the convention chairman.

S. E. Rogers, leader of the Social Credit group in the Legislature, told the convention that that the party's identity would be retained if the invitation to join the government was accepted.

At adjournment, Mr. Rogers said that final decision on joining the government rests with the Social Credit members. He indicated that the members would meet today to consider definite action.

Ambassador Kennedy States Britain Does Not Want U.S. in War Now

New York, Oct. 30 (AP)—Fresh from Britain Ambassador Joseph P. Kennery urged last night the re-election of President Roosevelt because "events move so quickly—the man of experience is our man of the hour."

The Envoy took occasion on a $20,000 nationwide broadcast sponsored by Mrs. Kennedy and their nine children, to declare flatly that "from the day I went to the Court of St. James until this minute I have never given to one single individual in the world any hope whatsoever that at any stage or under any conditions could the United States be drawn into the war."

He asserted that statements saying President Roosevelt was leading America into war were "false," as the President has said, and added that "the truth of the mater is that there is no more harmful step which could be taken from the viewpoint of Great Britain than our declaration of war."

To declare war, he continued, would handicap efforts to give aid to Great Britain The problems of transporting an army to England alone would be "staggering."

"To suggest, yes, I say even to suggest, that our boys will soon be on transports . . is completely absurd," he said.

"If President Roosevelt were as wicked as his opponents charge, which he is not, and even if he had undisclosed commitments, which he has not, the facts are against our participation in this war."

The cost of the broadcast was $14,486, with an additional $6,200 paid to radio actors on a program normally broadcast at that time.

Witness States Thain Told Him Wellman Given 'Both Barrels'

Jury is Out While Counsel Argue Admissability of Evidence — Judge Rules to Admit Testimony

TRIAL PROCEEDS

Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay, presiding at the murder trial of Frederick Thain, Rawdon farmer charged with the killing of Arnold and Nancy Wellman, Harold farmers, last January, today granted the admissibility as evidence of a statement given to Inspector Ward, C. I. D., Sergt. Harry Thompson and Constables Everett Smith and David Adair following his arrest on the morning of February 2nd.

His Lordship after hearing evidence of several witnesses and argument by counsel, stated that the "Crown had discharged amply the onus placed upon it to the entire satisfaction of the court, that the statement was given in a free and voluntary manner and not through promise, threat or inducement."

Lingham Martin, former Wellman employee, who was serving a jail sentence during the time of the tragedy, told the court of a conversation with the accused. Thain had told him, he said, "I went to the barn first, where I knew Wellman was milking. I made a good job of it and let him have both barrels."

Constable Everett Smith testified to a conversation that took place between him and accused prior to the taking of the statement. This was corroborated by Police Constable David Adair, Sergt. Harry Thompson and Inspector Ward who told the court of the taking of the statement "which was given voluntarily and without promise, threat or inducement."

Thomas Sharkey, another inmate of the jail at the time, also gave evidence regarding a conversation said to have taken place between

No Fully Employable Family Head On Relief in 15 Municipalities

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—At least 15 of the 40 municipalities which make up 90 per cent of Ontario's relief load are without a fully employable family head on their relief rolls, Welfare Minister Cross said today in making public figures covering relief during September.

Total expenditures for relief in September in the 40 municipalities were $454,061, compared with $570,984 in August and $1,234,983 in September 1939.

At the end of September, Mr. Cross said, there were 5,911 employable family heads receiving relief with 4,548 of these in Toronto. Municipalities reporting no employable family heads in relief were: Brantford Midland, Kitchener, Mimico, Collingwood, Port Arthur, Cornwall Township, New Toronto, Long Branch, Welland, Trenton, Toronto Township, Sudbury, North Bay and Timmins. Only one employable family head on relief was reported in Etobicoke, Stratford, Peterborough, Fort William and Sault Ste. Marie.

Number of employable family heads receiving relief in September elsewhere in Ontario was: York Township 375, Ottawa 250, Windsor 199, Scarborough 128, Hawkesbury 88, Hamilton 83, East York Township 49, London 48, Niagara Falls 32, Rockland 29, North York 20, Kenora 10, St. Catharines 9, Guelph 9, Kingston 9, Oshawa 8, Sturgeon Falls 7, Stamford Township 3, Eastview 2.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

TWO DWELLINGS BUILT LAST MONTH

The proposed construction of two dwellings constituted the major value of building permits issued at the city hall for the month of October. Of these, one permit was issued to Mr. John Ireland for the erection of a dwelling at 36 Chatham Street to cost $4,500 and the second permit for a dwelling at 300 Foster Avenue to cost $4,000. A permit for the erection of a cottage to cost $500 and one for alterations to a house for $700 were the other principal items on the month's building list.

Permits for the erection of garages and minor alterations to dwellings and one warehouse addition for $150 made up the balance of the city building list for the month.

OWNERS OF RIFLES KEEP AMMUNITION ON HAND AS PRECAUTION

A conversation among several local deer hunters and sportsmen in a downtown barber shop this week revealed that some of the men feel the proximity of the war. Three or four of the group admitted that they had obtained 100 rounds of ammunition to fit their hunting rifles and were keeping it in a convenient spot should the need of guns arise to repel invaders, or deal with any other wartime situation which might develop. One man argued that every Canadian should have a rifle and 100 rounds of ammunition ready in his home for any emergency.

LABORERS NOW IN CONSTANT DEMAND

With the placing of four laborers at the Trenton Air Port on Tuesday morning not one person seeking employment of this nature remains on the list at the local Employment Service. "If further calls for workers of this class come to the office we will not be able to fill the demand unless more are listed," stated W. D. Ross of the local Employment Service on Wednesday morning.

Calls for general duty men to work at the Airport are also frequent as the irregularity of the hours which such men are requested to work make it difficult for these men to secure transportation to and from work. Skilled tradesmen of almost any category are in demand, while domestic help is also scarce, according to Mr. Ross.

Police Blotter

Five students from the Belleville Collegiate were apprehended joyriding by Traffic Officer Doug Ellis yesterday. The quintette admitted to police they had taken what is generally known as a "jollopy" and proceeded to tour the city. Motorcycle Patrolman Ellis observed the manner in which the vehicle was being driven on Dundas Street and halted the vehicle, requesting the driver to produce his operator's permit. Failure to comply with the officer's request today resulted in a charge of operating a motor car without a license preferred against the youthful driver. The vehicle was returned to the school and the other members of the crowd allowed their liberty after receiving a stern lecture at the hands of Chief Kidd.

Tricycles Reported Stolen

Two children's tricycles were reported stolen in Belleville yesterday both from the same district in the city. The tricycle stolen from the residence of Frank Bateman, 256 Coleman Street, was later found abandoned, but one taken from the home of J. E. McVeigh, 53 Everett Street, was not reported recovered.

Two transports, the property of the Smith Transport Company, were in collision at the intersection of Bridge and Front Streets, early today resulting in over $250. damage to one of the vehicles. The transports were following each other southerly on Front Street when the lead vehicle driven by Reginald Brearley, Toronto, stopped to observe the traffic signal. The second transport crashed into the rear of the first truck resulting in considerable undercarriage damage to the second truck, the drivers reported to Sergeant Arthur Booth at the police station. A faulty vacuum line which controls the brakes of the trailer was accounted for the failure of the second vehicle in halting.

Kingston police reported the theft of a 1938 Pontiac coach, stolen in that city early today. The vehicle carried Ontario license plates No. 6C216.

Due to present conditions the dairies have lost several men and have been under additional expense for supplies the past year, the public can greatly assist us to keep the price of milk at the present level if they will co-operate with us in the following manner.

Purchase your daily supply from the wagon. We lose money on special delivery orders and are considering the necessity of making an extra charge for this service.

If at all possible pay your milkman in the morning when he is calling with the milk, these men work several hours extra each week calling back for the money, this will not be necessary after the 1st. of the month.

St. John's Mission Celebrates Disposal Of the Mortgage

A very pleasant evening was spent at the Mission Hall on Oct. 28th, to celebrate the disposal of the mortgage. The ladies of the Guild put on a banquet at which there were about two hundred present. The tables were tastefully decorated with mums and candles. F. L. Rev. Provens gave the toast to His Majesty the King. The speakers were Dr. Semple, Rural Dean Rev. A. B. Payne, His Lordship Bishop Lyons and Rev. Wright, all of whom brought the congratulations of their various congregations. Rev. Heaven was in the chair. Miss Derry sang. Mrs. Enstey of Point Anne, a solo, Mrs. Holmes, of Rednersville, a solo, Miss B. Arbuckle gave a reading. Harry Wagner and his orchestra gave several numbers.

St. John's Mission originated at the home of Mrs. D. Redner, who saw the need for a Sunday school. At the suggestion of Mr. Edgar Bateman, then teacher for the school in that district, she wrote to Bishop Seager who gave permission to start the Sunday School and Mission. The trustees of the day school of which Mrs. Redner was one, kindly offered the use of the building for the Sunday School and mid-week meetings were held in various homes by Rev. J. Lyons and Rev. A. L. Geen with other helpers. The school house was used from about June till late January, when the Sunday School was transferred to 260 Dundas St. where it was held until the hall was built. When there was enough money to buy the land and build Bishop Seager laid the cornerstone which was July 31st, 1931. Rev. Secker was the first incumbent, Mr. Jennings the first Sunday School superintendent and Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Grimson the first wardens. Now the mission has a A.Y.P.A. and Sewing Club. The money to clear the mortgage was nearly all earned by the Ladies' Guild through sewing and catering, etc. Mrs. Redner was President until about two years ago when she retired, owing to ill health and was succeeded by Mrs. Matthews. Much tribute is due Mrs. S. Fox and Mrs. M. Weeks, through whose efforts the catering to the W. I. conventions was given the Guild, without which the mortgage would have taken much longer to be paid off. It was regretted that through having moved so far away Mr. and Mrs. Manore and family were unable to attend. They were all great workers for the A.Y.P.A. and the mission. Mrs. Mathews paid tribute to Mrs. Redner for her many years of service. His Lordship Bishop Lyons pronounced the benediction.

Joyriders Blamed For Theft of Bus

Joyriders are blamed for the stealing of a 23-passenger bus, operated by the Rathbun Bus Line of Trenton. The bus was taken from its accustomed parking position in Trenton late last night by unidentified persons, who later abandoned the vehicle on a sideroad east of the Trenton R.C.A.F. base.

Two civilian passengers were seated in the bus when a man entered and drove it easterly. The passengers, whose names were not revealed by Trenton police today, were civilian employees at the Air Station. The driver of the bus had left the engine of the machine running while he stepped into a nearby store to purchase cigarettes. During his absence the bus was stolen.

"This is not the first occasion in which such practices have resulted in inconvenience for the Rathbun Bus Company, and the guilty parties will be arraigned into court later this week, as we are convinced we know the identity of the joyriders following our investigations today, "Chief Wm. Bain stated at noon. Arrests are expected in the matter this afternoon,

The War Today

By Guy Rhoades Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Britain's Royal Navy sowed minefields today in strategic waters off Greece while the little kingdom's sturdy soldiers were reported offering stout resistance to Italian thrusts at her northwestern frontier.

Neutral sources reported the Greeks were falling back slowly to the Metaxas line in accordance with a preconceived plan. That plan probably was worked out last August when Italy first threatened Greece with reprisals for the death of an Albanian bandit whom the Greeks said Albanians killed.

The Greek government revealed for the first time today that the torpedoing of the cruiser Helle as she lay off Andros Island in the Aegean Sea last August was the work of an Italian vessel. Authorities said they had found inside the hull of the ship torpedo parts bearing Italian factory identification markings. They added they had not made the disclosure previously because of political reasons which no longer existed.

Beyond issuing a warning to neutral shipping to beware of new mine fields in the Gulf of Aegina which guards Piraeus, the port of Athens, in the Gulf of Patras and the Gulf of Corinth and in waters lying north of Crete along the east coast of Peloponnesus, British authorities gave no details of any action.

Reports were current in Berlin that the Axis might hand Turkey an ultimatum similar to that given Greece, presumably demanding bases on Turkish territory and free passage of Axis troops through Turkish territory in a March to the oil fields of Iraq.

Some observers believed such a move by the Axis would force a showdown in Turkish-Axis relations, probably bringing Turkey into the war on the side of Britain and Greece.

The question of Russia's attitude to Turkey in such an event remained unanswered, but it was noted the Soviet Army newspaper "Red Star" declared the British fleet was master of the Eastern Mediterranean and that the Allies and the Axis would engage in a long, hard fight over Greece.

The "Red Star" editorial gave no hint of Russia's feelings toward Turkish participation in the war, but observers noted it was not unfriendly to the Allies. They recalled also that Russo-Turkish peacetime relations have been good for a considerable time.

On the other hand they did not overlook that Moscow seldom shows its hand before acting and that it might readily be expected to bide its time and take advantage of any situation involving its neighbors.

Most puzzling question of all was that of Russia's feeling for the Axis. Observers conceded Communism and Fascism had little in common to make them friendly—but they were not sure about Stalinism and Fascism, particularly recalling Russia's share in the dismemberment of Poland last year.

RAID BURMA ROAD

Hong Kong, Oct. 30 (AP)—Japanese aircraft raided the Burma Road again yesterday and Japanese said they completed destruction of a suspension bridge over the Salween River, previously reported damaged.

POLICE SUFFER "CASUALTIES"

Omaha, Oct. 30 (AP)—A skunk got its head stuck in an empty tin can and ran amok. Complaints swamped the police switchboard. Cruiser officers brought back evidence of a job well done and headquarters doors and windows popped open to waft the evidence away. The cruiser officers went home to change their clothes.

Traditions of Hallowe'en Lost Sight of in Modern Days

The boogey man will get you if you don't watch out, and he isn't too far away, that sinister myth that roams hither and yon on Hallowe'en.

Long ago, the last of October was the ghostly night, when witches, hobgoblins and other spirits of either evil or mischief were to be feared and propitiated. Fires and lights, bonfires and torches were inimical to the evil ones, and the present day pumpkin lanterns are the relics of the sacred fires of other days. The spirits of mischief, no doubt, may be the incarnate in the pranks of urchins who ring door bells, toss away the door-mat, remove the gate posts and go about generally trying to frighten the more timid and hope to find themselves immune from penalty.

Old Traditions Gone

Hallowe'en in the old days was the night for spells and divinations, but the roasting of apples before the hearth fire and the toasting of nuts are only a memory today, when the more modern gatherings, under the wonders of modern lighting and surroundings, have long since dispelled with the traditions of old.

Pomona, the goddess of fruits — especially apples—used to be worshipped in particular on Hallowe'en hazelnuts being favoured above others, for they brought wisdom to the eater. Gone are the traditions of the old Hallowe'en, however, and the more accepted program are house costume parties, while the younger generations, bedecked in the most ridiculous costumes imaginable, tramp from door to door seeking candies, apples and other favours of the edible type, which invariably result in tummy aches on the morrow. Yes, and gone are the destructive pranks of a generation ago, when every conceivable movable object was a target and old dobbin reigned as the fore-runner of the horseless carriage.

SECRET PLANE WENT TO OTTAWA SAYS TRIBUNE

Paper Claims Secret Bomb Sight Taken to Canadian Capital on Oct. 22nd.

COMMENT DECLINED

New York, Oct. 30 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune says today it has learned that a plane chartered by the Sperry Gyroscope Company, makers of aircraft instruments for the United States army and navy, including the famed secret bomb sight, left here Oct. 22 for Ottawa.

The Herald Tribune continues:—

"Sealed wooden crates were packed aboard the plane early on the morning of the take-off and no flight plan was filed with the airport control tower, a procedure permissible only in 'contact' weather. The identities of those who made the flight could not be learned from American Airlines, whose officials would say only that they had chartered a plane to the Sperry Company on the date mentioned.

"Representatives of the Sperry Company refused either to deny or affirm that the boxes contained bomb sights......"

Soul and Mind Of France Unbroken Says French Author

New York, Oct. 30 (CP)—The soul and mind of France are unbroken despite the German conquest for the spirit of France is "a fortress no blitzkrieger can storm," Andre Maurois, French novelist and biographer, said in an address here Tuesday.

Liaison officer between the British and French armies, Maurois told of the last free days of France. He recalled that on the day the Germans entered Paris he went to Buckingham Palace to see Queen Elizabeth "who wanted to express to a Frenchman her sympathy for the sufferings of France."

"She said: 'You have lost everything, M. Maurois, but don't you think that when one has lost everything there is still a great deal left?'

"The Queen was right. A victorious army can take from you all your worldly possessions, but not your soul, not your mind, and as long as you are alive, there is in that frail little skull of yours a fortress no blitzkrieger can storm. The same is true of a nation. France today seems to lie disarmed, at the mercy of her conqueror, but real France remains untouched."

British Communique

London, Oct. 30 (AP)—The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued the following communique today:—

"At about dusk yesterday evening, enemy aircraft made several raids in eastern and northeastern districts. They dropped bombs at a number of points and machine-gunned streets in several places. Some damage was done to houses and other buildings, but although some persons were killed the casualties were not numerous.

"Attacks during the darkness covered various parts of the country, but were directly mostly against the southeast, including the London area. An attack of short duration was made on Merseyside.

"By the early hours of this morning, the attacks had slackened considerably, and enemy activity ceased some time before dawn. Incendiary bombs started many fires in two Midland towns, but all were quickly put out or brought under control. Some houses were destroyed and commercial premises and other buildings were damaged.

"In the London area and in South England, dwellings were destroyed in some districts, but no extensive damage was caused. On Merseyside, the damage was small in extent. Elsewhere, although bombs were scattered indiscriminately in some areas, no large amount of damage is reported. The number of casualties reported from all areas is small and included few deaths.

"In yesterday's air battles, 27 enemy aircraft were destroyed. One of our pilots previously reported as missing is now safe. Our losses yesterday were therefore seven fighter aircraft and only two pilots. It is now known that another enemy bomber (making three in all) was destroyed during the night before last (Oct. 28-29)."

Dr. E. R. Frankish Tells Court Of Findings on Empty Shells Said Found Near Wellman

Medico-Legal Expert Testifies at Trial of Frederick Thain, Charged With Murder of Arnold Wellman

TRIAL PROCEEDING

Mrs. Mildred Graham Tells Jury Thain Purchased Five Shells at Store on January 31st.

Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert on Tuesday afternoon told the court at the trial of Frederick Thain, who is being tried here on the charge of murdering Arnold Wellman, aged Rawdon farmer, that one empty shotgun shell which a witness had said had been found near the slain body of Wellman and another which a police witness said had been found under a board in Thain's barn, had been fired from the shotgun which witnesses said had been found in Thain's house a couple of days after the killing.

One of the thirteen witnesses called by Assistant Attorney-General C. L. Snider, prosecuting attorney, Dr. Frankish gave a detailed testimony of the several tests made by himself with various exhibits produced by the Crown.

"I fired six shots, pulling the triggers at the same time. I then made a microscopic survey and found the comparison in shells fired from the right barrel. The same process was followed with those fired from the left barrel of the gun found in the Thain household".

"The shell found by Sergeant Harry Thompson in the Thain barn was the shell fired from the right barrel of the gun and that found by David Wellman, beneath a pail in the Wellman stable was that fired from the left barrel."

The Crown produced the shell cases found in both instances. Dr. Frankish also produced enlarged photographs of the shells and gave an illustrated description to the jury. The jury was also shown a photograph of a piece of paper at which both barrels of the gun had been fired simultaneously. They had been fired from a distance of twelve inches.

"In my opinion", he told Defence Counsel McCulloch in cross-examination, "the shots that killed Arnold Wellman were fired no more than thirty inches away. At a greater distance, the pellets would tend to spread and leave a pattern of shot rather than a large hole such as was designated in the photograph.

He had found a bloodspot on a pair of overalls alleged by the Crown to have been worn by Thain when arrested. The bloodspot was comparatively fresh and had been found on the upper right-hand breast of the garment.

He had not found any shot-gun pellets in the body of Arnold Wellman, but had discovered some in that of Mrs. Nancy Wellman. It was his opinion that Arnold Wellman had died from gunshot wounds received from a gun the both barrels of which had been fired simultaneously.

Other Witnesses Called

Other witnesses called during the afternoon hearing, included former Police Constables Sam Ervine and Everett Smith, Sergeant Harry Thompson, O.P.P., and Inspector A. L. Ward of the Criminal Investigation Bureau, who testified to the finding of shotgun and shells in the Thain and Wellman premises, and other incidents occurring during their investigation. Mr. and Mrs. David Wellman, Senior, nephew and niece of the deceased Arnold Wellman and their son, David also gave evidence. Mrs. Mildred Graham, Wellman's Corners' grocer, told the jury of the sale of shotgun shells to the accused.

Find Grain Bags

Former Traffic Officer Sam Ervine told the Court that he with R.C.M.P. Constable W. Beatty O.P.P. Sergeant Harry Thompson made a search of Wellman barn.

"We found two pailsful of grist in a box between cowstables and a bagful of chopped grain in the piggery. In the barn granary there was a lot of grain".

There was a farm wagon on the barn floor. There were no bags on the wagon, and witness could not remember seeing any others in the barn.

"We found thirteen grain bags in the Thain granary", witness said describing the search of the Thain premises by himself and Prov. Constable Everett Smith.

"On one bag was stamped the name 'Arnold Wellman'."

The other bags were similar and were empty. Three bags containing grist were also found here, while a half-bag of grist was discovered downstairs in the barn.

(Lieutenant) former Provincial Police Constable Everett Smith, on leave from the army, told the jury he searched the Thain premises with Sergt. Thompson and Inspector A. L. Ward of the Criminal Investigation Bureau. He corroborated evidence of the former witness regarding the finding of approximately four bags of grist in the Thain barn.

He identified a bag stamped with the name 'Arnold Wellman' and others produced by the Crown, as those he procured in the Thain barn on February 2nd. A few could not be identified by witness. He had seen a gun in the hands of Fred Thain when he visited his premises on the morning of February 2nd. At 6 p.m. he had examined the gun in the Thain home.

"It was dirty, and I could smell powder", the witness said. "It was a 12 gauge, double-barrelled gun. Constable Smith identified the weapon by his initials scratched on the butt.

Received Grain Bags

Sergeant Harry Thompson, Belleville detachment of the Ontario police, told the court he had received 13 grain bags from Constable Smith and had instructed him to secure a sample bag from the Wellman premises.

The witness told of seeing a shotgun "handed to us by accused", during the search described by previous witness.

On February 2nd, he had with Constables Smith and David Adair, arrested Thain at his home. There he had secured the gun "which smelled of powder."

"We also took a coat and vest and the accused's overalls and rubber boots were removed when we arrived in Belleville. Other garments for him were taken along".

"The overalls were or the accused person before you secured them?" asked the Crown.

"Yes, sir".

"Was he wearing the rubber boots?"

"Yes, sir".

Again on February 3rd Inspector Ward, Constable Smith and witness had visited the Thain premises.

"In a pigsty in the Thain barn, underneath some boards and an old cushion, was a box of shells. On the top were two spent shells, a new undischarged one, and several old loaded shells," Sergt. Thompson testified.

"There was nothing to prevent this gun being shot off between morning and the night of February 2nd?" asked Defence Counsel McCulloch.

"No, sir".

Inspector A. L. Ward, C.I.D., testified that he had searched, upon information, the Thain barn for ammunition.

Evidence Corroborated

He corroborated former witness' evidence regarding the finding of shells in a box underneath some boards in the north end of the Thain barn. Two dull shells were marked "Dominion Export" and the three bright ones "Dominion Canucks." Witness had turned over all shells and the shotgun to Dr. E. L. Frankish, medico legal expert.

David Wellman, Jr., great-nephew of the slain farmer, who lived 4½ miles north of his relative testified he had managed the Wellman farm for 2½ months. He had often worked for his uncle. He identified five bags exhibited "by the patching" and other markings.

"I was on the Wellman premises with Sam Woodward about 2.30 p.m., February 3rd," David Wellman, Senior, told the court. "We were looking for pails or a box. We lifted up a pail and found a spent shell. I drew Woodward's attention to it, then picked it up and went to the house where I gave the shell to Dr. Lorne Wellman, who wrapped it up in a piece of cloth."

Dr. Lorne Wellman, Waterloo, Ontario, son of the slain couple, corroborated Wellman's evidence regarding the spent shell. He kept the shell until he left the farm when he gave it to Mrs. Jane Wellman, wife of David, Senior.

Mrs. Wellman testified she kept the parcel until Constable E. Smith arrived. It was handed to Dr. Marvin Wellman who in turn handed it to Constable Everett Smith. Dr. Marvin Wellman corroborated, as did Constable Smith, who was recalled to the stand. The shell, a Dominion Canuck, was later turned over to Sergt. Harry Thompson, who in turn gave it to Inspector Ward. The shell was finally turned over to Dr. Frankish for examination

Sergeant Recalled to Stand

Sergeant Harry Thompson recalled to the stand, stated that he conducted a further search of the Wellman barn on the day after the investigation and found a spent shell in a small pile of rubbish very near to the place where Wellman found a shell of similar nature. Inspector Albert Ward, recalled, stated he took the shell to Toronto and gave it to Dr. E. R. Frankish.

Mrs. Mildred Graham, operator of a store at Wellman's Corners stated she knew Mr. Wellman and the accused Fred Thain.

"Do you recall making a sale to Mr. Thain?"

"Yes," replied witness. "The sale was made between one and two of the afternoon and he bought a file, a chocolate bar and shells."

"What kind did he want?"

"Shotgun shells. They were Canuck shells."

"How many did he buy?"

"He bought five shells and particularly asked for that number. He told me he wanted them 'to kill foxes.' " The witness told of Constable Everett Smith coming to the store later and obtaining one shell out of the same box that Thain purchased the five. Answering a question, Mrs. Granam said she heard of the accident the morning after she sold the shells. Mr. McCulloch received an answer that Thain asked for Number 6 shot but none were available. She also stated there were foxes in the area at the time the shells were purchased.

SAY PORTUGAL MAY SOON FEEL AXIS PRESSURE

Foreign Circles in Rome Believe Hitler Talked With Franco Over Portugal

Rome, Oct. 30 (AP)—Foreign circles expressed belief today that Axis pressure soon may fall on Portugal in a drive to secure control of the whole west coasts of Europe and Africa in preparation against the possibility of the United States entering the war.

The meeting at Florence yesterday of Hitler and Mussolini, Italian sources indicated, was to discuss a deal with Vichy France which would make French bases, and possibly the French navy, available to the Axis powers.

Next, they said, probably will be direct negotiations between Rome and Vichy. Mussolini returned to Rome today.

Hitler's meeting last week with Franco was interpreted in foreign quarters as aimed partly at Portugal, long a friend of Britain.

Germany now has control of the Atlantic coast from Norway to Spain and, with Spain in her orbit, might expect to dominate the African West Coast also, including Morocco, the Spanish colony of Rio De Oro and French West Africa.

If Portugal also was dragged in, they reasoned, the Axis also would have the Azores and Cape Verde Islands.

Ciano May See Laval

Italian Foreign Minister Ciano was expected to see Vice-Premier Laval of Vichy within a few days, and it was believed a meeting between Mussolini and the Vichy Chief of State, Marshal Petain, might follow.

These predictions were backed by Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, which said yesterday's meeting between Hitler and Mussolini was only the first of a series of "diplomatic events now in preparation."

Further conferences between German and French officials to sign the agreement were indicated by Foreign Minister Ciano's newspaper Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, which said the Florence meeting was only the first of a series of "diplomatic events in preparation."

(Reports from Vichy said French Vice-Premier Laval, strengthened by taking over the Foreign Ministry portfolio, left there last night for Paris for important discussions expected to bear fruit this week.

(Authorized German sources, however, said in Berlin last night reports that Hitler and Mussolini had discussed possible use of the French fleet against Britain were "absolutely untrue.")

Eldorado

Eldorado—The October meeting of the Bannockburn and Eldorado Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Ken Bateman with twenty two members and ten visitors present. The president opened the meeting. Business at hand was dealt with. It was decided to discontinue the giving of boxes to the sick and use post cards instead. Every member was urged to visit the sick and be neighborly.

Miss Rutherford as the guest speaker urged steady support to war work and advised careful spending of money. In her talk on historical research she suggested that each Institute keep a collection of interesting events and history of its community, in a scrap book. She suggested that teachers create a liking for history among pupils at school. Current and local events should be used at every meeting. She advised that every Institute cooperate with other branches and bring as a resolution, to ask County Council for suitable place to store antiques. She suggested a few pioneer dishes and that a search be made for more.

Mrs. Harry Gawley took charge of the program which opened with community singing. Mrs. James Bailey spoke a few words on the motto "Let us come and be merry together."

Mrs. Beryl Carman had charge of the topic "Historical research", and gave a very interesting log of Union Settlement and a lovely display of antiques. Mrs. C. Blackburn read a poem. Mrs. J. Gawley and Mrs. J. Empey as local leaders, passed on some of the information they had received at training school.

The members present had great pleasure in presenting Mrs. F. J. Nickle with a desk chair. The address was sung in duet form by Mrs. J. Empey and Mrs. Ken Holmes. Mrs. Nickle though taken by surprise ably responded and thanked every one for their thoughtfulness.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem and while the lunch was served all enjoyed a social half hour.

CANADIANS IN BRITAIN IN COAST POSITIONS

Canadians in England are in the front of British defences, with their eyes to the enemy of the peace of the world, Adolf Hitler. If Hitler should try to come at this late date in the autumn, Canadians know that their troops will give a glorious account of themselves and make the Nazis pay well for any attempt.

It is almost twenty-six years ago since the Canadians took over a section in the Flanders front in the first Great War. What the corps did in the momentous years of that struggle is known and the deeds of the Canadians will live forever in the memory of the peoples of the Empire and of the free world. Even the enemy knows what Canadians were able to do in the last struggle side by side with the troops of the other British Dominions and Colonies and with the men of the Homeland and with the French armies. A glorious series of battles tells a story of what Canadians did in those days to help save the world.

Today they are in the front line of Britain helping to guard the freedom of the British citadel of liberty. No higher honor could be given these men than to defend the very birthplace of British liberty and freedom and guard the homes of the British race. Their hearts must swell with pride as they realize that to them is given a glorious duty—to guard everything that their race holds dearest in this world—and to keep alight the fires of freedom for the sake not only of Britain and of the Empire but for the entire world.

GREECE NOT FOOLED BY FASCIST GUILE

Did the heroic decision of the Greeks take the deceitful Fascists by surprise? There is some evidence that it did, some ground for belief that Mussolini's ultimatum, bolstered up by promises which the Greeks saw would not be kept and by false accusations and charges, fooled the Italian chiefs to the extent that they did not expect Greek resistance of the kind that the Greeks hurled at them. But they did not fool the Greeks.

The Fascists, true to the Axis lack of principle, broke the ultimatum by acting half an hour before the time the Italians set for its expiry.

What a light on Fascism and all such like the Italian partner shows in his actions. He has referred to the great Julius Caesar, the Roman, as his idol. But Julius Caesar was a great man while Mussolini is but a poor pale reflection, not of Caesar but of the meanest tyrants of time. He was credited with being somewhat practical and astute but he has shown himself a perfect dupe of his own bombastic pomposity.

Unintentionally or through exaggerated ego the Duce has put himself in the position that he will have to use his fleet. Britain has seen to it that strategic positions have been taken up at Corfu and elsewhere.

Duce everywhere shows the sign of weakness. He attacked the poorly armed Abyssinians. He has blustered for years. He stole Albania in sending his armies to do the deed of aggression on Good Friday, a day sacred to Christians and at a time of the year sacred to the Mohammedans who are numerous in Albania. Now he has picked on Greece because he thought it would be a step to Egypt or to the Asia Minor.

Duce rose on weakness. Even the name he goes by was stolen by him from D'Annunzio, the poet playwright aviator of Italy, for it was the poet who first used the title "Il Duce," the leader or chief. It was the weak state of Italy after the World War which gave Italy the ill-fortune to breed and develop Fascism. A strong Italy would not have tolerated him. It was the same with Hitler, who rose on weakness of the German people and on hate and violence.

AERO ENGINE MECHANICS AND THEIR DUTY

A fighting aeroplane with a balky engine is as useless as a crippled duck. Lack of engine power might leave the crew helpless before the foe in battle or might plunge them into the sea or into rough inhospitable country on a long flight.

Royal Canadian Air Force pilots, Air Observers and Air Gunners have a warm regard for the highly skilled Aero Engine Mechanics of the R.C.A.F. who keep the aeroplanes serviceable. Their work is unspectacular, but just as important in its way as the work of the trained men who fly the planes. A crew charged with taking a bomber 400 miles out over the Atlantic on convoy patrol, for instance, must be sure that the engines will maintain a steady, rhythmic roar and not falter and fall into silence when a landing field is over the horizon.

The powerful engines of R.C.A.F. receive all the care and attention of thoroughbred racehorses. Engines are inspected before and after flight, and any worn parts immediately replaced. Valve clearances are carefully checked and everything possible done to keep the engines and controls in perfect condition at all times. At regular intervals of 300 or 400 flying hours, the engines are temporarily removed from service for a complete overhaul. The engines are taken apart, cleaned, and all parts minutely inspected for flaws and for signs of wear. Any worn parts are replaced and the engines are re-assembled and tested on a test stand before being placed back on their mountings in the aircraft.

The modern aircraft engines are complicated pieces of machinery, and their care and maintenance require careful training out at the R.C.A.F. Technical Training School at St. Thomas, Ont., which has turned out some 1,500 mechanics of all types so far and is turning out 150 more each week.

The aero engine mechanics course lasts about 18 weeks and provides a practical education in the craft for Canadian boys, many of whom come from garages and technical schools all over the country, so that they have a trade to work at when the war is over.

Stewart Says—

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Canadian Columnist

This doesn't promise to be a colorful diplomatic winter in Washington.

Lord Lothian

Normally the various embassies and legations in the U.S. capital are regular whirlpools of social activity from late autumn until early spring. It's as much business of an ambassador or a minister plenipotentiary to be noted for his brilliant entertainments as it is for him to represent his country competently at the state department. But it's hard to see how they're going to do it during the coming season.

Lord Lothian, now home in Britain, reporting to his government but expected back soon, may contrive to pull off a successful party or two.

What chance, however, does Charge d'Affaires Hans Thomsen stand of getting any invitations accepted to attend functions at Germany's headquarters on Massachusetts Ave.? Why, Thomsen is responsible for the behavior of Hitler's consuls in the United States, and three of 'em (in New York, San Francisco and New Orleans) have been accused of disseminating Nazi propaganda in our midst. Hans will be lucky if Washington diplomats don't break off diplomatice relations with him altogether.

Italy isn't much more popular than Germany. Mussolini's embassy did try to throw a reception recently but scarcely anyone attended it, except a few Germans and Japanese.

As for the Japs, it's well recognized that they couldn't get a corporal's guard to drink their cocktails or eat their raw (but palatable) fish.

Russia Better Off

Ambassador Constantine Oumansky might draw a respectable crowd. Not so far back, the Russian embassy made the attempt and it was boycotted about 90 per cent., despite its champagne and caviar. Now, thought the U. S. likes the Soviet outfit a little better it still hates 'em as Communists, but there are hints that they may have temporary common interests with Comrade Stalin versus Japan.

Everybody's sorry for France, but there's no enthusiasm for its new Ambassador Henri-Haye, as representative of the capitulated Petain regime.

Then there are the overrun small democracies' spokesmen—from Poland, Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Holland, etcetera. Their legations are hanging on quite numerously in Washington. However, with no governments of their own back home, they're mere orphans— no money to entertain company with. Callers at their addresses need to take their drinks with 'em— and share those with the ministers and the latters' sub-officials, whom they're calling on. Furthermore, it's like going to a funeral to visit such places.

Ambassador Hu Shih of China somehow manages to maintain a pretty good lick. He gave a cocktail celebration the other day which was quite a success. His recent predecessor, Dr. C. T. Wang, had to resign, his secretary, Dr. Y. P. Lieu, told me, because his home government couldn't finance him any longer, and his own wallet was empty, too. Dr. Hu Shih seems to have resources of his own.

All told, it looks like a dull diplomatic winter in Washington.

Evidently we're going to be dependent on Lord Lothian, Hu Shih and our Latin American continent. They're hardly enough to go around.

That Chaplin Film

Incidentally, speaking of diplomacy, the state department has been waiting for a recreation, from Berlin and Rome, to the new movie, "The Great Dictator", in which Chaplin caricatures Adolf Hitler as Adenoid Hynkel, the Phooey of Tomania, and Jack Oakie caricatures Benito Mussolini as Benzino Napoloni, the Duce of Bacteria.

The department actually got international repercussions when Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York said Adolf's wax image ought to be put in a chamber of horrors.

Berlin said officially that it thought the federal government should keep Fiorello corked up, and wasn't a bit satisfied with the state department's answer that it hadn't a bit of authority over him as mayor of New York.

So it was surmised that "The Great Dictator" might evoke protests from Berlin and Rome alike.

Of course, the dictators' difficulty is that, whereas Mayor La Guardia mentioned Adolf by name, neither Adolf nor Benito was specifically designated in "The Great Dictator." If they howl, they're placed in the position of saying "The caps fit; we hereby put 'em on."

And Now, for the Battle of Germany

By JOHN GORDON

Editor, London Sunday Express

I make a forecast. Although we are certain to have some bad moments ahead in this war, we have passed the worst. The possibility of defeat is behind us. Victory is as inevitable as tomorrow's dawn.

What makes me so confident? I will tell you. It is the fact that we have scrapped this over-concentration on defence and decided to go for the enemy—tooth and nail.

I have advocated constant offensive against the enemy for a very good and simple reason —that passive defence, however good, can never win a war. To defeat your enemy you must do more than merely defend yourself against his attacks. You must throw him on the defence, attack him and smash him till he cries "Enough."

To judge from the situation in which we found ourselves when the war began, either our High Command or Cabinet, or perhaps both, had fallen under the spell of that strange modern delusion which they call, I believe, a "white war."

A "white war," so far as I understand it, is a war in which you simply defend yourself but never attack. In theory you let your enemy batter himself against your defences. You sit snugly behind, suffering few casualties, according to this strange theory, and in the end your enemy says, "I've had enough; you win."

That was the theory that brought France down. It was the great Gamelin creed of passivity. It nearly brought us down as well.

Then we sat for eight months like simpletons, deluding ourselves that we were not at war with Hitler except on the sea, till one morning we woke up to find that the astute Adolf had very cleverly cracked the French into little pieces and pushed our army into the sea.

Strangely enough, we did not wake up even then to the fact that it was time we set about giving Hitler a few Nelsonic clouts.

We fell back into our own Island behind that sea moat which is still the best defence we have. Unfortunately, we gave every evidence that we retired behind the moat not merely to refit before sallying forth again to meet the enemy, but to stick there and wait for the enemy to come to us.

And with us we brought whole armies of Poles (incidentally, I am told, the best fighters in Europe today), Czechs, Danes, Dutch, Norwegians, French and Heaven knows what besides.

Did Nelson make himself famous lurking in England safely behind the moat? Or Drake, or Hawkins, or Marlborough, or Wellington? Of course they didn't. They sailed forth and fought the Battle of Britain far from the frontiers of Britain. They took the war to the enemy as all war-makers of genius have done. They did not even delay their advances until they were certain of overwhelming superior strength. On the contrary their most vital victories were won with the odds against them.

They won because they were true leaders of men, and they were chosen to lead by men, and women, great kings and queens, who put the success and dominance of our country beyond every other consideration.

And Britain once more is rising to save not only herself but the world by the determination, the courage and the capacity for endurance of the ordinary citizens. They have already set the world wondering. Tomorrow they will amaze the world.

As the editor of a widely read national newspaper, I have unusual opportunities of knowing the minds of my countrymen and countrywomen. I have seen a strange transformation take place in these last few weeks.

For months it seemed to me from the correspondence flowing through my office that the nation had become, if not pacifist, at least lukewarm about this war. People seemed to have doubts about it. They seemed sometimes to have fallen under the spell of clever Nazi propaganda. Make no mistake about it, it is clever. Certainly in the first months of the war it got home.

Many people used to write to me saying, "Why didn't we stick to the British Empire and leave Hitler alone? He says that he wants nothing from us. There is no real reason to doubt his word. Why can't we come to terms and save precious lives?"

Then suddenly there was a complete change of opinion. It came just about the time of Dunkirk. I think the cause of the change was a sudden realization that the great British Empire was wobbling a bit. Hitler, miscalculating the completeness of his success, making the fateful mistake so many clever men make, suddenly let the cat out of the bag. He revealed his intention to invade Britain and to shatter the British Empire. He tore aside the veil and showed us with grim clearness that we were the foe he was after all the time.

At that moment a great invigorating change swept over Britain. From that moment Hitler was doomed. Realizing that the time had come when the real gospel of victory could at last produce a national response, I began to write a series of articles calling for the shedding of all this defensive war nonsense, and a return to the true strategy of war—offensive action. "Attack, attack, attack," I said. "That is the only way to bring victory."

The response was terrific. Government Departments, even the Prime Minister himself, were inundated by an enormous flood of letters from all over the country demanding that action should be taken on the lines I had advocated.

The chief action I suggested were these:

1. That the great forests of Germany be bombed and set one fire in order to cause such an overwhelming internal disaster that Germany would have to divert much of her energy to cope with the situation.

2. That air raiding should be on such a scale that it would break the morale of the German civilian population who have been deluded by Goering into thinking that they are beyond reach of harm. I did not suggest, of course, indiscriminate bombing of civilians, but rather that we should use our bombers to give the civilians no rest.

3. That mines should be dropped from the air into the Rhine, the swiftest flowing river in Europe, in order to cut Germany's jugular vein; and

4. That the whole of the coastline now held by Germany and Italy from the North of Norway to the Adriatic should be subjected to the terror of almost daily raids by land, sea and air forces, which would burn, harry, ravage and carry away prisoners. Adequate defence of the vast coastline would seriously strain the military and air strength of Germany and the fact that the defenders would be living in terror of the constant blows would shake the morale of the Germans.

Moreover, such raids would keep our own forces keyed up so that one day the German line would break and the raiding force, if properly supported, might become the expeditionary force that would end the war.

Deeds such as these are now demanded by the British people as a whole, and I have seen with thankfulness a great change taking place in the official mind since the people began their pressure.

Our leaders who talked so long and so foolishly of passivity in defence are beginning to talk of a world offensive for which they are preparing. From words to deeds should not take very long.

Of the success of an offensive, once we begin it, there can be little doubt.

The war has been a melancholy story for us so far, lit up by a few exploits that will live in our history.

We have evacuated in turn Norway, Holland, Belgium, Northern France, Southern France, the Channel Islands and British Somaliland. A dozen countries have been enslaved because of our sloth. It is a wretched chapter forced upon us only by the policy of palsy that we endured for so long before the war began.

On the credit side we may put the storming of Narvik, the exploit of the Cossack, the Battle of the Plate, the embarkation from Dunkirk, defeat though it was, and the superlative heroism of our airmen and seamen.

But these exploits have a promise in them which shines like a silver lining in the dark cloud. They show that we still have men as splendid as any in our history. They show that, given the chance, these men will take their places among the world's unconquerables.

Soon the order will come, "Action Stations!" The Battle of Britain is moving to its climax, the Battle of Germany is about to begin.

Salute the future—and victory. When it is all over, Hitler, sitting in his St. Helena, may come to the conclusion that all his plans came to nothing because of one mistake. He should have tackled Britain first.

HOUDE INELIGIBLE TO HOLD OFFICE

Premier King Rules That Interned Persons Not Allowed to Run for Office

Montreal, Oct. 30—(CP)—A rally intended to open Camillien Houde's campaign for re-election as Mayor of Montreal ended abruptly last night when the crowd jamming an east end school hall was told that Houde's internment made him ineligible.

A few among the 800 persons at the meeting shouted "We won't go home" after Leonard Trepanier, a young lawyer, announced that "under the circumstances it is impossible for us to carry on." However, the hall was soon empty.

Trepanier told the noisy crowd of Prime Minister King's announcement yesterday that under an amendment to the Defence of Canada Regulations interned persons are not permitted to offer themselves as candidates for municipal or other public office.

Madame Houde, wife of the mayor, and Aldermen J. H. Delisle and Oscar Belisle attended the rally called about ten days ago when Houde organizers revealed that the mayor intended to seek re-election despite his internment Aug. 6 for a statement opposing national registration. The election for the mayoralty will be in December.

With Houde out of the running six men already announced as candidates were left in the running for the mayoralty. The group is headed by C. A. Gason who was beaten by Houde in the last municipal election.

Yesterday's announcement by the Prime Minister set at rest rumors that Adrien Arcand, interned leader of the National Unity Party, a Fascist organization, also intended to run.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM MAKES KNOWN HIS DISCOVERY!

(From the New York Post)

"I've changed," said Somerset Maugham. "In my latter years I have discovered that people are nice!"

The English novelist was speaking from the depths of a big chair near a comforting fire at the Oyster Bay house of his publisher, Nelson Doubleday.

He edged nearer the fire. A fire in a book-lined room was good after three weeks on a packed, filthy collier fleeing to England from France, many nights on a mattress on the floor of a London hotel bomb shelter and then a Clipper crossing of the Atlantic.

"All my life," he mused, "I've found people interesting. That was my business. To a writer people are interesting sometimes even when they're dull and stupid. I observed them and made my living writing about them.

"But it has taken me most of my life to discover that even the dullest and stupidest ones are kind and good. It is a great discovery.

"It was on the trip from France that I started to find out. There were several hundred of us packed on to the collier. There was food for three days, and we didn't hit Gibraltar for a week, so most of us were hungry. There was no water for washing. The black smoke seeped into our pores. We were a filthy lot. One poor lady died and a couple of people went out of their minds.

"But everybody was good and generous and helpful and I thought 'Isn't it extraordinary how emergencies change people. In ordinary life people are selfish. But now everyone is anxious to do his best for everyone else.'

"Then when I got to London I noticed the same thing. There was calm and determination, and above everything else there was kindness among people. Even in a good hotel.

"When I had returned to England I was received by a wave of optimism. They all know what they're up against and they all know that they will win through.

"I am convinced that in her present spirit England is unconquerable. We may all be killed but we'll never give in.

"It was not that way in France. When I left, every one was in the depths of despair.

"What happened to the French people was not caused by a failure only of morale but also of moral, without an 'e' on the end. The real cause was a degeneration of the moral stamina of the race. And I mean the people, not just their leaders.

"There are such things as honor and truth and fidelity, all the rather dready virtues of the copybook. When you get down to brass tacks, they are the only things that really count.

"With all our faults, we British have those. And because we have them we are able to stand up. It's the uprightness of the individual that counts.

"I think there was in the French nation a failure of the elementary virtues that make a nation great. I believe that there has been no such failure in England."

How, he was asked, would the war affect him as a writer?

"I am a very old gentleman with three or four novels in my head and I haven't the heart to write them.

"In this great crisis they don't seem important.

"To write a novel you must sit down to months of unremitting toil and live with your damned characters. That would be hard to do right now. The characters don't seem to matter.

"I haven't been able to write a line of fiction since I left France. My home was there and all my belongings —all the things I'd gathered together wandering about the world for 20 years. The two suitcases I brought with me on the Clipper are all I have in the world now.

"I haven't many years before me and I'd like to get these things I have to write off my mind before I die: But we are in the middle of the most important historical event since Napoleon. On the outcome of it depends the freedom of the world—and much more than that; whether honesty and loyalty and truth are the things that pay, or whether brutality and treachery pay.

"If brutality and treachery pay what the hell is the use of art and literature?"

SPIRIT OF POLES RESISTS HUNS

Polish Workman Sentenced to Death by Germans for Hiding 3 Rifles and 67 Rounds of Ammunition

POLE FIRES FARM

London, Oct. 29 (CP Cable)—The Polish Telegraph Agency said Tuesday that "a new series of execution sentences published recently in the German newspapers of Poland confirm anew the spirit of resistance is well alive among Poles."

The Agency said a Polish workman was sentenced to death for hiding three rifles and 67 rounds of ammunition, and two others for illegal possession of arms.

A similar sentence was imposed at Lodz upon a peasant who fired his farm rather than have it fall into German hands. At Hohensalza a German court sentenced an aged woman and her son for informing Polish authorities of German espionage work.

In Grudiadz, two Polish women were sentenced to three years and six months' imprisonment for hiding a Pole who was sentenced to death.

In Kalisz, the Germans sentenced a woman of 69 to a month in jail for sending to her daughter at a German farm letters containing news from the British Broadcasting Corporation's news bulletin in Polish. The daughter was given the same sentence for receiving the news.

Editor Take A Bride

The newspapers are giving a free ride to a new type of marriage reporting which was introduced, it seems, by a small newspaper in Iowa called the Augusta Union. The editor of the Union, remembering that bridegrooms usually receive little attention at the hands of the society news reporters, decided that he would vary the rule a little when it came his time to marry.

Under the caption, "Ye Editor Takes Himself a Bride," he wrote as follows for his own newspaper:

"Clarence (Tudy) Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Rogers, of Osseo, became the husband of Miss Margaret Gilbertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Gilbertson, of Augusta, in a beautiful ring ceremony Saturday noon before a Justice of the Peace in Waukon, Ia.

"Blushing prettily, he replied to the questions of the Justice in low but firm tones, never indicating that he noted the omission of the 'obey' in the bride's answers.

"He was attractively attired in a three-piece suit of black pin-stripe woollen material, consisting of coat, vest and pants. The coat was charmingly festooned with a white flower in the left buttonhole.

"The vest was sleeveless, closed in the front and gracefully fashioned with pockets. It was held together at the back with a strap and buckle.

"His pants were neatly pressed for the occasion and he wore them with an air as if he little suspected it would be the last time he 'wore the pants' in that family, as the familiar expression goes.

"Hose and necktie added just the right dash of color to complement the effect. Shoes were of genuine leather, laced with strings of the same color, giving a chic effect."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest, it just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Six thousand more German troops and 2,000 horses had arrived in Rumania during the week-end, the dispatches added.

Bomb Splinters
From Battle of Britain

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 30 —(CP)— With his haversack full of blanket pins a Boy Scout makes a nightly round of one of London's tube shelters where he folds and pins the children's blankets Scout fashion. Thy call him "Big Chief Blanket Pin."

Shelter eye is Britain's newest wartime ailment. Oculists explained many people complain their eyes feel hot and strained. Main cause is the amount of reading done while lying under shelter lights.

A Royal Air Force pilot had no ammunition left after downing a Messerschmitt 109 over the English Channel but bagged a second German plane just the same. He drew alongside the Nazi fighter and sheared off the Messerschmitt's tail with his starboard wing, sending the enemy craft plummeting seawards. The R.A.F. pilot pancaked his Hurricane to a safe landing although more than a foot of the wing was ripped off.

A naval commander walking along a London street when German raiders dropped an incendiary bomb near a bomb-shattered building had no trouble smothering the sizzler. Scooping dust from the wreckage, he piled it on the bomb and placed his gold-braided cap on top.

War workers in an east London factory run a six-penny sweep on the starting time of every air raid warning. First prize is often as much as £4 (about $18). Whenever the "all clear" sounds after a warning, a man goes around collecting the six-pences and the slips of paper bearing the time the next raid is fancied.

Rescue workers found "Nellie" and her family of five pups deep under the debris five days after her master's home had been bombed. The whole family survived.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Canadian prime minister, told Norwich citizens when he inaugurated their campaign to raise £500,000 ($2,225,000) for war weapons that England had every reason to be proud of the way the sons of the Empire came thousands of miles to defend Britain. He was confident the Empire would achieve victory.

One Bond Street store, left windowless after a bomb fell, decided merely boarding up the front was not enough in keeping with the store's pre-raid policy of crowd-attracting window displays. It hired an artist to paint on the boards replicas of the goods sold.

No damp cellar shelter for W. S. Warne of Hounslow, Middlesex. He bought an outside concrete shelter, lugged it into his living room, part by part and riveted the sections to the wall. He and his wife sleep there, oblivious of Nazi raiders.

When a German plane came down on a farm in southwest England the farmer, armed with a revolver and pitchfork, ran to capture him. "You want no revolver for me," the pilot said in good English. "They shot my brother for refusing to raid England."

Charlie Chan, Sidney Toler, is kept busy tracking down a master criminal, but finds time to guide the romance of Marjorie Weaver and Robert Lowery in "Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise," next at the Belle with George Murphy and Brenda Joyce in "Public Deb. No. 1."

AT THE BELLE

"Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise"

A stranger strikes time and again with amazing rapidity as he furtively prowls the decks of a luxury liner!

Audiences will strive in vain to identify him in the 20th Century-Fox film, "Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise" with Sidney Toler again in the title role, which is the next attraction at the Belle theatre.

It's Chan's strongest and most baffling case and only he is able to solve it. Featured in the cast are such outstanding screen personalities as Marjorie Weaver, Lionel Atwill, Sen Yung, Robert Lowery and many others.

The scene is laid aboard a gorgeously appointed ocean liner swiftly ending a world cruise. A pall of gloom has fallen over the party of vacationers, which includes in addition to the above mentioned players, Don Beddoe, Leo Carroll, Cora Witherspoon, Kay Linaker and Harlen Briggs. One by one three of the voyagers are found strangled, a bag of silver coins beside each victim.

Chan answers the challenge of the killer as only he can—calmly, but relentlessly tracking him down. His oriental intuition, and the scientific application of the master detective methodically eliminates the suspects until there is but one left. Chan then proceeds to give him enough rope until he makes the fatal ending that is startling in its originality.

Laugh-Studded Film

One of the grandest comedies of this or any year is promised in Elsa Maxwell's "Public Deb. No. 1," the 20th Century-Fox picture which is announced as the added feature.

"Foreign Correspondent"

Breath-taking excitement, romance and drama, mystery and intrigue are unfolded in the thrill-packed story, "Foreign Correspondent" which was directed by Alfred Hitchcock is now playing at the Belle theatre. The Belle News of the hour and a funny Donald Duck cartoon precede the feature attraction.

CLAIM DENOUNCED BY MAYOR HAGUE

Mayor of Jersey City and Senator of New Hampshire Tangle in Committee

Newark, N.J., Oct. 30 (AP)—A United States Senate subcommittee's investigation of election fraud charges in Jersey City and other parts of New Jersey, was denounced and ridiculed by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City yesterday as a "10 cent, picayune political" inquiry intended to deprive President Roosevelt of the State's 16 electoral votes.

Recriminations flew between Hague and Senator Charles Tobey (Rep.-New Hampshire), consuming so much of the two-hour session that little time was left to the question of fraud. After the turbulent hearing, to which Hague was subpoenaed when he refused to appear voluntarily, the committee adjourned until after election.

Hague repeatedly asked Tobey about conditions in New Hampshire when the Senator quizzed him concerning his Democratic stronghold of Hudson County.

Asked what was the debt of Jersey City, Hague retorted:—

"What's the debt of New Hampshire?" Then pointing to Tobey's son and secretary he said "Look at Willie whispering in his ear."

Angered, Tobey jumped up and said the youth's name was not "Willie" but Charles and that he wasn't whispering. He then pointed to Hague's nephew and Secretary Frank Hague Eggers and said:—

"How about that bird prompting you?"

This time Hague arose, shaking a finger at Tobey, and yelled:—

"Don't call my nephew a bird. Don't act like a loafer." I want to say to you Senator, you are very insulting. I didn't come here to be insulted. I resent your attitude. Senator (Guy) Gillette (Dem.-Iowa) (Chairman of the Campaign Expenditures Committee) should be ashamed at putting you on this committee."

WEDDINGS

JOHNSTON—BRIDGE

A pretty wedding took place, Tuesday evening, when Irene "Queenie" Bridge, daughter of Mrs. Doris Bridge, Station Street, became the bride of Frederick Arthur "Ted" Johnston, Foxboro, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Johnston. The marriage took place at the home of Miss N. P. Merry, Ann Street, with Rev. L. S. Wight officiating.

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Ralph Bridge wore a lovely frock of mulberry crepe with a corsage of Talisman roses. She was attended by Mabel Adams, who wore heavenly blue crepe and corsage of roses.

Mr. John Cafson was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will take up residence on Albion Street in this city.

Fashion Flashes

NEVER SO MANY new ideas as this season. For instance, one house shows a double-breasted boxy coat done in red suede or broadcloth with removable buttons. Bone buttons for day time, elaborate rhinestone and jeweled flower buttons turn the coat into an evening wrap.

THE STRAIGHT AND NARROW line marks some of the smartest fashions. A slim-as-a-reed dinner dress of black crepe has its line set off by a huge, full, slanting ruffled flounce of black velvet. The frock is sleeveless and has an elaborate necklace collar of gold metal.

A process has been developed at Iowa State College for treating cheese with hickory smoke to give it a novel flavor.

Water in gasoline or fuel oil tanks can be detected with a new stick coated with a pink paste that turns white in water.

Her Duty to Stick it

A San Francisco man invited the parents of his god-child, an English girl of 13 years, to send her to his home for the duration of the war. The girl was away from her parents at the time, and they wrote her to learn her views on migration. She assumed they meant Canada, and her answer to her parents, as forwarded by them from England to her godfather and printed in the San Francisco Argonaut, follows:

Please will you on no account send me to Canada during the whole war. My reasons for not wanting to go are:

Firstly, I couldn't bear leaving you behind, exposed to any danger that might come. I know it is very unlikely that it will, but still, if it did, I would rather be as near you as possible, instead of on the other side of the Atlantic, where I would be out of reach of either of you.

Secondly, I would rather be blown to pieces than leave England when she is at the most crictical moment of her whole history. I know I can't do anything to help her in her great struggle for the world's freedom, but if I was thousands of miles away from her, I could do far less. Besides, after all, it is my duty as a Girl Guide to stick to my country through "thick and thin, fair and foul," so surely if that is my duty, it is far more so for me to stick to her through all the bombs, shells, parachutists and many other horrors of Hitler's barbarous warfare.

Thirdly, I would be very homesick, however happy the Canadians tried to make me; I would always be longing for everything and everybody at home.

These are my chief reasons. If it was peace time it would be quite a different thing. I would love to go to Canada for a short time, and see other British subjects at their different work, as well as the beautiful country in which they live.

Well, as I know that whatever you decide is best, I can and must ask you to try and see my point of view and realize that there is nothing I would hate more than being sent thousands of miles away without you and leaving England in time of war.

If Tummy Is Out of Line

Ida Lupino—Stand tall, chest up, head balanced.

There's no such thing as getting away with the girlish frock when the old waistline looks as if it were encased in a life preserver. Legs and arms may be of normal proportions; even thin, which makes the contrast even greater. It is a terrible kettle of beauty fish, and no fooling.

One might as well face the fact that those slack muscles have got to be tightened, and the only way to do that and to shuffle off fat cells is to get right down to the exercising business.

The mid-section of the body needs more exercise than it gets. It leads a lazy life.

Mid-riff Reducers

Get down on the floor and stand on your fingers and toes. Lower the body and lift it. Yes, my paper friend, you won't be able to do it at first; you'll be more likely to fall flat on your face but keep on trying. This exercise pulls hard on the muscles of waist, hips and thighs.

Stand tall, chest up, head balanced. Lift the hands high, stretching hard at the waist line, come up on your toes, then down on your heels, touching the floor without bending the knees. Anybody in fair physical condition should be able to do these movements, and rapidly too. They are the grand old hip reducers.

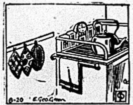
Give your hair the air, my hearties. It gets sick and tired of being plastered down the same old way all the time. Push your fingers up into your scalp, give the scalp a good rousing friction. Lift your locks, shake them, fluff them out. They'll love that.



Keep a good supply of kettle holders (they are inexpensive to buy and are easily made) handy near the kitchen stove. Launder them regularly and replace those that wear out.

Teeth Demand a Full Quota Of Vitamin C

When you eat candy, brush your teeth immediately after the bon bon feast.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Teeth that do not make the beauty grade often cause a girl to be self-conscious. She doesn't smile because she doesn't want to display them. She is not the belle of the ball when the merry party is going at its best.

Strong teeth seem to be the heritage of races that live on coarse simple foods. So eat your bread crusts, like a good girl. The energy needed for grinding acts favorably upon the gums. When you eat candy, brush your teeth immediately after the bonbon feast; it is not wise to let sugar remain in the mouth because it creates chemicals that cause caries.

A small tooth brush is more efficient than a large one, gets into all the little nooks and corners, digging out foreign substance. Brush away from the gums with a rolling motion. Use a mouth wash afterwards, swishing it around well. Salt water acts as a cleansing agent and the gums like it.

Vitamin C is a friend to the mouth pearls. Milk and green vegetables promote their well being. Orange juice and tomatoes are recommended by the gentlemen of the forceps and jig saws who expect their patients to show up every six months for examination, repairs and removal of tartar that forms under the gums despite daily care.

The woman with the prominent tummy will find figure improvement in a corset that is fairly high in front with the brassiere attached. This style of foundation flattens the abdomen, does not push a roll of flesh up under the breasts.

This seems to be a good opportunity to tell the beauty class how to launder their foundation garments. Use strong soap suds and a small brush, going over the fabric vigorously. Rinse with clear, tepid water, place a Turkish towel on a table, stretch the garment upon it, patting it in shape.

No Place for the Sobby Sal

Be a sobby Sally and you might as well throw cosmetics out of the win dow.

By HELEN FOLLETT

There's no place in this cuckoo world for the melancholy beauty; we can get along very well without her. Nor do we care for the long-nosed sober sides, even though her complexion be like the lily and the rose and her hair a dream of loveliness. We're all of us looking for gay, interesting company and the girl who is seeking a way to be popular ought to know it.

Laughter puts starshine in the eyes. It exercises the fibres of the face and keeps it young looking.

As long as a woman has humor she is tolerant, spirited, colorful and young. She makes life sweeter and easier for those who are around her. She is beloved by the family and the neighbors, the cat and the dog. If the years bring a few wrinkles nobody notices them because her eyes are bright and her smile ever present.

Yes, my children, laughter is a beautifier and no mistake. Be a sobby Sally and you might as well throw cosmetics out of the window; they haven't any material upon which to work.

x x x

Walk as if you were a soldier passing the reviewing stand, as if every eye were upon you. It is well worth while to give a thought to splendid carriage and graceful motion.

Keep vibrant. You can't do that unless the lung box is expanded, legs straight, arms swinging easily so there is no tension of the shoulders, the back displaying a neat nip-in at the waistline.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE AFFAIRS of this day might be considered to work "at sixes and sevens" judging by the conflicting planetary configurations. While there is a notable trend toward the large, munificent, expansive and generous, with ambitions and aspirations under excellent impetus, yet with parallel force are found moments of defeat, difficulties, obstruction and discouragement. Impulses of extravagance and indulgence may have to meet the stern realities of limitation, postponement, and incapacity. Yet on the lighter side there may be pleasant and profitable moves, change, domestic, social or affectional compensations.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of perplexing and contradictory experiences, with matters being drawn into situations and problems, best expressed as "pro and con." Expansive and ambitious urges may seem to sweep onward with security and high hopes to be as definitely swept backward by stubborn obstacles, definite delays and defeats. These while discouraging and testing are not entirely hopeless as there may be lesser advantages in minor changes or journeys.

A child born on this day should have much versatility and creative ability, which may be utilized in practical channels as well as in musical artistic or literary works of much merit.

SENSIBLE are the new hats, with only an occasional absurdity. For daytime wear we liked a model in brass-brown felt with fedora crown and kettle-edge brim trimmed with blue-green grosgrain ribbon and a green, a beige and a red quill.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My mother passed away last week and I am sending out personal acknowledgments of flowers and messages of sympathy. I do not know how they should be signed. I am married and have my father and a brother.

2. Should these cards be personal notes or formal cards?

B.V.

1. Notes of thanks to your relatives and close friends would be signed with your first name only. The ones to people whom you do not know very well, but who are familiar with your formal name, would be signed:

Very sincerely yours,
Claire Brown Wellington

And there might well be ones that would have to carry your formal name as well, since you may be called on to write the acknowledgements for friends of your father and brother, people whom you might not know or know very slightly. If there are such notes, sign them:

Very sincerely yours,
Claire Brown Wellington
(Mrs. John Wellington)

2. It is by far the best form to write personal notes for these acknowledgements of notes of sympathy and flowers. Formal cards are frigid acknowledgements of such warm-hearted messages.

Telegram to Teacher

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I have had a young man teacher in High School for two consecutive years. He is to be married this winter, and I would like to know if it would be correct for me to send him a telegram of congratulations? Although I have never met the bride, should I send it to her home? How should it be addressed . . . Mr. and Mrs. Smith?

2. What would be the appropriate thing to say?

1. This would be a pleasant and thoughtful thing for you to do, and I am sure that they would very much appreciate it. The telegram should be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, even though you have not met the bride, and should be sent to the home of the bride.

2. Some message of this kind: "Every good wish to you both for your happiness always."

Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would be very grateful to you if you will help us solve this problem.

A girl friend got married and kept it a secret for almost a year. Now her aunt has found it out and wants to have a linen or miscellaneous shower for her. Is it proper to have such a shower now?

K.

For such a close relative as an aunt to plan to give a shower for the girl, and at this time, certainly would have the appearance of a "promotion" to equip the new home with miscellaneous necessities. But it is for them to decide whether or not they would mind this interpretation.

Don't Limit Toy Giving To Holidays

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

About ninety-five per cent. of all toys are bought by parents for their children just before Christmas. Yet there is nothing about the late weeks of December which should make playthings more valuable to the child then than at any other time in the year. Moreover, practically every toy a child will have during a period of a year is dumped before him on Christmas morning. No toy then can have the value it would have if it were given singly throughout the year. Getting so many toys at once excites the youngster, disperses his attention and tends to make him scatterbrained. He may not play with any one long enough to use it creatively or enjoy it. Certainly it is not favorable for cultivating best care of property.

Some parents may want to be different and proceed more intelligently.

Pick Toys With Care

If parents were to buy toys throughout the year, they would be likely to do it with more care and thoughtfulness. They would have more opportunity to observe and study the child and his likes and use of each toy. Then they might be influenced less by paint and sales pressure right before Christmas. Nor would they be so easily impressed with novel toys so many of which are thrust on the market at Christmas time. Instead, they would I believe, give more attention to those toys which have wide educational value.

As you go shopping, spend some time in the toy department and look for a few toys and games you are sure your child would enjoy and profit from. Don't wait till Christmas to do toy shopping.

In choosing a plaything for a child ask yourself: Is it likely to break easily? Over how long a period will my child use it? Is he likely to play creatively with it and use it later with other toys? Can he operate it himself? Can he share it with other children?

Work Tools for Children

Some toys, like plain blocks with several of the same dimension or multiples thereof, will be used for years. So also can such playthings as small ten pins, dominoes, checker men, crayons, paste, scissors, hammer and saw. A hammer, saw and vise can be selected for the child of three that should be useful to him at six or seven.

Among the most valuable playthings for a child are tools and materials from which he can make things. Begin with the child of three or younger to plan and build up a work shop, adding as he grows able to profit from such additions. A boy or girl should have a good work bench early. It might begin with a vise fastened to the kitchen table. He or she should have a sizable workshop with good tools which, with guidance, he can learn to use with care, by the age of ten or twelve. This should grow into a rather elaborate workshop in the basement, attic or garage by high school age.

WING OF THE U. S. WAR DEPARTMENT DAMAGED BY FIRE

Police State Building Housed a Message Centre From Which Coded Messages Were Sent

GUARD IS POSTED

Washington, Oct. 30 (AP)—A fire at the United States War Department-Munitions Building on Constitution Avenue destroyed a newly-built fourth floor addition during the night and did extensive damage to sections housing a mass of records, some of them secret.

Intelligence officers and fire marshals began an investigation of the cause. The flames were brought under control after a struggle lasting more than an hour.

While the investigation went on firemen already tired from their efforts at the War Department's building—a structure built during the last war as a "temporary" building—were called to another blaze at the Lewis Hotel Training School on Washington Circle. At this fire, confined mostly to the basement, 15 firemen were overcome by escaping gas.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, said he believed the only damage done to valuable documents in the War Department fire was by smoke and water.

The circumstances of the fire caused speculation on the possibility of sabotage, but there was no official word on the cause pending the report of the investigation board.

Only Minor Fires

There have been a number of minor fires at the department in recent months. Most have been caused by cigarets dropped on awnings.

Major Edward French, in command of the message centre in the building, plunged into the smoke-filled entrance in an effort to save the papers. He was driven out by smoke and heat.

Construction described by firemen as semi-fire proof saved parts of the building with its heavy concrete floors. However, heavy damage was apparent in offices of the Army Air Corps and some units of the Quartermaster Corps.

All War Department officials available refused to comment on the fire, but it appeared to have started on the top of the three-storey wing. Construction was underway there on a fourth floor to provide more room for the expanded War Department.

Police said that although coded messages were sent from that section of the building, no secret codes were kept there.

However, one building guard declared: "It is the most important wing of the War Department."

The building was constructed during first Great War days to be used temporarily, but had never been abandoned and with the expansion of defence activities recently it was decided to enlarge it.

Student Strike Reported Settled

Guelph, Ont., Oct. 30—(CP)—The dispute between the third-year students at the Ontario Agricultural College and O.A.C. officials which arose several days ago, has been settled, it was learned here today. The dispute started when Neil Shaver, a third-year student from R.R. 1, Millgrove, was refused permission to return to classes after he had left the college without notification to assist his father on the farm at his home.

Dr. I. Christie, President of the O.A.C. discussed the situation with Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture yesterday. No comment was offered by students or officials today but it is understood the matter has been dropped and that Shaver will not return to the O.A.C.

At no time during the dispute did the third-year students stop attending classes, but they withdrew from the annual field day last Saturday in protest.

THREE SENTENCED FOR CHICKEN THEFTS

Guelph, Ont., Oct. 30 —(CP)—Pleading guilty to a charge of stealing chickens, Reginald Armishaw, of Ariss, William Armstrong, Mount Forest and Samuel Bondi, Guelph, were today each sentenced to two terms of three months in the county jail. The terms will run concurrently.

Armishaw and Armstrong both pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of stealing 50 chickens from Vincant Murphy, Arthur Township farmer. They also pleaded guilty today to stealing chickens from Edward Snow, Peel Township. Bondi pleaded guilty today to the theft of poultry from Murphy and theft of chickens from Snow.

MEN FROM U. K. WILL BE BROUGHT TO 'BUILD CARGO SHIPS'

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—G. Kingsley Sheils, Deputy Minister of Munitions and Supply, said in an address before an Optimist Club last night that plans are under way whereby men from the United Kingdom "will be brought to Canada for building cargo ships."

He said that increased industrial activity, through war orders, will result in Canadian industry turning out goods at the rate of $1,000,000,000 worth a year by the end of 1941. Small arms ammunition was being produced at the rate of 1,000,000,000 rounds a year.

GREECE'S BIG THREE

Greatly Increased Output of Planes In Canada and U. S. Will Enable Britain to Build Defence Types

Chicago, Oct. 30 (CP)—Canada and the United States will furnish about twice as many airplanes as they were scheduled to provide for the British Commonwealth Air Training plan, Malcolm McLean, special assistant to Hon. C. G. Power, Canada's Minister of National Defence for Air, said today.

This increased output of planes will allow British factories to concentrate on types of aircraft needed for defence of the United Kingdom, he told executives of a farm implement company in a luncheon address.

"Britain, in spite of the battle of London, has been able to resume shipments (of training aircraft to Canada),' Mr. McLean said.

"Her factories also have been speeded up for fighting planes but even at that, she will not furnish more than one-half as many training aircraft as was originally intended, the United States and Canada each approximately twice as many."

Mr. McLean, Liberal member of the Dominion Parliament for Melfort (Sask.), said Canada is now confident there will be little shortage in providing aircraft for schools operating under the training plan.

"For every plane now in operation, there will be, by June 1 next, three required for extensions and wastage, and we believe that all the school required will be provided with sufficient for their needs," he added.

Summing up his description of "a great plan which Britain believed would be the most important contribution Canada could make to the war effort," he said the training scheme was the greatest single undertaking ever attempted by Canada in so brief a period.

Mighty Effort Across Canada

All across Canada a mighty effort was being made to make the enterprise a success. Permanent force officers were given the job of supervising and organizing the plan. Particularly all the instructional staff had to be trained. There was the greatest harmony between uniformed and civilian men connected with the scheme.

"Flying clubs, bush operators, highly-organized commercial air companies, schools and universities, provincial governments, corporations, and the man in the street, all are joined together in giving, not only moral, but financial and material support," he said.

"With such backing the Royal Canadian air force realizes that it must not, and can not fail.

"Blunders and mistakes we have made, but this is not the time to consider them, except to avoid repetition, and, in spite of difficulties, the organization is rolling along to the time when Canada will contribute materially in the final and decisive blows for victory."

But Mr. McLean warned his listeners against over-optimism. He quoted from a recent speech of Prime Minister Winston Churchill:

"Long dark months of trials and tribulations lie before us. Not only great dangers, but many more misfortunes, many short-comings and many disappointments will surely be our lot.

"Death and sorrow will be the companions of our journey, hardship our garment, and constancy and valor our only shield.

"We must be united, we must be undaunted, we must be inflexible."

Greece Will 'Add New Page to History'

London, Oct. 30 (CP)—Charalambos Simopoulos, Greek Minister to Britain, told a luncheon audience today that "we are fully aware of the ordeals that lie before us."

"We will bear them with patience and dignity and with God's help will add a new page to our history," he said. "So will Italy, but we do not envy them this addendum."

VIRTUAL PROMISE TO SPARE ATHENS IF ROME SPARED

Rome, Oct. 30 (AP)—A virtual promise that Italy would refrain from bombing Athens so long as Rome is spared from aerial attack was broadcast by the Rome Radio today in a statement denying what it claimed was a British assertion that Fascist planes had already raided the Greek capital. (No such report had been received from London.)

EMPIRE STANDS LIKE GREAT ROCK SAYS CRANBORNE

In Storm Now Shaking Foundations of World the Empire's 'Essential Strength' is Unweakened

AIR PLAN PRAISED

London, Oct. 30.—(CP)— Viscount Cranborne, Dominions Secretary, declared today that "in the storm now shaking the foundations of the world the Empire stands like a great rock against which the winds and the waves break without weakening its essential strength".

In Britain, he told a luncheon gathering, thousands of Canadian troops are waiting "with eager impatience for a chance to deal faithfully with Hitler's forces of invasion".

"In the war Canada and Australia each have no less than 300,000 men in training", he added. "Canadian destroyers are in close co-operation with our navy and the Royal Australian navy in the Mediterranean and the Red Sea is doing magnificent work. . . . .

"On land, in the middle east, forces from the union of South Africa, as well as from Southern Rhodesia and other parts of Africa, stand alongside our troops to defeat the Italian foe. Elsewhere in the same area the Australians and New Zealanders are massing".

Tribute to Dominion Pilots

Lord Cranborne paid tribute to Dominion pilots and said that the Empire Training scheme, when in full operation, is designed to produce 20,000 pilots and 30,000 air crews yearly.

"It is months ahead of schedule", he added.

"What the future of the British Commonwealth will be, I do not know", the Dominions Secretary concluded. "It may be that it will become the pattern and a member of a yet wider confederation and better league embracing all the nations of the world".

Harold F. Sutton, Literary Editor, Drowned at Denbigh

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—Harold Francis Sutton, literary editor of "Saturday Night" under the pen name of "Hal Frank", was drowned when his boat overturned on a lake near Denbigh in the Ottawa district yesterday, it was learned here today.

Sutton was said to have drowned while his younger brother, Frank, stood on the shore helpless to aid him.

Building Permits In Month September

Ottawa, Oct. 30—(CP)—In a preliminary survey the Dominion Bureau of Statistics today reported the total value of building permits issued in 165 Canadian municipalities during September totalled $10,014,340 compared with $11,555,102 in 187 municipalities during the previous month.

Permits issued in 57 of the same 58 municipalities in August this year were valued at $7,693,732, while permits issued in 56 of the municipalties in September, 1940, were worth $6,426,220.

SENTENCED ON ARSON CHARGE

Sudbury, Ont., Oct. 30 (CP)—Leo St. Jules, former Sudbury painter, was sentenced today to six months in Ontario Reformatory when he pleaded guilty to a charge of arson.

St. Jules admitted in court that he set a fire which destroyed a shack here in September, 1939. He charged the shack was owned by Hugo Victor Chatelain, Sudbury decorator, and that he set the fire on Chatelain's instructions.

Chatelain will also be tried on an arson charge.

CANADA'S INCOME $4,500,000,000 BANKER DECLARES

General Manager of Bank of Montreal Says Rising National Income in First Year of War

NO INFLATION SEEN

Philadelphia, Oct. 30—(CP)—Official estimates place Canada's national income for the current fiscal year at not less than $4,500,000,000, an increase of $700,000,000 over 1939, G. W. Spinney of Montreal, General Manager of the Bank of Montreal, told the Bond Club of Philadelphia in an address today.

Mr. Spinney, whose address was titled "Some Financial Aspects of Canada in Wartime," said that the Dominion Government's expectation of a rising national income in the first year of war had been "well borne out." At the same time, he added, it is "recognized that additional unemployed manpower and resources can be mobilized into productive work, so that a further substantial expansion of our national income is possible."

Borrowing

The budget for the current fiscal year left about $600,000,000 to be met by borrowing, said Mr. Spinney, adding that "while this is a lot of money for Canada, I am fully satisfied that it can be raised." He pointed out that of $700,000,000 borrowed by the government since the outbreak of war, only $200,000,000 had been taken by banks, with the remainder going to other hands.

The June crisis with the fall of France, said Mr. Spinney, "compelled a revision" of Canada's financial plans and "made it necessary to accelerate and extend them in every possible way." These circumstances were reflected in the last Dominion budget, which provided $900,000,000 for war purposes, an increase of $400,000,000 over earlier expectations.

No Inflation Seen

Discussing the question of whether Canada had begun to experience inflation, Mr. Spinney said:-

"I have no hesitation in replying that we have not; and that it is by no means inevitable that we shall. . . No one would care to say what the future may hold in this respect. But it is clear that many factors which helped to produce inflation in the last war do not exist today; and that the danger is much better understood, and can therefore be better guarded against."

VICHY GOV'T TO COLLABORATE WITH THE AXIS POWERS

Aim is 'French Unity' Says Petain in Broadcast to French Nation

NO AGGRESSION

Accepted Voluntarily Hitler's Invitation to Conference Last Week

Vichy, Oct. 30.—(AP)— Marshal Philippe Petain, in a broadcast tonight explaining his meeting with Hitler said his government has decided on collaboration with the Rome-Berlin Axis "to maintain French unity".

"Thus in the near future the weight of suffering laid on our country can be lightened", Petain said. "The plight of our prisoners can be bettered and the expenses of occupation (by the German army) can be diminished.

"This collaboration must be sincere. It must exclude all sorts of aggression. This policy is mine. The Ministers are responsible only to me. It is I alone history will judge.

"Up to now I have used the language of a father. Today I use the language of a chief".

Petain added that he had accepted voluntarily Hitler's invitation to the conference last week, at which the "principles of collaboration" were established.

500 ITALIANS TAKEN IN HILLS, SALONIKA HEARS

No Air or Sea Attacks Made on Salonika, Says A.P. Writer

OLD PORT ACTIVE

By J. Wes. Gallagher Associated Press Staff Writer.

Salonika, Greece, Oct. 30 (CP)—I have been watching at first hand the Greek army moving up swiftly to meet Italy's attack.

All regular passenger traffic was blocked when I crossed the Yugoslav border, but I managed to get on by railway handcar and freight, arriving in this ancient port in time to see one phase of Greece's determined preparations to hold the country from the invaders.

Since I arrived here there has been continual activity as troops are moved to the northwest to strengthen the defences there. All motor transport has been requisitioned. Even taxicabs are being used to carry soldiers to the front where the Greeks say, the Italians are making no headway in their attempts to break the Metaxas line.

Enthusiasm For Britain High

An unofficial report here said 500 Italians were captured in fighting along the frontier mountain passes.

There have been no air or sea attacks on Salonika. The public is calm and orderly, despite the closeness of the war.

Everywhere in the streets, in the shops and cafes there seems to be unlimited resolution to keep the Italians checked. Enthusiasm for Britain is high.

The people of Salonika looked out to sea today for the possible approach of protecting British warships, and at the skies for a glimpse of Italian bombers.

The first Greeks wounded at the front were reported to have reached base hospitals here, but casualties so far are considered to be surprisingly few.

The Greeks are using artillery emplacements blasted out of the mountain precipices. The rocky surroundings protect the gun crews from aerial bombings. . . . . .

Roosevelt Starts Political Tour Of New England

En route with President Roosevelt to Boston, Oct. 30—(AP)—President Roosevelt started a political tour of New England today by telling a rain-drenched crowd at the New Haven, Conn., station that men were being trained for military service for "just the same reason that you've got umbrellas up today—so as not to get wet."

The President said it still was necessary to have manpower, even though there was no expectation of using it.

He added: "This talk about sending American boys to Europe does not conform with either the facts of the past or the facts of the future."

He said it was a "pity" that fear had been injected into the election campaign — "fears about things that don't exist."

"What a pity it is," Mr. Roosevelt added, "the only thing we have to fear in America is fear itself."

PASSENGER SUSTAINS SPINAL INJURIES

Rifkin, the driver of the vehicle told Provincial Constable Patterson that a passenger in the motor car had seized the steering wheel as the car skidded on the wet pavement.

Ottawa Coach Praises Coulter, Believes His Team Benefited From Drubbing Given by Argos

Rough Riders Pretty Chesty Before Argonauts Took Them Over the Jumps

NO CHANGES PLANNED

'Argos' Drill Cut Short by Heavy Rain but Team in First-Class Shape

(By the Canadian Press)

Good can come even from football games that are lost, thinks Coach Ross Trimble of Ottawa Rough Riders.

The Riders are just getting used to the fact that they lost last Saturday 11-8 to Toronto Argonauts in the biggest football upset of the season in Eastern Canada. There were rumors that some of the boys wouldn't believe it until they read the score in the newspapers.

Trimble, who had his team out at Lansdowne Park last night for a drill in preparation for this Saturday's game against Montreal, says that the game accomplished more in two hours than he could accomplish in a season of coaching.

"The boys were pretty chesty but they learned their lesson against Argonauts," said Trimble. The Ottawa coach had praise for the work of Quarterback Bobby Coulter, who sparked the Argonaut team to victory.

Trimble doesn't plan to make any changes in the team, which was good enough the previous week to roll up a 41-6 count against Argonauts at Ottawa. It seems unlikely, however, that inside Dave Sprague will see action against Montreal as he suffered a gashed hip in the game against Toronto.

Montreal to Change Line-up.

In Montreal, Coach Bill Hughes had his players sit in last night on a film of Saturday's game against Hamilton Tigers which the Montrealers lost 12-7. Hughes ran off the film once without comment and then again more slowly. The second time he pointed out mistakes made by the Montrealers.

Hughes indicated that he plans several changes in his line-up for the meeting with Ottawa but would not say just what these would be. Maxwell Smith, 280-pound lineman from Winnipeg, turned out again last night for his second drill. Hughes said he did not expect Smith to be ready for the game against Riders, but likely will use the big fellow against Argonauts a week later.

Argonuats went through a practice session that was cut to an hour by a heavy rain. Coach Lew Hayman had a newcomer on hand in the person of Bill McFarlane, a 218-pound end who reported that he played with Cornell University's Varsity team for the past three seasons. Hayman said that if McFarlane shows signs that he is in condition he would use him as a middle wing. The big American joined the Royal Canadian Signal Corps and is stationed in Toronto.

BOMBERS FAVOR EAST-WEST GAME

Winnipeg Players Willing to Assist in Any Worthwhile War Project

Winnipeg, Oct. 30.— (CP)— The Winnipeg Rugby Football Club favors an east-west football game in Toronto if satisfactory arrangements can be made with the sponsors of the proposed match.

Joe Ryan, the manager of the Champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers, said in an interview that no formal invitation has yet been received from Toronto.

We can, however, say, subject to approval of our executive, which can be assumed, that our club will willingly meet the eastern champions in a game or games that will in any way aid any cause that will add anything to Canada's war effort".

A Toronto despatch last night said that Comptroller Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, had announced his organization is prepared to sponsor a game with financial backing supplied by the Toronto Globe and Mail.

In commenting on this, Ryan said: "It is assumed that the west as well as eastern organizations providing athletic facilities for soldiers in training, will share on an equal basis.

"In any event, while we are not prepared to speak for Calgary, we think the western winner will gladly co-operate in any worthwhile cause in any way consistent with their limited ability to do so".

The Blue Bombers and the Calgary Bronks will play the first game of their western final in Calgary on Saturday.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

(By The Canadian Press)

Manager Red Dutton of New York Americans is moaning low today. The Americans apparently have lost the services of one of their rookie stars, Squee Allen, for a month. Allen was injured Monday night when checked by defenceman Ott Heller of the Rangers in a game won 3-2 by Americans.

Quite a casualty list can be made up from players injured in different National Hockey League camps. Alf Pike and Dutch Hiller of the Rangers are on the shelf; Hooley Smith of Americans is recovering from a minor injury; Bummer Doran, a defenceman, was injured in a Toronto workout; while defenceman Alex Singbush and left winger Louis Trudel are just recovering from bad knees in the Canadiens' camp.

New York Rangers and the Americans play their sixth and last exhibition game tonight at Port Arthur, Ont. Red Dutton's Americans hold the lead at present, 3-2.

Detroit Red Wings are not finding their farm team, Indianapolis Capitals any soft touch in their exhibition hockey series at Detroit. The Capitals took the measure of the parent club 3-2 the other night and then duplicated the feat again last night.

Big Time Hockey Career of Eddie Shore Rare Adventure

N.H.L. Star to Manage American League Team Can Look Back on 14 Years Colorful Hockey Playing

MANY INJURIES

(By Sydney Gruson)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 30.—(CP) — The people jammed into the arena tensed as the big, bow-legged guy with the "2" sprawled across his back snared the puck and started out. Depending on the arena, they roared approval or shouted in anger, mixed with admiration, as he bullied and smashed his way to the other end.

That's been the scene for 14 National Hockey League years as Eddie Shore moved through his big-league hockey career. It became a career of triumphs, of disappointments and heartaches, of everything that a man can experience in sport. But there hasn't been a dull moment for him or the thousands who watched him, for 13 years as a Boston Bruin and one as a New York American.

Now Eddie has decided to stop. At 38, he'll leave it to the younger fellows and play a little and manage a little when his Springfield Indians of the minor American league. He's a rich, mellowed man, with an enigmatic smile, a big wheat farm in Alberta and the satisfaction of having made his name as one of hockey's greatest defencemen. But it wasn't always like that.

He came up in a day when it was the survival of the fittest in the N.H.L.—when a rookie had to show he could take it to stay among the Coutus, Cleghorns and other greats. He was at Boston's training camp of 1926. Big Billy Coutu and the apple-checked rookie smashed at each other—the one to see if the kid had it, the kid to show he could take it.

Saved His Ear

In one bull-like rush, Coutu roared into Shore and Eddie met him head-on. Coutu went down, the kid stood on his feet but his left ear was split from top to bottom. They wanted to take his ear off but he wouldn't let them and he finally found a doctor who agreed to do a patching job. Eddie Shore stayed with the Bruins.

There was the night in Madison Square Garden some years back when he smashed into a steel goal post with a sickening thud. He played out the game, then went to a doctor. There were at least two ribs broken, perhaps more. An x-ray examination would tell exactly the next day.

But the Bruins had gone on to Montreal for a game with the old Maroons and Eddie wasn't having any sitting around. The morning after the smash-up he took a train for Montreal, scored two goals that won the game and then had the ribs fixed up.

Red Dutton tells of the time Shore came to Montreal against the Maroons in 1927, when Shore was in his second season and Dutton was a Maroon. The Maroons decided to find out what made the kid tick. So they smashed him and bashed him and he wound up with a broken nose, minus some teeth and cuts. He got out of the hospital the following morning.

Ditched But Scored

And there was the night in Boston when Shore missed the train to Montreal. A mid-winter storm was blowing and the roads were covered with ice, so Shore hired a taxicab and, when the driver couldn't make any headway, took over the wheel himself. They went into the ditch once, they were held up trying to find someone to pull them out and they didn't get to Montreal until six o'clock in the evening, 22 hours from Boston.

Shore grabbed two hours' sleep. Then he went to Montreal Forum, played one of the best games of his life and scored the only goal.

Those were the years when Shore was hockey's "bad man", before the time when finesse and pure ability took the place of his bone-crushing and stick-swinging play.

The turning point in his career when when he and Ace Bailey of Toronto, tangled in Boston Garden in December, 1933, when Bailey came when he and Ace Bailey of and hovered between life and death for weeks, when a broken, dispirited Shore was suspended for 16 weeks.

But he came gack, a milder Shore, but still a great hockey player, still able to pound down the ice for 30, 40 or 50 and sometimes 60 minutes of a game, still able last year at 37 to play five games in six nights with the Americans and Springfield.

Yes, sir! There was, and is, a great hockey man!

ALDIGE BASTIEN IS UNDERSTUDY FOR TURK BRODA

21-Year-Old Goalie Will be Carried on Roster of Toronto Leafs

FULL OF CONFIDENCE

Played With Port Colborne and Atlantic City Before Turning Pro

(By Dick Sheridan, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 30—(CP) — Shades of Georges Vezina and Lorne Chabot. Working out with the Toronto Leafs at their National Hockey League training camp is a young French-Canadian goalie who bids fair to follow in the footsteps of those other great habitant netminders.

Aldige (Bas) Bastient has not yet convinced Manager Conn Smythe that he is ready to oust Turk Broda from the Leafs' nets, but the good-looking 21-year-old youngster has showed enough in two weeks to eliminate one doughty rival.

When Smythe last week sold Phil Stein outright to New Haven, it was a tacit admission that Bastien would do. Not perhaps this year, or even a year from now but sometime in the not too distant future.

Stein, a Toronto boy, has been a trial horse, in a hockey sense, for all the ambitious young goalies who sought a job with the Leafs. For years he has acted as a buffer for Broda. Never good enough to catch a regular berth but too valuable to dispose of.

Threat Not to be Ignored

Last season Stein seemed to have reached the point where he at least would alternate with Broda. Other years he invariably finished up in the International-American circuit with Syracuse. In his second game with the Leafs, phlegmatic Phil stopped a puck with his eye. Broda replaced him and remained as a regular thereafter.

With Stein gone, Bastien is a threat that Broda just can't ignore. Five-foot, six inches in height and weighing around 165 pounds, Bas is as active as he is confident.

Timmins-born, he played junior hockey for North Bay Trappers in 1938 and starred for the Northern Ontario champions when they lost to Oshawa Generals in the Memorial Cup playdowns.

Played with Sailors

Heading south the next year, Bastien got a job as second string netminder with Port Colborne seniors of the Ontario Hockey Association, outsting the regular custodian, Art Child, in short order. At the conclusion of the regular schedule last season, Bastien got permission to play with Bert Corbeau's Atlantic City Sea Gulls.

Bastien is an all-round athlete, playing lacrosse, baseball, softball and is a good competitive swimmer. As for confidence, he is brimful of it. In his Port Colborne days he was heard to remark after being scored upon:

"Why, I played that shot right, but that guy didn't make the right shot."

N. H. L. Training Camp Notes

Manager Paul Thompson sent his Chicago Black Hawks through a stiff drill yesterday at St. Paul, Minn. Later this week the Hawks will play two exhibition games with the Saints of the American Association. Thompson also revealed yesterday that six players who have been training with the Hawks have been sent to Providence Reds of the American League for further seasoning. They are John Mariucci, Red MacKay, defenceman; Max Bentley, Paul Platz, George Johnson and Bill Mosienko, forwards.

Lex Chisholm in a class by himself among Leafs as golfer, whipped around St. Catharines par 70 course Tuesday for 71 in successfully defending his hockey title. Chisholm had 37-34. Closest was Red Heron with 36-32—77. Both without handicap. Broda and Apps, also unhandicapped, had 80 and 85, respectively. Ernie Dickens, Winnipeg junior, who will play with Toronto Marlboros, had low net with 70 after deducting 27 handicap from 97 gross Bob Copp, Port Elgin, N.B., (and Toronto Univ.) amateur was last with 146 gross, 27 handicap, 119 net.

The sixth annual meeting of the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association will be held in the King Edward Hotel in Toronto on Saturday, Nov. 2nd., 1940, according to a bulletin recently released by Secretary J. H. Stafford. In 1935 the O.J.H.A. organized with a half a dozen clubs, but the scope of fostering hockey among the teen age boys of this province has become so large that today the O.J.H.A. has been asked to include provincial bantam and midget series in their organization. In 1939-40 the Association embraced no less than 80 teams in Ontario and this year hope to raise that number to the even one hundred clubs. Last year the Ontario Hockey Association made certain ventures towards the O.J.H.A. seeking the latter to affiliate with the O.H.A., but the Juvenile sponsors feel they are doing a much greater work among the teen aged boys who are desirous of playing hockey under organized efforts and flatly rejected any proposals of amalgamation with the O.H.A.

For the past three years Belleville has been affiliated with the O.J.H.A. and whatever hockey players are available in the city today are directly attributed to the efforts in juvenile hockey. Recently Secretary Stafford and Harold Luke, Oshawa executive member, toured Eastern Ontario at their own expense to ascertain why there was a laxity in the sponsorship of Juvenile hockey east of Cobourg. "In all other parts of the province our Association has a splendid following and a large affiliation," stated Mr. Stafford. When men like Mr. Stafford and Mr. Luke, both successful in the business world of Ontario, spend their own time and money towards the enlargement of the movement, it must embrace something big. Incidentally S. R. "Sam" Curry, publisher of the Tweed News, was named as a district convener in the Trent Valley sector where it is hoped a juvenile group composed of Tweed, Madoc, Stirling and Marmora will function this season. There is one thing certain, once juvenile hockey is introduced and takes a firm hold upon a community, the spirit remains and the movement flourishes.

Both Mr. Stafford and Mr. Luke became personally interested and associated with the promotion of minor league hockey through their own sons and it is really too bad more fathers do not follow suit. This winter Mr. Stafford's son hopes to be playing with the Toronto Marlboro juniors, while Mr. Luke's oldest boy is serving overseas with the 48th Highlanders, as did his dad a quarter of a century ago. Despite their interests in their own boys, these two men are spending their personal time and money to promote O.J.H.A. throughout Eastern Ontario The annual meeting of the O.J.H.A. is to be held in Toronto on Saturday and "it would be a splendid idea if delegates from the Belleville Juvenile Hockey League would take in this meeting and acquaint themselves with the inner workings of the provincial body and learn its magnitude. With Prince Edward County and Belleville organized for juvenile hockey, the next move is to interest the Trent Valley and Bay of Quinte areas. With the successful minor league teams functioning in Trenton last winter, that town should be a fertile field for a O.J.H.A. entry in 1941.

We understand "Speedy" St. Louis, Ken Watt and a couple of other local pucksters journeyed to Kingston on Monday night to enter a Belleville hockey team in the Kingston Van Horne Memorial Cup series. We Understand there are a couple of new pucksters in our fair city who have been employed in war work, while Pete Morgan returned to his favourite haunts more recently and can lineup with the Redmen in the Kingston Van Horne series. However, the two Jackson boys are now in the army and their places will have to be filled. Judging from their efforts last winter, however, this shouldn't be too difficult a problem. The Redmen will have the services of Mark Storms and Frank Butler, both of whom are over-age for junior hockey this coming season, and no doubt Arnold Ethier and Harry McGuire would welcome the opportunity to play a few pre-season games with a local sextette in the Kingston loop. The Van Horne executive hopes to commence activities somewhat earlier this fall in order to complete their various play-offs before the end of the year, which should be a welcomed improvement to the group.

Do you remember when Vince Dundee defeated Lou Brouillard, French-Canadian boxer, in a 15-round bout for the world middleweight title at Boston seven years ago tonight. Brouillard had won the title two months earlier with a knockout decision over Ben Jeby in seven rounds at New York.

Remember Freddie Hamilton, player-manager of the old Toronto Oslers of two decades ago and now controller of the City of Toronto? Well Freddie is trying to get the divorced football factions of the west and east to meet in the Dominion finals in Toronto this year with all net proceeds to go to the supplying of sports equipment for military units. Sounds like a splendid idea and no doubt the cause will prompt action on the part of both parties concerned.

Off the Sports Griddle there's nothing phoney about Alva Bradley wanting Mickey Cochrane as the sachem of his Indians. Mickey is carrying around a Cleveland offer, a proposition by which he could round out 25 grand a season But, despite his love for B. B. Cochrane probably will not accept, because he is up in the bucks as an auto equipment manufacturer's agent and business is better than ever now, due to war preparedness. Recently pulled a rich order out of a large airplane plant near Los Angeles, flying to and from the Coast....Bill McKechnie will not have to worry about the coal bin this winter. The Deacon's income for the season grossed a little more than $35,000—$25,000 salary, $5,000 bonus, plus a World's Series cut of $5,782.....Add conscription notes The only dependents Bobby Feller has are the Cleveland Indians.....After one season with the Phillies, Bob Bragan has decided that he will have more peace of mind by becoming a minister....Many Coast league players have found profitable employment in the large airplane factories out west.

Bill Klem has carried the same indicator for 35 years. It was given to him by the late John McGraw in 1905 .... Karl D. Kolseth, a minor league first baseman for 15 years, is campaigning a small racing stable at the Maryland tracks. And rues the the fact that he never went into the business .... They (meaning some of the writers) have nicknamed meaning Frankie Frisch "Happy."

Checkerboard Love

A FIRST-RUN McCLURE SERIAL.

CHAPTER XXX.

Rain fell incessantly throughout the evening, but it could not dampen the complete contentment of Victor Quinn. The clouds of his depression had been dissipated now, leaving him to bask in the gentle radiance of Audrey's presence. Gentle was the word that kept recurring to mind. Audrey appeared to be in unusual spirits, but he sensed an unwonted tenderness in her eyes and voice, even in her laughter. Victor was conscious of it while he watched and listened, but he made no attempt to ascribe a reason for her mood. It was enough that he was allowed to share it.

For an hour or more after dinner he played at Wellington with his hostesses. It was a new game to Victor, but it proved to be one of Martha Swan's favorite pastimes and the guest was quietly amused at the earnestness she displayed and the apparent satisfaction she took in collecting the seven pennies that were due her at the end of the section. "How are you going to get home tonight, Mr. Quinn?" she demanded, after announcing her intention to retire.

"I'll take him home, seeing I abducted him in the first place," Audrey suggested.

"Indeed you will not," was his retort. "You forget that Parville boasts two taxicabs. I'll phone for one presently."

"You may as well occupy the guest room. It's all made up. Then Audrey can take you in after breakfast."

"That's very kind, Mrs. Swan, but I won't impose on your hospitality to that extent, this time."

"You're perfectly welcome to stay if you want to. Good night." And with that she disappeared.

"Did anybody ever tell you that you have a mighty nice mother, Audrey?" Victor asked as he helped himself to a seat beside her on the couch.

"She's a dear."

Something in her voice caused the man to glance curiously at her. He was aware of an impression that her happy mood had been like a cloak, that she had allowed it to fall from her for an instant. "What's the matter?" he asked quietly.

"Nothing . . . much."

"Meaning something. Can I help?"

Instead of answering his question, she said hesitatingly: "Vic, my kidnapping you this evening was a.... a sort of plot. I didn't want to be alone with myself. I'm not sure I can make you understand."

"I'm afraid you'll have to be a little more specific," he suggested soberly. "That is, if you care to."

"I want to. And I know that you can understand, if I put it this way. It's the same thing that brought you to me once of your own accord. Jeff."

"Yes?" Victor said the word mechanically. There was the sensation of something tightening about his heart. He kept his eyes on Audrey's face, but she was looking down at her two hands clasped tensely on her lap.

As if the words were drawn from her reluctantly, she said: "He's coming home next week. Did you know?"

"No. I didn't know."

"It's because his wife has gone to Reno. I think you did know that and didn't tell me."

"I knew," he admitted in a flat voice. "I couldn't very well speak of it to anybody." One thought was hammering dully on his brain. Jeff had written to Audrey of his trouble. He wanted her to know. He wanted to see her.

"I couldn't let myself believe that such a thing could happen and yet I've somehow been afraid . . . always been afraid. I had hoped so that everything would turn out all right. I thought maybe it had until this afternoon when Judge Castle told me," Audrey said.

"The Judge told you!" Victor's eyes were wide with amazement. He choked slightly over the words.

"Why, yes." Audrey had raised her eyes to his. She was surprised in her turn at the outburst. "You see, I was driving past the station this afternoon just after the train came in. I saw the Judge standing in the door looking about for a cab, so I offered to take him to your office."

"I see." Victor drew a deep breath.

"He told me about Jeff; that he was coming home to see his mother and then was going abroad. I think it is a wise thing for him to do, but it made me fairly sick. It did! You know that Jeff's always been the same as a brother. I adored him that way when I was a youngster. I couldn't stop right off, just because he went and got married. He's too fine and decent to get a deal like that! I wanted to love whomever he married. I could have loved Olive to death if . . . if she'd only been different. I guess that's why I just had to see you tonight. You're the only one I could spill to, because you've always tried to help Jeff when he needed it." She gave a little laugh that was suspiciously like a sob. "Please consider your shoulder duly wept on, will you?"

"Audrey! Audrey Swan! Do you know what you've said?"

"Why, I should think I did!" She looked at him wonderingly. "I was . . . oh, I get it." The wonder in her eyes gave way to sudden and utter hopelessness. "You thought I was trying to confess that I was in love with Jeff , . . that maybe I"

"No. But I . . ."

"Listen, Vic. Don't you think you've done your Damon and Pythias act pretty nearly to death? You're forcing me to be utterly shameless. But I'm like the girl in the ads who was always a bridesmaid. I want to be whispered TO ....not ABOUT."

"You mean . . ." he could not find the words.

"I'm afraid I do, Vic. Don't you know you are the funniest and dumbest man in the world?"

His answer to that was to gather her in his arms and hold her close, with his cheek resting against her shining curls. "I guess you're right about me," Victor admitted finally, drawing a long breath. "But how could I know?"

"You could have tried asking. I know you did, a long time ago. But I had to be sure. Then, when I was sure, you didn't ask. You just kept telling me."

"And I'm telling you again. I love you . . . so."

"And I love you, Vic. I guess I have for a long time. Do you know that you gave my maidenly reserve a dreadful test the last time you were here? When you kissed my hand? I went upstairs and wept after you left me."

"Let me make up for it, please, dear. Look at me." He kissed her lips, then took her face in his two hands and looked into her eyes. "I can't believe it, quite," he murmured happily. "Audrey . . ."

"Yes?"

"Please make your nose do that."

It did.

U. S. Consular Visa Issued to Austrian

Montreal, Oct. 30—(CP)—A United States consular visa has been issued to 20-year-old Herman BBondi, a native of Austria who has been released from a Canadian internment camp it was learned Tuesday.

Bondi was brought to the United States consulate here Tuesday under guard in an army van. It was said he was granted the visa on the strength of British identification papers, although he had no passport.

It was believed his release from the internment camp came after a review of cases ordered in London when complaints were made that many genuine refugees from German-occupied lands had been taken into custody.

Bondi was studying at Cambridge University when war broke out. He was interned and subsequently sent to Canada.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop said to ma, I noticed a big new market up on the Avenue, maybe you better investigate it, it might be a paneless way to save money.

Why yes indeed, I got a notice in the mail about the opening of that place, it's called the Colossal Wonder Market and the prices they quoted seemed very stimulating, ma said. Even if we only save a few cents on every few pounds of vegetables, it will add up to real round figures in the course of time, she said, and pop said, Absilutely, that's the spirit that provides comfortable old ages for the Skotch.

Of course, ma said. After all, what's a doller but a multiplied penny? Those big markets are always open evenings, let's walk up there right now, Willyum, while the iron is hot, she said, and pop said, I dont think my iron is quite that hot, you go along and I'll stay here and take any telephone messages that might come in for you while you're gone.

Now Willyum, it was all your suggestion in the first place, so there's no reason why you cant suit the action to the word and bestir your feet for a few blocks, ma said, and pop said, I'd of been glad to, but now I've thought of putting my slippers on and I dont like to change my mind.

Oh Willyum, come on, it's no distance at all, it's practically around the corner right next to that awful slot machine place, ma said, and pop said, By gollies that's right. I'll go along. I'll get a flock of nickels and amuse myself while you're marketing, he said.

And squander 10 times as much as I save at the market for land sakes, ma said. No thanks, that's not my idea of false economy, you can just put your slipers on and be done with it, she said.

Wich he did looking like somebody feeling better instead of worse.

TOTAL OF POLIO CASES IS LOWER

Toronto, Oct. 30—(CP)—Dr. J. T. Phair, Chief Medical Officer of Health for Ontario, said Tuesday there had been 78 cases of infantile paralysis in this province since the first of the year. Seven deaths had resulted.

He said the total was lower than at any time since the disease first attracted attention of medical authorities, although there appeared to be a slightly-higher incidence of the disease in the older age group. Distribution of the disease was general outside of six cases in one family of the Brantford district.

Dr. Phair said that a medical officer had been sent to Brantford in an attempt to ascertain the source of infection that struck six members of the Brooks family. The source was not found.

Mrs. G. Brooks, her three daughters and a son, were reported as making favorable progress in hospital at Brantford, Dr. Phair said. The sixth member of the family, a boy, died of the disease.

TURKEY SILENT ON NEW CONFLICT

Delayed Dispatch Dated Oct. 29th., Cites Paper as Saying Nation is 'Wholeheartedly With Greece'

Ankara, Turkey, Oct. 29—(Delayed)—(CP) — The British Information Office said today that British naval detachments had landed on the Greek island of Crete and on the island of Cephalonia, south of Corfu.

(London had denied that "troops" had been landed on Greek islands.)

Turkish officials were silent on the nation's attitude toward the Italo-Greek conflict, but the official newspaper Ulus said Turkey is "whole-heartedly with Greece," and the newspaper Yeni Sabah added: "Turkey will . . . if need be, know her duty to give all aid" to Greece.

The latter periodical also warned Bulgaria to stay out, declaring: "Should Bulgaria try an adventure toward the Aegean, she will be faced by the Turkish army."

Turkish rail communications were interrupted today (possibly by troop movements) and the Simplon express from the north, which passes through eastern Greece, had stopped.

RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE DISMISSED

London, Ont., Oct. 30—(CP)—Fred Gibson, 46, garage operator at Thedford, Ont., was dismissed on a reckless driving charge in county police court today. The charge followed the Sept. 22 death of Mrs. Gladys Henderson, 40, St. Marys, Ont.

Crown Attorney Norman Newton proceeded by indictment, and accused was freed at the end of preliminary hearing, on recommendation of the crown.

Autos driven by Gibson and Alex Henderson, husband of the victim, collided at the corner of Nairn gravel road and 9th concession Lobo. There was evidence that a corn field obstructed views of the intersection from two directions.

Top-Grade Eggs, Butter Prices Higher

Toronto—Improved buying interest raised butter and top-grade egg prices during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market.

Inquiry revived in afternoon dealings on the butter market when buyers stepped in to take on supplies to cover their current requirements. With offerings clearing more readily, sellers lifted prices from 28 1-2c a pound to 28 3-4c and in some cases to 29c a pound on No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids. Morning supplies turned over at the lower figure, but it was doubtful if this product could have been purchased below 29c near the close of the market. Prints moved through retail channels at 30c to 30 1-2c for top grades.

Another 1-cent increase occurred in the graded section on the egg market. Receipts continued light and the trading pace quickened. Government inspected shipments of graded "A" large and "A" medium eggs traded at a 1-cent premium. Retail prices showed no change.

Montreal Produce

Khaki Closeups

(By Ross Munro, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the C.A.S.F., Somewhere in England, Oct. 30—(CP)—The officers' mess of the road building unit of the Royal Canadian Engineers possesses probably the finest fireplace in the whole Canadian encampment, thanks to the Royal Air Force. An airport was badly marked with bomb craters and the Air Force was having a tough time filling them in. The Canucks voluntarily moved their heavy equipment to the field and did the job in short order. The R.A.F. reciprocated by sending some of their skilled men over to build the fireplace. It is a cheery spot these chill fall nights.

Major R. J. Williams, former Toronto insurance man who won the Military Cross for exploits in Norway with the British forces, is camp commandant of the Canadian-British Corps Area and is being hounded by Nazi raiders. A stick of bombs thudded on the lawns around his billet one night, too close for comfort but no damage done.

Occasionally officers attached to corps find time to shoot a few holes of golf on a war-zone course. A few bomb craters are new hazards. Par will have to be revised upward if the Nazis drop any more packets.

Nothing elaborate about Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton's office, at headquarters of the corps he commands. A few chairs, a large desk, shelves and book cases; much of his work is done on an unpainted map table. Walls of the room are decorated largely by posters of silhouettes of German planes.

Lacrosse and soccer are popular sports with the Canadian troops this time of year. An Eastern Canadian Anti-Tank Regiment is keen to handle anti-aircraft guns in its area at night. The Canadian gunners would relieve hard-working Britons. The Anti-Tankers feel they could do a job on night raiders and some officers are trying to arrange it.

Practically all the Canadians now are in winter quarters. One of the largest theatrical shows for Canada's soldiers was staged for the second division, a three - night stand with professional and amateur talent. Scotland is the favorite country now to visit on leave.

ITALIAN ATTACKS

while, alleged that Crown Prince Paul of Greece, brother of King George II, had been placed under police surveillance in Athens because, it said, he was known to be friendly to Italy and favorable to axis policies.

Dispatches from Italian correspondents who presumably fled Greece after the hostilities began claimed a police guard had been placed around the Prince's residence immediately after the Greek cabinet had decided to reject Italy's ultimatum early Monday morning.

"The Crown Prince now is in the hands of Metaxas (Premier John Metaxas) — that is to say of the English," Il Piccolo told its readers.

The newspaper declared reports from Athens told of cabinet dissension over the decision to resist the Italians. According to these reports, a controversy developed between Metaxas and Kostas Kotzias, Mayor of Athens and a member of the cabinet described as a "friend of Italy."

(There was no word of such claims outside Italy.)

It was understood that Greek Minister Politis has asked for his passports with the intention of leaving Rome tomorrow. In that case, Fascists said, arrangements would be made for the exchange of the Greek Legation Staff for the Staff of the Italian Legation at Athens. So far as is known here, Italian Minister Grazzi still is in Athens.

Reports of revolt against Italians in Albania were denied, Italian reports asserted, instead, there has been such enthusiasm among the Albanians that it has been necessary "to restrain individual initiative which tended to interfere with orderly development of military operations" against Greece.

The Greek High Command, strengthening its defence positions with reservists streaming north by train and truck, said in a communique early today that the Italians were striking with heavy force across the Albanian frontier in the Epirus district.

Heavy artillery and light Italian mountain guns were reported hammering at Greece's front line there in the rugged uplands which Aristotle described as the original home of the ancient Hellenes.

Of Greek resistance there, the High Command disclosed only that "our movements are carried out on the basis of pre-arranged plans."

The defence of the Greek-Albanian frontier in Epirus has been planned since the Italians occupied Albania in April, 1939, and Premier John Metaxas started the building of the secret strong points of the "Metaxas Line."

Situation Unchanged

The High Command declared "the situation remains unchanged" along the upper half of the border battlefront—in Western Macedonia from where Alexander the Great marched to the conquest of ancient Persia.

The defences there, where the Greek reports indicated the attack was less severe, guard the 100-mile route to Salonika, upper Aegean guardian of road and rail routes through Thrace to Turkey and the Dardanelles.

So far, the High Command said, "enemy aviation activity has been very light," although several Greek towns, mostly ports, have been bombed.

Up to 9.15 a.m. (3.15 a.m. EDT) today, Athens had no new air raid alarms. The only alarm since Monday was one which lasted 10 minutes last night. No planes were seen and no bombs dropped.

The Italians were said to be still far from the main Greek defence system, which was described as strongly fortified. Because of the mountainous terrain, the invaders were able to make little use of their mechanized equipment. Artillery, however, is being employed on a large scale.

Informed quarters said another strong Italian thrust was being made closer to the coast in an effort to reach a road which approaches Ionina from the west, but that the Italians had made no considerable gains in this coastal drive.

Neutral military experts expressed belief that the Greek troops along the Albanian frontier would be able to hold their lines because of the mountainous character of the area. All roads run through narrow valleys.

There was almost no Italian air activity yesterday and up to noon today (6 a.m. EDT.) no air raids had been reported from any part of Greece. The only raid yesterday was said to have been on Ionina.

Greeks hoped British naval planes would help make up for Greece's weakness in the air and hold back Italian bombers.

There were reports in Greece that Britain landed forces on the Ionian Sea island of Corfu and started preparing an air base there.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation last night quoted Rome dispatches asserting Italian troops also landed at Corfu and were fighting British forces.)

Duelling Heard in Belgrade

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Oct. 30 (AP)—Heavy artillery fire thundered all night along the Greek-Albanian border battlefront and continued to be heard today across the Yugoslav frontier.

Yugoslav diplomats reported that the Italian Minister to Athens and the Greek Minister to Rome remained at their posts. Some observers saw in this a hope that the differences between the two countries still might be settled and the fighting ended.

Admit Sinking is Report

The Greek Admiralty was reported in Belgrade to have published a statement that the previously unexplained sinking of the Greek light cruiser Helle last Aug. 15 was caused by Italian torpedoes.

The statement was said to have asserted that official investigation disclosed two pieces of the torpedoes found in the cruiser sunk off Tinos Island in the Aegean Sea had Italian factory markings.

The Greek government was said to have withheld this information heretofore "out of political consideration now no longer existing."

One petty officer was lost and 29 crew members were injured when the Helle was sunk by a submarine while at anchor in the Tinos Island harbor, 100 miles southwest of Athens.

The Helle, a 2,115-ton cruiser, was American-built.

AXIS MAY SOON

man Foreign Office, said:

"Wherever British bases and hideouts exist, they must be extirpated in the interests of the European continuity. This naturally applies to the Mediterranean."

Previously, the Dienst Aus Deutschland suggested Hitler and Mussolini had agreed at their Florence meeting Monday upon some unified action against Britain in which France and Spain might have a role.

The National Zeitung of Essen predicted the next axis step would be an attempt to sever British connections with Europe, Asia and Africa so that no port in those cont'nents would be open to British warships.

True of Mediterranean

Dienst Aus Deutschland said British efforts to "sabotage the axis work of continental unity" had only strengthened the German-Italian determination to strip the continent of all British influence. The same, this commentary said, held true for the Mediterranean area.

The axis powers, Dienst declared, are determined to "complete the organic consolidation of Europe and give the continent the order of peace in spite of all obstructions or difficulties."

The German public learned for the first time yesterday that Italian troops had invaded Greece after the Athens Government had rejected an Italian ultimatum.

Newspapers, which belatedly had printed the ultimatum, but made no mention of subsequent fighting, re-printed an Italian communique announcing Mussolini's fighters had crossed the Greek border from Albania.

may continue to live in freedom and peace."

Washington Man First Called

Beside him was a table on which reposed the historic glass aquarium from which numbers were drawn in the first draft lottery July 20, 1917.

Following the President's speech War Secretary Henry Stimson was blindfolded by Col. C. R. Morris, using the same bandage, a piece of the upholstery from a chair used by a signer of the Declaration of Independence, that he used for War Secretary Newton D. Baker in 1917.

Col. Morris stirred the blue capsules with a wooden ladle made from a piece of rafter from Independence Hall, Philadelphia, also used in 1917, and Secretary Stimson drew the first number, passing it to the President.

When Mr. Roosevelt called the first number —158— there was a split second of silence, broken by the shriek of Mrs. Mildred Bell of Washington, whose son, Robert, had drawn that number in one of the Washington local board districts.

But it was only a cry of surprise she explained to the reporters and cameramen, who immediately surrounded her in the centre of the auditorium.

Mrs. eBll apologized for the interruption and later went to the platform to tell a National radio audience she was glad to have her son serve. Her husband, a war veteran was one of the nonorary guard of American Legionaires accompanying the President.

BRAS D'OR WAS

year-old skipper, has not been seen since 3 a.m. Oct. 19, the navy said. Then she was sighted in the snow-flecked waters of the Gaspe Passage by a freighter.

In wartime a naval vessel seldom sends messages except when in danger. But no communication has come from the Bras D'Or, a veteran of the Lower St. Lawrence waters, since she left Clark City Que., on Oct. 18 for Sydney, N.S.

The navy in its customary cryptic style used only 226 words to announce the Bras D'Or was overdue. In that it included a brief biography of her commander and recounted the minesweeper's capture last June of the Capo Noli off the Bic Islands, some 10 miles west of Rimouski, Que.

Left Quebec Oct. 18

"Naval Service Headquarters regrets to announce that H.M.C.S. Bras D'Or is overdue," said the statement.

"H.M.C.S. Bras D'Or left Clark City, Quebec, on Oct. 18 for Sydney, N.S. Since then no communication has been received from the ship. She was last seen by a freighter in the Gaspe passage at 3 a.m. on Oct. 19.

"An extensive search has been made and is continuing to be made by naval vessels and aircraft. Weather conditions, heavy gales and snow, have been most severe in the region where the Bras D'Or is carrying out her duties.

"The search will continue until the vessel is found or until it is considered that hope should be abandoned."

The statement did not mention the number of men aboard the vessel but it was accompanied by a list of them, totalling 30, and giving their next-of-kin.

Lieut. Hornsby, Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, was born at Sunderland, Eng. Back of him were many years' service in the merchant navy as a qualified master mariner.

He joined the R.C.N.R. a month after the outbreak of war and took command of the Bras D'Or last April 26 after serving in the navy's shore establishment at Halifax and in H.M.C.S. Gaspe and Fundy, both minesweepers.

Of the Bras D'Or complement 14 came from Nova Scotia, seven of them from Halifax. Nine more were from Quebec, four from Ontario and one each from Saskatchewan, Alberta and Newfoundland.

Most of them aided in the capture of the Italian merchantman Capo Noli, but just how many the navy's information department could not say. The navy switches its men from ship to ship for one reason or another.

Trailed Italian Vessel

The Italian declaration of war caught the Italian ship driving for the sea with the Bras D'Or hot on her trail, Lieut. Hornsby directing operations.

When word of the Canadian parliament's decision to declare a state of war between Canada and Italy was made known, the Bras D'Or closed in on the merchantman.

Her crew sought to evade capture by running the vessel aground and attempted to set her afire.

Lieut. Hornsby ordered removal of the Italian crew, turned them over to police and aided a fire tug in putting out the Capo Noli flames. Later the Italian vessel was turned over to Canadian shipping authorities—a prize of war and the second vessel in which the Canadian navy had a hand in capturing.

The first such instance was the capture of the German merchantman Hannover, a 5,600-ton vessel overtaken and captured by the Canadian flotilla leader Assiniboine and a Royal Navy vessel in the Carribean March 8, as she sought to run the British blockade.

Since then the armed merchant cruiser Prince Robert has captured the Nazi express cargo boat Weser off the Mexican coast.

The Bras D'Or was travelling waters familiar to her. Before she was taken into the naval service as an auxiliary minesweeper she was in the service of the transport department.

The navy took her over Sept. 15, 1939, for minesweeping and patrol duties. Her length is 113 1-2 feet; beam 23 1-2 feet; draught 14 1-2 feet and gross tonnage 221 tons.

Armed, the vessel has a cruising range of 2,000 miles.

Schooner Feared Lost Also

Sydney, N.S., Oct. 30 (CP) — The fierce weather that swept the eastern seaboard while the overdue minesweeper Bras D'Or was travelling down the Lower St. Lawrence to Sydney was believed today to have claimed five lives aboard another vessel at sea at the same time.

Hope was all but abandoned for Capt. Jack Hayman and his Newfoundland crew of four seamen aboard the fishing schooner Bluebeard, sailing out of nearby Glace Bay. They were trapped in a sudden storm that smashed down on the Cape Breton Coast Oct. 22, two days after the Bras D'Or was last seen.

Fifteen fishermen aboard three other Glace Bay vessels were missing for more than a day after the snow-laden gale scattered the fleet off that port. One of the little craft was wrecked on Flint Island, but its crew was saved. The other ships straggled into port with crews intact to report a severe battering in the blow.

But no trace of the 14-ton Bluebeard has been found. Shipping men believe she sank with all hands.

WITNESS STATES

him and the accused. "I bought shells at a store and besides I had some hidden in the barn," Thain told the witness. He said he had been to the Wellman barn and broke the sleighs. He also said he went to the house where he saw the old woman in bed and then to the barn where the old man was milking. Witness had "nothing" against the accused he told Justice MacKay in answer to a query.

Brought Grain to Mill

Robert Fleming, Springbrook miller told the court the slain man had arrived at his mill with a wagon load of grain to be ground into chop at eleven o'clock in the morning of January 29th.

"I think there were fourteen bags on the wagon", Fleming said.

Wellman had left between one and two with the load of ground chop.

"What would be the market price of the grist?"

"About $1.30 per 100 pounds. There would be about 1,100 pounds of grist all told".

A former employee of Arnold Wellman, who worked for him for three weeks, two years ago, Lingham Martin, said he only knew Thain by sight.

Identifies Accused

"Is this Fred Thain sitting here with a smile on his face", said Attorney Snyder indicating the accused.

"Yes", replied Martin.

"You were sentenced to three months in January for obstructing the police, were you not?"

"Yes."

"Did that have anything to do with the murder of Arnold Wellman".

"No, I was in jail in Belleville at the time".

Objection raised by Defence Counsel McCulloch at this point was not upheld by the bench, but the jury were requested to retire.

Resuming, Prosecuting Attorney Snyder asked Martin what conversation had taken place.

"Do you remember me, witness had asked Thain.

"That was an awful thing about Wellman" witness had said. Continuing Martin told the bench he had asked Thain whom he had killed first.

The bench ruling admissibility of this evidence, the jury was recalled. Martin was instructed to relate again his conversation with Thain in the County Jail.

Talked of Wellman Case

"Mr. Thain and I were sitting in the kitchen of the jail. We talked about the Wellman case. I asked him if he went to the barn or house first. He answered 'I went to the barn first, where I knew he was milking. I made a good job of it, for I gave him both barrels.' "

Cross-examined by Counsel McCulloch, Martin said, "Thain did not express any regret. He did not say he was sorry".

Jury Again Retires

Before calling Thomas Sharkey, a further witness, Mr. Snyder told the bench that questions of a similar nature would be asked. He also added he wished to question police officers regarding statements alleged to have been given by Thain.

Mr. Justice Mackay agreed and requested the jury to retire.

Sharkey, requested to tell the court of a conversation with Thain while in jail, admitted he had been convicted on two previous occasions.

"I talked with Thain while I was a prisoner in Belleville jail. He told me he had bought shells at a store near his home.' He said he went to the barn of Arnold Wellman and broke the sleighs there.

"Thain told me," said the witness "that he had gone to the Wellman house and saw the old woman in bed, and then to the barn where he saw the old man. He said he went through some fields where two men were cutting wood. Thain said he had had shells hidden in the Wellman barn besides the ones he bought at the store."

"Have you ever had anything against the accused?" Justice MacKay asked.

"No, my lord."

Mr. Justice MacKay then told counsel that he found statements given by witness were made voluntarily by the accused and of his own accord.

A motion for admissibility of a portion of a statement said to have been made by accused to one in authority, was made by Crown Attorney Snyder.

Statement Given Voluntarily

Sergt. Harry Thompson, called to the stand, told the court that a statement had been taken from Thain by himself and Inspector Ward. Thain was then remanded. Later, witness was called to the county buildings where Constable Everett Smith informed him the accused wished to make a further statement.

Reverting to the first statement at the request of the Bench, His Lordship asked Thompson:

"Did you hold out any inducement, promise or theat?"

"No, my lord."

"Was it given free and voluntarily?"

"Yes, my lord."

Only himself and Inspector Ward were present at the taking of the first statement, but Provincial Constables Smith and Adair were present at the taking of the second statement. The accused had been properly warned in both instances.

"Did you ask him to make the first statement?" Mr McCulloch asked.

"No, sir."

"Did you offer any inducements?"

"No, sir."

Corroboration of evidence given regarding the taking of the first statement was given by Inspector A. L. Ward. Accused had been properly warned and had given the statement voluntarily and signed it in the presence of witness and Sergeant Thompson."

Court Stenographer Present

Former Constable Everett Smith told the court that he and Constable Adair had brought Thain to the county gaol following remand.

Later, Sergeant Thompson arrived and with witness went into anteroom adjoining the cells. Thain and Constable Adair were present, also a court stenographer.

"Constable Adair and myself had conversation with the accused before the arrival of Sergt. Thompson. Thain had been sitting on a bench near the office of the justice of the peace, when he motioned to me," Smith said. "I went to him and he said 'Will you be square?' but I promised him nothing. He then said, 'I did it.' 'Did you murder the old couple?' I asked and he said. 'No. I stole the grain.' Later I asked him if he had anything more to say and he again asked me if I would be square. I told him I could promise him nothing. He then said 'I did it. I murdered the old couple. I shot the old man first and then the old lady.'

"The court stenographer, Edward Follwell, was called and the statement taken from the accused."

"Do I understand the accused had been charged with murder before he gave this statement, and had he been duly warned?" asked the Bench.

"Yes, my lord."

"Did you threaten the accused at any time or hold out any promise, threat or inducement?" asker Crown Attorney Robertson who questioned this witness.

"No," came the reply.

Not Given By Threat Says Judge

Defence Counsel McCulloch argued that the statement produced was a "cross-examination" by Sergt. Harry Thompson and not a statement given by accused. "It is merely a statement of questions and answers," he said.

The Crown argued that the voluntary nature of the statement was such as to warrant its admissibility.

His Lordship in consenting to the admissibility of this evidence stated the Crown has discharged amply the onus placed upon it to the entire satisfaction of the court, that the statement was given in a free and voluntary manner, and not through promise, threat or inducement.

Provincial Constable David Adair corroborated Constable Smith's evidence, and told the court that no threat or inducement had been held out to the accused previous to the taking of the statement.

Edward Follwell, court stenographer, testified to the accuracy of the typewritten statement produced by the Crown. He did not hear at any time, any promise, threat or inducement held out to the accused by anyone present at the time the statement was taken.

Prosecuting Attorney Snyder moved for admissibility of evidence given pertaining to the portion of the second statement given by Thain at this point.

R.A.F. BATTLES,

today and four British planes lost, the Ministry said.

London and other main targets had enjoyed long breathing spells during the night.

While Southeastern England, including the London area, was bearing the brunt of Nazi nighttime assaults, Royal Air Force bombers attacked "a number of targets in Germany, including some in the Berlin area," despite adverse weather conditions, the Air Ministry announced.

Nazis Machine-Gun Streets

A number of persons were killed in German attacks at several points in Eastern and Northeastern England where, a communique said the raiders machine-gunned streets at several places. "Casualties were not numerous," it added.

In two towns in the industrial midlands, incendiary bombs started "many" fires, the communique said, but these were reported quickly extinguished or brought under control. Some houses were reported destroyed, and commercial and other buildings were damaged.

Small Damage in Merseyside

The Nazi raiders also attacked Merseyside, the dock and shipbuilding section of Liverpool. There the damage was described as "small in extent."

The Government revised its figures on yesterday's air battles to bring to 37 the total of German planes shot down, as against seven British planes.

Four R.A.F. pilots were known to have been saved.

Highlight of yesterday air fighting was the performance of a Scottish auxiliary squadron which took only 10 minutes to knock down eight Masserschmitts 109.

The German casualties were increased by their revival of mass-attack methods which they had not used for some time. The Nazis concentrated yesterday's attacks mostly on London and the Portsmouth naval station.

London had four alarms and Portsmouth two.

BRITISH OCCUPY STRATEGIC GREEK ISLANDS

Greeks Stage Successful Counter-Attack North of Ioannina

Big Nazi Naval Base at Emden Bombed by RAF

Grecian Troops Fight to Stem Tide Pounding at North

Italian Offensive Aimed at Industrial City of Ioannina

Athens, Oct. 31.— (AP) — Greek troops were reported today to have counter-attacked north of the town of Ioannina (Janina), and sources regarded as reliable said they had stormed and recaptured a hill.

The Greeks, rushing the hill under heavy fire, were said to have seized large quantities of abandoned arms and equipment from the Italian invaders.

The Ioannina sector, on the western frontier with Albania, still was the scene of the heaviest fighting of the four-day-old war, but there had been little change in the line. Along the rest of the front, the Greeks said the action was limited to Sporadic firing and skirmishes between advance units of the two armies.

Both Italians and Greeks were bombing lines of communication behind the front.

Last night's Greek general staff communique said one Greek fighter plane was lost Wednesday and a later report said an Italian seaplane was shot down over the coast.

Elsewhere, there were no air raid alarms in Greece today up to noon.

Salonika, Greece, Oct. 31.— (AP) —Britain, invoking the power of her Mediterranean fleet, was authoritatively reported today to have landed troops on strategic Greek islands as this little kingdom's hardy mountain men fought to stem Italian troops pounding at her northwest.

For military reasons, the islands where the landings were said to have been made under the big guns of British warships could not be identified by name, it was stated. The number of troops involved and the nature of the equipment they brought with them likewise were undisclosed.

Occupation of the islands, however, presumably would give British forces bases from which to launch aid for their newest ally.

Reports from the warfront 100 miles west of here, meanwhile, indicated the Greeks were continuing to hold their own.

ITALIANS BLAME HEAVY RAINS FOR SLOW PROGRESS

Some Slight Advance Made in One Area to Kalmas River

5 MILES FROM BORDER

Rome, Oct. 31.—(CP)—The Italian High Command claimed today that Italian troops fighting through mud and rain have pushed forward to the Kalamas river in Greece, five miles from the Albanian frontier.

The offensive along the Kalamas River, which parallels the southern end of the Albanian frontier with Greece in the Epirus district, appeared aimed at the industrial city of Ioannina (Janina), about 30 miles from the border.

(An Athens communique said Greek troops on the Epirus front had held their positions all day yesterday after withdrawing from advance posts according to a pre-arranged plan.)

The Italian communique made no mention of any activity on the northern end of the front, where another Fascist column had been reported aiming in the direction of Salonika, 100 miles away on the Greek east coast.

Gen. Le Gentilhomme Among Rescued From 'Empress'

London, Oct. 31 (CP)—General Le Gentilhomme, who commanded the Allied forces in French and British Somaliland at Jibuti until the French-German armistice, was among the passengers rescued from the liner Empress of Britain when she was bombed and sunk by the enemy last Saturday, it was disclosed today.

The General joined the Free French forces of Gen. Charles De Gaulle in London Tuesday.

Gen. Le Gentilhomme apparently was one of the "small number of military personnel" aboard the liner mentioned in the official announcement of the sinking. There were also "a small number of military families" among the 643 persons on board, of whom 598 were rescued.

London's Leicester Square, Dutch Church at Austin Friars Damaged

London, Oct. 31—(CP)—The famous centre court at Wimbledon, where world tennis stars have made sports history, has been damaged by German air raiders.

The damage occurred recently but only today did British authorities permit the fact to be disclosed.

Other famous landmarks damaged in recent air attacks, which officials permitted to be identified today were London's Leicester Square, in the heart of the theatrical district and a short distance from Piccadilly Circus, St. Bartholomew's Medical School, the 17th century Stationers' Hall in Kingsway and the Dutch Church at Austin Friars.

Leicester Square, dating from the latter half of the 17th century, was the site in time past of homes of such historical personages as George II, Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds and John Hunter.

The Dutch Church, not far from the Bank of England in the heart of the city, dates from 1354. It escaped the fire of 1666 but was damaged in a fire in 1862 and later restored.

The church was given by the boy King Edward VI in 1550 to refugees from the Spanish wars.

One of three high explosive bombs dropped in a recent night raid crashed through a stand and tossed debris on the centre court at Wimbledon.

Stationers' Hall, rebuilt in 1670 after the London fire ravaged the original building, was damaged extensively by an incendiary bomb which fell on the lobby of the courtroom.

One of the show places of London, its ceiling bears a representation of St. John the Evangelist. Nothing but charred fragments remained at the north end.

FREIGHTER SUNK BY ENEMY ACTION, 16 MEN RESCUED

Survivors Have Been Landed in the United Kingdom

UNDER CANADA'S FLAG

Vessel, Originally French, Now Operated by Canadian Government Merchant Marine

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP). — Sixteen survivors of the former French freighter St. Malo, sunk by enemy action while flying the Canadian flag, have been landed in the United Kingdom.

Believed lost when the 5,770-ton ship went down are 28 other members of her mostly-Canadian crew, the transport department disclosed yesterday.

Names of the sixteen men rescued were released at Montreal last night by R. B. Teakle, general manager of the Canadian government merchant marine which was operating the freighter.

Officials here said next of kin of the missing men have been notified, but Mr. Teakle did not issue a list of those believed lost when he gave out the survivors' names.

However, a few hours later shipping officials at Halifax disclosed the names of seventeen seamen—at least twelve of them Canadians—who signed on the St. Malo last month and were not listed as rescued by Mr. Teakle.

List of Names.

It was pointed out that some of the men who joined the freighter's crew Sept. 17 before she started for Britain for the last time before her loss may not have sailed with the ship.

Twenty-one names were included in the Halifax list. Only four of them appeared in the survivors' list released at Montreal. Relatives of three others — one Newfoundland man and two Nova Scotians — are known to have been notified they are missing.

One of the names given out at Halifax was that of Capt. Charles E. Finlay, believed from Toronto. He was not listed by Mr. Teakle as being among the survivors

The 17 sailors indicated by the Halifax list to be missing included besides Capt Finlay another Toronto seaman, five Nova Scotians, three Montrealers, two who gave their address merely as "Canada", one each from Scotland, Wales and Newfoundland, and two who have no home address.

BRITISH AMBUSH ITALIANS

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 31 (AP). — A British force ambushed a party of Italians in the Kassala district of the Sudan Monday, a British communique reported today and when the fighting ended fifteen Italians lay dead and six were taken prisoners. The British forces also destroyed two mechanical transport vehicles and suffered no casualties.

134 Soviet Warplanes Arrive at Salonika Says BBC Broadcast

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation quoted a Reuters News Agency dispatch from Salonika today stating that 134 Soviet warplanes have arrived in Greece in the last few days under a recent Soviet-Greek agreement, National Broadcasting Company reported.

The dispatch said the planes, including 45 bombers, were brought by rail through Thrace.

N.B.C. said the B.B.C. also reported the Greek air force delivered its first blow at the Italians yesterday. Greek planes, sweeping low, turned their machine-guns on Italian troops and broke up a force brought up as a reinforcement near the Albanian border, B.B.C. said.

Tass Denies Story

Moscow (AP)—Tass, the Soviet News Agency, today termed a report that Soviet airplanes had reached Greece "a fantasy."

Tass circulated this communique: "The Reuters Agency is circulating a report printed in the New York Times alleging that some 120 or 150 military airplanes have arrived in Greece from the Soviet Union in the past few days. Tass is authorized to state that this Reuters report is throughout a product of the fantasy of its authors and does not correspond to the facts in any extent whatsoever."

Greeks Believe They Can Hold Italians Alone

Ankara, Turkey, Oct. 31 —(AP)— Semi-official sources in Ankara asserted today Greece has informed the Turkish government she can resist Italian pressure alone.

These sources declared Turkey would enter the war only "in case of a Bulgarian attack on Greece or if Turkey's national interests are endangered."

However, Turkey cannot remain disinterested in developments in the eastern Mediterranean, they said, and has informed the Athens government she will give Greece every help possible, even if she does not enter the war.

The official Turkish radio, in a discussion of the Greek campaign, said Italy is facing an important test of her military prestige and thus far has not "shown up brilliantly."

The announcer declared that the best way for Britain to aid Greece was by bombing Italian air bases, protecting Greece against air attacks and also "attacking Italian cities, including Rome."

"Sensitive" to Air Raids

The announcer said the "Italians seem especially sensitive" to air raids.

The radio asserted that Italy apparently had attacked Greece independently of Germany as a matter of prestige.

"While Hitler was trying to mediate between France and Italy," it said, "Italy suddenly attacked Greece in an effort to prove to Germany that Italy can act on her own iniative.

"Italy also wants what territory she can occupy in Greece to make sure she will be rewarded for her efforts in the war at the side of Germany."

The commentator predicted that the Italians would try to retain Salonika if they were able to seize that vital Aegean port.

JAPS' CAMPAIGN AROUND NANNING COSTS 74,000

Illness Responsible for Greatest Havoc Among the Troops

CHINESE TAKE NANNING

Chungking, Oct. 31 (AP)—The Central (Chinese) News Agency reported today that the Japanese campaign centring around Nanning in Kwangsi Province had cost the invaders 74,000 men through death, injury or illness.

The Japanese were estimated to have employed about 114,000 troops in the operations. Kwangsi is notorious for its epidemics, and illness was said to have been responsible for the greatest havoc among the Japanese forces.

Japan's gains have in no way matched the cost of the Kwangsi campaign, the Agency said, especially now that her troops have withdrawn from Nanning, an action hailed here as "a heavy blow" to Japanese prestige.

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP). — Gloom spread deeper over thirty Canadian homes today as search continued for the missing auxiliary mine-sweeper Bras d'Or. But happiness reigned in another which felt short-lived grief following disclosure the Canadian destroyer Margaree had been lost.

There still was no trace of the Bras d'Or, missing with Lieut. C. A. Hornby of Halifax and 29 others, and aircraft and ships hunted the turbulent Gulf of St. Lawrence for some indication of her fate.

Meantime, Mrs. Mary R. Millan of Victoria received news from navy headquarters that her husband, Ab. F. Millan, was not lost when the Margaree, under Cmdr. J. R. Roy of

NAZIS RACE HOME IN FACE OF HEAVY ACK ACK FIRE

Plane After Plane Trying to Reach London Jettison Bombs in Sea and Recross Channel

DAMAGE SLIGHT

Nine German Planes Shot Down in Wednesday's Fighting

London, Oct. 31 —(CP)— A lone German air raider opening the daylight attack on England today dived within a few hundred feet of the ground to drop high explosive bombs on a southeast inland town.

Shops and offices were demolished and a number of casualties caused.

Rescue and demolition squads sped to the scene to search for possible victims buried in the debris as the raider flew away into low-lying clouds which had covered his approach.

Later it was announced that a small number of persons were killed.

A government communique issued shortly after noon said there had been little air activity over England during the morning.

The 54th successive night of German air raiding on London tapered off into complete silence early today and although 47 districts of England were bombed, the night's attacks were described as among the lightest since the aerial war began.

Anti-aircraft guns roared up and down "Hell's Corners — from the southeast coast to the capital—in one of the most intense barrages yet thrown up and Kent villagers reported that plane after plane jettisoned bombs into the sea in the face of the fire and raced back across the channel.

The government said the night's attacks were confined mainly to "the London area and eastern and southern England, though some bombs were also dropped on the midlands. Damage as a whole was slight and casualties were few."

In spite of adverse weather conditions, the Air Ministry said, R.A.F. bombers ranged over the Channel again, attacking "Channel ports and communications in western Germany."

In the German night raids the Merseyside shipping area of Liverpool was reported hit hard, while other attackers struck at East Anglia and the southeast coast.

The Air Ministry said nine German planes were shot down yesterday, to five British.

A West Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 31 (CP).—Another addition to the rapidly growing Royal Canadian Navy was launched here yesterday when a Corvette-type vessel slid down the ways. The craft was christened by Mrs. W. J. Beach, wife of Commodore Beech, R.C.N.

POLICE NOW EMBARRASSED

Richmond, Va., Oct. 31—(AP)—William Jordan, a messenger boy, was just getting around to congratulating the police department for recovering his bicycle so promptly—even if it was stolen from in front of police headquarters—when it was stolen again, from in front of the headquarters, too.

Almost 70 P. C. London Children In Hard-Hit Areas Are Removed

London, Oct. 31 —(CP)— Health Minister Malcolm Macdonald announced today that almost 70 per cent of London's children in areas hard-hit by German raiders had been removed to the country.

All told, 563,000 children have been removed from "evacuation areas" in the whole London region to safer places, Mr. Macdonald said, leaving some 279,000 still to be transferred.

The Health Minister also announced efforts to speed up the removal. Special visitors are being sent to parents in the poorer districts, which are among the hardest hit, he said, to explain the plan personally.

Many Explosions Follow RAF Raid On Ostend Harbor

British Squadrons Fly Up Belgian and Dutch Coast to German North Shore, Blast Docks

London, Oct. 31—(CP)—The Air Ministry announced today that Royal Air force bombers scored many hits overnight on docks and ships berths in the invasion harbor of Ostend, which the Germans had repaired following earlier bombings.

Pilots reported the targets were bombed "freely" and that there was a heavy explosion after every second bomb burst. Debris was thrown high in the air, the Ministry said.

The R.A.F. squadrons flew straight up the Belgian and Netherlands coast to the German North Sea shore blasting at docks in Antwerp and Flushing and attacking the big German naval base at Emden, in Germany proper.

Bombs Dropped Among Four Nazi Torpedo Boats.

Cherbourg was reported to have been attacked in daylight operations yesterday, and the Air Ministry News Service said dockside buildings were hit and a heavy salvo of bombs dropped among four torpedo boats cruising about 20 miles offshore.

One German plane was said to have been shot down, and one British plane failed to return.

The R.A.F. also attacked German-held Channel ports and communications in western Germany in the night, the Ministry said, in spite of adverse weather.

BLOWN INTO SEA SAYS 1ST OFFICER

W. J. Lewis on Bridge of Freighter When Torpedoed by German Submarine

Montreal, Oct. 31 (CP).—William John Lewis, First Officer of a British freighter destroyed recently by a German submarine, lay in his public ward bed in hospital Wednesday and told how an enemy torpedo struck his ship and "blew the midships into the sky" as he stood on the bridge.

Lewis is recovering from serious wounds and burns to his face and arms suffered when he was "blown into the sea" along with his most prized belongings—his sextant and uniform.

The young officer said other officers of the vessel, the Tuskbridge, were with him on the bridge when the torpedo struck several miles off the Irish coast, but they were not among the five crew members who reached Canada with him on another ship or the twenty-one who, he learned Tuesday, are safe in Bermuda.

JURY RETIRES IN THAIN CASE AT 1.30 TODAY

Justice MacKay Defines Grounds on Which Verdict Can be Brought in

COUNSEL HEARD

"There are three verdicts you can bring in. The first is "guilty", the second "not guilty" and the third "not guilty on ground of insanity". I must draw to your attention the fact that there was not one witness called by the Crown or the defence who said the accused was insane at the time the crime was committed," Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay, presiding judge at the Thain murder trial, said today in his final charge to the jury. "A verdict of manslaughter cannot be entertained in this case," he added.

The Crown and the defence counsels closed their cases last night. This morning Assistant Attorney-General C. L. Snyder and Defence Counsel Robert D. McCulloch delivered their addresses to the jury prior to the charge from the bench.

The jury retired at 1.30 p.m. today.

Defence Counsel McCulloch was the first to deliver his address. In it he pointed out the improbability of the theft of the grain as a motive fo rthe crime. "People do not go around committing murder for the sum of $14.30, the value of the grain mentioned," he said.

Mr. Snyder in his address, pointed out the ruthlessness of the killings. All evidence, he said, pointed to a brutal murder and indicating the accused, "You are to find out if this man did it."

GROTTO TAXI LOSES BUMPER

A taxi owned by the Grotto Taxi Service lost a bumper this morning when it was side-swiped by a horse-drawn milk delivery wagon. The taxi was parked on Front St. when a delivery wagon owned by the Walmuir Dairy and driven by Harry Mulvey, in passing too closely hooked onto the front bumper of the Grotto vehicle and tore it away. Damages were settled amicably between the parties.

FARMERS WELCOME DOWNFALL OF RAIN

Wednesday's all - day drizzle, which in sections amounted to a considerable downfall of rain, was welcomed by district farmers who have not yet completed their fall plowing. Such operations have been considerably retarded, farmers claim, owing to the fact that the ground has in many cases been too hard to work and doubts were beginning to be expressed whether they would get their plowing done before the fall freeze-up.

CHARGES REDUCED BY GRAND JURY

The Hastings County Grand Jury yesterday returned a no bill in the charges of manslaughter against Edwin A. Kellaway and Hubert Herrington, both of Belleville. They brought in a true bill of dangerous driving in a joint indictment. The charges arose from a motor accident near Millbridge on August 17 in which Mrs. Jessie Allore of Trenton, was killed.

LICENCE PLATES ON SALE NOV. 12

Automobile and truck permits and license plates for 1941 will be placed on sale on Tuesday, November 12th, more than one month and a half before the 1940 markers expire, according to Mr. Vermilyea, local issuer of motor vehicle licenses.

Department officials have recalled the warning of Premier Hepburn last February in his budget address that the government would refuse to grant extension of time for the securing of 1941 plates. At that time he said that henceforth licenses and permits were good for the calendar year only. It is expected however that the usual fifteen day extension will be granted.

The decision of the government to put licenses on sale at an earlier date than was first announced was the result of intending purchasers of new vehicles, particularly new motor trucks, many of which were required immediately for the transportation of war materials, asking for the earlier release date. In addition it was pointed out that the new models of both cars and trucks were now on the market and immediate delivery would be made of such new equipment if the 1941 plates were released.

County Court

Owing to the absence of Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson, who is engaged in the assistance of the prosecution at the current sitting of the Supreme Court of Ontario here, no criminal cases were heard at the weekly sitting at County Police Court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the Court House today. Several pleas of guilty were accepted by the court following charges of violations of the Highway Traffic Act. however.

Ernest Potter, Sidney Township farmer, admitted violation of the Improvements Act, when he permitted cattle to wander at large upon a public highway. The charge was preferred by Motorcycle Patrolman J. J. Hatch following an accident near the Potter home on the Trent Road, when a motor car collided with a cow. A fine of $7.50 and costs were paid.

L. E. Grills paid a similar amount after pleading guilty to failing to stop at a designated stop highway intersection, contrary to Section 39-3 of the H.T.A., while Irvine McFarland was assessed $7.50 for illegal parking on the Highway.

Richard Ewing, Toronto and Thomas Van Zalkenburg, Thurlow, appeared on charges of theft, preferred by Provincial Constable J. G. Burton. Owing to the absence of Crown Attorney Robertson the accused men were remanded in custody. Detective Fred Isard of the City Police Department, also held a charge against Ewing, accusing him of obtaining silverware by fraud. The goods have been recovered and the latter charge will be heard in a subsequent court.

Other cases listed for trial were adjourned for one week.

NOTICE
Daylight Delivery of Milk

Commencing Friday November 1st., all milk deliveries will be some hours later, in accordance with the City by-law no milk shall be delivered before 6.30 A. M. Please assist your dairy to make this change in delivery service by purchasing extra milk Thursday.

Due to present conditions the dairies have lost several men and have been under additional expense for supplies the past year, the public can greatly assist us to keep the price of milk at the present level if they will co-operate with us in the following manner.

Purchase your daily supply from the wagon. We lose money on special delivery orders and are considering the necessity of making an extra charge for this service.

Return all bottles promptly, they cost us an average price of 8c each at present, and a great number are put in the garbage daily. 75% of our bottle loss is due to carelessness. It cost the local dairies over $4000.00 to replace the lost or stolen bottles this year. Unless we get them back we will certainly have to charge for them in the near future.

If at all possible pay your milkman in the morning when he is calling with the milk, these men work several hours extra each week calling back for the money, this will not be necessary after the 1st. of the month.

We the undersigned dairies will appreciate the co-operation of the public and in return will try to keep milk at the present price.

NOW TOM MIX BOULEVARD

Hollywood, Oct. 31 (AP)—Filmland's most photographed "Western" Street is now named "Tom Mix Boulevard" in memory of the circus and motion picture horseman. Built in 1916 and lined for two blocks with shabby - looking imitation movie-fronted grovery stores, saloons, livery stables and offices of country doctors and lawyers, the unpaved roadway since has been the scene of more thriller action, humor and pathos than perhaps any other "Street" in Hollywood.

LODGE HONORS C.N. ENGINEMEN RECENTLY RETIRED

Banquet Held in Engineer's Hall on Pine Street on Wednesday Evening

With the conventional dignity and pomp that has characterised all previous like occasions, four retired locomotive engineers from the Canadian National Railways were honored by their fellow members and presented with the conventional initialed and gold-headed canes at the Engineers' Hall, Pine St., last evening when they were guests of Division 189 of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The four retired engineers were Messrs. W. White, W. A. Morgan, Thomas B. Hallam and William Young.

Following a delightful banquet and program, Mr. A. B. Saunders, divisional master mechanic of the C.N.R., presented the retired engineers honored with their canes, suitable replies being made in all respective incidents. Chairman R. Muirhead respectfully asked the members to observe one minute of silence in honor of departed members.

Chief Engineer George Nayler introduced Mr. Saunders, while the transportation division of the Canadian National Railways was represented by Superintendent O. W. Duff and Chief Dispatcher Lionel Train and the motive power division by Albert Jones and A. B. Saunders. Following the banquet the excess amount of cakes were offered for sale and the sum of $10, realized for the cigarette fund for the C.N.R. boys now overseas. The conventional toasts were proposed and responded to in the genial manner that is customary at such functions.

The committee in charge of the banquet and presentation was composed of Messrs. Sam Cherrie, T. C. Wilson, V. Morton, R. Muirhead, Geo. Nayler, H. Leavitt, W. Gardner and Wilf Graham. The door prize, a pen and pencil set donated by McFee's, was won by W. K. Kerr, 286 Bleecker Ave.

ROBT. H. GREENLEY DIES OF INJURIES

Percy Township Farmer Struck Down by Alleged Hit-and-Run Driver — Three Youths Now Held

Robert H. Greenley, 35-year-old Warkworth farmer, died in the Belleville General Hospital late yesterday. Young Greenley was found lying alongside of the road near his home early Sunday morning last after allegedly having been struck by a hit-and-run motorist. During the accident his 66-year-old father, William Greenley, sustained fatal injuries. No inquest is necessary in the cases as criminal charges have been preferred, police authorities revealed today.

Following the fatal accident on Sunday Provincial Police arrested John Kemp, Stewart McCubbin and Gordon Beggs, three Percy Township farm lads, all neighbours of the Greenley family. The trio was held on charges surrounding the fatal accident, O.P.P. authorities at Cobourg announced on Monday. The younger Greenley sustained a punctured lung and kidneys and was suffering from serious internal injuries when found lying on the roadside by his brother Lawrence, shortly before 1 a.m. Sunday. The two Greenleys were walking home from Warkworth and were within sight of their home, when they were struck down by a motor car, in which the three lads held in custody, are said to have been riding.

Wild Geese Plentiful At Point Traverse

South Bay, Oct. 31.—Sixty-one years ago today, October 31, 1879, Moses Dulmage, 22, son of Philip Dulmage of this vicinity, lost his life tragically.

Many sailing vessels were lying at anchor off Point Traverse out of a biting northwest gale. Attempting to return to his vessel Julia from the schooner Oliva, Mr. Dulmage missed his ship. The night was bitter cold. His body, lashed to the seat of his tiny yawlboat, was recovered by the Stony Point lighthouse tender, forty miles from Point Traverse.

Bags Wild Geese

Residents here report the flights of several flocks of Canada wild geese over this district. Mr. Henry Istead, local farmhand, bagged two of the wily fowl on a neighbor's farm. Seeking haven at the Point Traverse harbor, John Howard, local fisherman, shot also two of the rare birds that alighted there. Flocks of geese heading south denotes a quick freeze-up in the far north, hunters say.

Trout Seen to Spawn

Lake trout will shortly be leaving the deep waters for shoals to spawn. Annually the trout seek shore waters at this time and will return to the lake after the spawning season is over. Veteran fishermen tell of many large catches of lake trout being taken during the spawning of many years ago.

Historical Notes

Oct. 31, 1870—The sloop of war, Ontario, was lost on Lake Ontario with 24 men of the 34th Regiment.

21 Years Ago Today, Oct. 31, 1919—The steamer W. J. Carter went ashore on Yorkshire Island, off the Main Duck island.

News Briefs

Commercial fishermen report that shad are numerous in deep water and are infesting their ciscoe nets.

Material is arriving and it is expected work will commence shortly on the towers to be erected at Point Traverse where bombing range sites are to be placed.

Cooking Classes Enjoyed by Large Number of Belleville Homemakers

Sessions Held in St. Andrew's Church Hall

Knitting needles clicked an accompaniment to the words of the director of the Moffat Cooking School opening in St. Andrew's Church hall yesterday afternoon as Red Cross-minded women continued their knitting while listening to words of cooking wisdom from Miss Edithemma Muir, home economist of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

The hall was filled to capacity and an enthusiastic audience greeted Miss Muir who was introduced by Mr. Everett Smith of the Belleville Public Utilities. Mr. Smith, in welcoming the women present, stressed the fact that the cooking schools were planned to give homemakers who are cooking electrically all possible instruction to enable them to get the best and most economical cooking from their range. Fine cooking is a matter of mixing the proper ingredients properly and cooking them properly. The director of the Cooking School would demonstrate these principles of the art of cookery. The school was held under the auspices of the Women's Guild of St. Andrew's Church.

Miss Muir, who was assisted by Miss Kathleen Crerar, commented on the fine contribution Canadian women are making to the nation's war effort in knitting. One million women are knitting and every woman doing her bit is sharing in this great effort. Electric cookery plays its part in this scheme of things, as it permits of greater leisure.

Cooking For Health

Miss Muir stressed the fact that women are entrusted with the well-being of the nation, providing as they do the three daily meals which mean health or disability. Today more than ever homemakers realize their responsibility as the backline of defence by serving balanced and economical menus.

Yesterday afternoon's demonstration included the preparation of a Canadian Syrup Cake, Sponge Layer Cake with quick icing, Tea Cookies, Red Cross Toasted Squares, Butterscotch Tarts, Brownies, and other delicacies.

Miss Muir advocated the use of lard rather than shortening in the present economic circumstances. The use of lard aided local agriculturists, while the ingredients in vegetable shortening have to be imported. Discussing the conserving and preserving of foods which women today should be most familiar with, Miss Muir reminded her hearers that if a critical period arose the most important foods to be stored are milk, in powdered form; eggs, instruction for storing which should be obtained from the Department of Agriculture; and whole cereals. Tomato juice and grapefruit juice, of domestic origin should be substituted for imported oranges.

Prizes Awarded

With charm of manner, Miss Muir talked over informally the many problems which confront even the most experienced cook and gave innumerable hints to help beginners, as well. Miss Muir also discussed the important features of electric cooking and refrigeration. The results of her demonstration formed a most appetizing display of delicacies and these were included in the many lovely attendance prizes presented to the following:

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, What's the joke, Willyum?

Meaning on account of pop starting to laugh out loud to himself, and pop said, A chap I was having lunch with today got off a good one. We got on the subject of cigars and this chap said, The safest 5 cent cigar is a pipe, pop said.

Well, go on, ma said, and pop said, I've gone on, that's it. The safest 5 cent cigar is a pipe, that's a rich one, he said.

The safest 5 cent cigar is a pipe, do you mean to seriously say there's anything funny in that? ma said, and pop said, I'll take a sollem oath that it's a wise crack of the first magnitude.

Then if you say it backwards it ought to be still funnier, the safest 5 cent pipe is a cigar, ma said, and pop said, Now that just doesn't make sense.

Well for land sakes now you claim it actually makes sense, ma said. Very well, I'm broadminded, the safest 5 cent cigar is a pipe, now where does the sense come in? she said, and pop said, The idea is this. You can always depend on a pipe because you know what you're putting in it, but when it comes to 5 cent cigars you may draw a fair smoke or you may draw a fragment of rope. Isn't that sense? he said.

It still doesn't make a pipe out of a cigar of any price, ma said. The safest hat is a pair of shoes, that sounds even funnier to me, why dont you laugh at that? she said, and pop said, Why dont you?

Because it's still not funny enough, ma said, and pop said, Maybe it would get over better if you pulled your ears out sideways when you said it.

Now you're simply getting childish, ma said, and pop got in back of the sporting page making the argument end in ma's favor.

NOT TOO BUSY TO BE COURTEOUS

At different times we have heard it mentioned that the more important a position a man holds the more approachable he is. We do not know how true this may be be although we suspect there are some busy men who are not so approachable for one reason or another.

Apropos of this a small group of business men from the city, one day this week, had the pleasure of a tour through the Trenton Air Station and the officer who acted as guide and informant was Commanding Officer, Group Captain John A. Sully.

We can hardly imagine any business executive having a more responsible task than the C. O. of the largest air station in Canada and yet he took time off from his busy duties to see that his visitors were able to make a comprehensive inspection of the premises.

We do not wish to go into a detailed description of what was seen but we do wish to say that orderliness and cleanliness were predomininate in all sections of the buildings and grounds.

One thing that impressed the visitors was the evident concern of the C. O. over the welfare and comfort of the men. In one recreation room, through which the group passed, the air needed changing. In an unobtrusive manner Group Captain Sully stepped over to the man in charge and asked him in a low voice to have the windows opened "before the men come in." That was all, but the kindly thought and act gave one an insight into the character of this fine gentleman. His pleasant manner with the men and his avoidance of all show of authority confirm the expressions of opinion from the personnel of the air station along with others who have come in contact with him that Group Captain Sully is one of the finest officers ever to be in command at Trenton.

So long as the training of Canada's and the Empire's airmen is left in the hands of men of the calibre and efficiency of Group Captain Sully then we may be confident that the task in hand will be well and truly done.

FREEDOM AND STRENGTH

President Roosevelt in opening the draft lottery for the military training of young Americans for defence stated in a few words the fact which has been made so apparent by the course of events of the past fourteen months and the years just preceding. He said:

> "In the present world the survival of liberty and justice is dependent on strength to defend against attack.
> "Recent history proves all too clearly that only the strong may continue to live in freedom and peace."

This is the lesson which is being taught the world, one which will not soon be forgotten by the democratic nations who have been lovers of peace.

These words of Mr. Roosevelt sum up the thought of men universally today after the exhibition which Germany has given of the havoc a nation can cause and the menace it can bring to bear upon civilization, security and peace when it goes mad in the abuse of power. A glance around the world shows what has happened weaker nations on which the foul breath of Nazi Germany was breathed.

The reaction of the United States to the situation which has developed in Europe and latterly in Asia is seen in the stressing of preparedness by training in military science the men of the country to be a strong defence. It has been shown in the sympathy of the people of the United States for the democratic British nation and Empire as manifested in the flow of war material from American plants to Britain, in the goodwill of the people of the Republic and the large numbers of young Americans who have joined the British and Canadian forces.

The nation must be strong. It is realized that the hope of the world is in Britain's strength and in her invincible spirit.

NAZIS TRAINED TO HIDE TRUTH

The Nazi mind and the British mind are worlds apart. The German believes in hiding the truth lest the truth stir up unrest among the people. The British tell the people the truth not only for truth's sake but because the truth will stimulate them and strengthen their resolve for victory.

Hitler becomes a byword to the world at large as a liar, a cheat and a deceiver as well as everything that can be summed up in the words "international gangster." In Germany he has yet to be known as he is.

The world takes the word of the British. Truth pays.

German aviators recently captured did not know that Berlin war targets had been bombed. Every sort of trick is used to prevent knowledge of losses as Nazi planes start out from one base and after reconnaissance or action are to report at another base. The result is that the Germans do not know what has transpired and what losses are sustained.

Nazism is deception, it is something that dare not face the light of truth.

DICTATORS MUST KEEP BUSY

Events are moving swiftly—for dictatorships have to move quickly because they have not long to live. Their course is a brief one as far as history goes.

Hitler and Mussilini have to war against time. Hitler cannot spend too much time trying to batter down the British resistance. He has to do something which will make a showing. So he takes a hand in the game along the Mediterranean. What he will do as he has got Italy's little dictator involved in a struggle with Greece is not clear. Germans in Berlin heard rumors that Hitler is planning to send Germans into Spain and try an assault on Gibraltar but these stories are not confirmed. Hitler has not openly taken a hand in the Greek situation but everyone knows where he is.

Having placed a burden on Italy's shoulders, he may let the Italian leader show what he is made of as far as mettle is concerned. Hitler and his staff, including his chief of staff, Keitel, have surely had a hand in the thrust against Greece with Mussolini on the spot. Whether he is going to make an attempt in Spain or in one of the Balkan countries or watch events, time will have to show. But he cannot be idle.

Smash Enemy Partners Now

Mr. Robert Hale, a partner in the law firm of Verrill, Hale, Dana and Walker of Portland, Maine, has written an open letter to President Roosevelt in which he makes the point that the place for the United States to stop Hitler and his allies is in Europe, Asia and Africa, and not in the Americas. The letter, as published in the Portland Press Herald, follows:

Dear Mr. Roosevelt:

The newly announced triple alliance of Italy, Germany and Japan so manifestly aimed at the United States should disabuse the mind of any American who believes that we can appease these powers. Their "new order" for the world would be a completely intolerable order for us. When an individual's conduct is perilously unsocial he is locked up. We cannot indefinitely ignore unsocial conduct on an international scale.

I hope that there will now be universal recognition of the fact that the time to stop Hitler is now, and that the place to stop him is in Europe, Asia and Africa and not in either of the Americas. Likewise the time to stop this arrogant militaristic Japan is now and the place to stop it is in Asia and on the far side of the Pacific.

It is true that we expect to be a more formidable military power two or three years hence than we are now. But Germany and Japan may be ten times more powerful then. We now have England and China for allies. Two or three or five years hence we may stand alone. England and China can be powerful allies today if we can support them actively. We cannot figure that time is moving with us. It may well be moving against us.

If we are to defend America against our enemies, let us do it now with all the strength at our command, actively not passively. Japan is in a highly vulnerable situation. Italy is an ill-used vassal of the Nazis. And Hitler, with all his magnificent military machine and military equipment has fatal defects in his situation if they are intelligently exploited by us with England.

The American Navy, including its air force, is reputed to be second to none. I wish to urge the immediate and vigorous employment of our Navy against Japan in such a manner as to cause the collapse of Japanese power to terms we can use our fleet in the Atlantic, where it is needed.

It seems to me that we should immediately send some ships to Singapore,—how many I don't pretent to know. We should attack and destroy the Japanese fleet with or without warning if occasion offers and, if necessary, destroy the leading Japanese cities as Japan has destroyed Chinese cities. This is the only answer to the triple alliance. It is a practicable and humane answer which would give prospect of a generation of peace. It would cost less in dollars than the years of frantic preparation with a dubious outcome which form the only alternative. It would cost only a small part of the alternative in blood and tears which are now the only established medium of foreign exchange.

By such an aggressive program we may escape defeat which is the only consequence of an isolationist program and the program of the people who deplore the "drift of war." It is the isolationists who are "drifting to war" and they don't know it. We are at a moment in our history when our only caution lies in boldness, and our rashest course is to be slow and timid.

If we follow the program above outlined we shall know where we are going and we shall reach our destination, which is national safety. This program should not interfere with aid to Britain but would implement it. Let us by all odds give England some flying fortresses, speed to her planes without number and add anything else that we can.

The American people will stand behind their Government in this program It is the only program under which we can unite our people and run down the traitors and the Hitler Fifth Column. Under this program we shall arm in earnest. We are not arming in earnest now. The advisory commission lacks executive authority and a responsible head. The practical veto now exercised by the Labor Board on defence contracts makes a serious-minded attempt to defend the country impossible.

If as a by-product of this policy we achieve some more or less permanent association with the British Commonwealth of Nations, so much the better. The English-speaking countries must hang together or hang separately. Why must we leaves the initiative to Hitler and his accomplices?

ROBERT HALE.

WHAT CHINA NEEDS

By Lin Yutang, well-known Chinese-American writer in the New York Times.

By the law of common sense, China, which has fought a first-class world power to a stalemate in the last three years, automatically becomes a first-class world power herself.

We are fighting a curious war in China, without an adequate air force, artillery and tanks, but we are fighting successfully against an enemy who has all those things, and that is the thing that counts.

Aiding China will yet prove the cheapest way of defending the Pacific for America. For the price of three modern battleships, given to China in the form of fighting and bombing 'planes, China could wage a war against Japan on a 2,000-mile front for years and effectively weaken, exhaust and defeat her, until a war between the United States and Japan became impossible because unnecessary. Spend on aid to China 5 percent. of what America is spending on the naval building program and you will have the mere phantom of that former great Japan to reckon with in that Pacific struggle.

What China needs to defeat Japan is very little. Fighting Japan in China is ridiculously cheap. China wants only 250 millions dollars, in my estimate, for the entire duration of the war and for accomplishing the purpose of crippling Japan. That is no more than the price of three modern battleships.

China does not need food. After three years of blockade on the seacoast, we never hear of rations in Free China, except in regard to gasoline for motor transportation. Remember, China blockaded herself with rations for 3,000 years before the Japanese started blockading her.

China does not need small-arms ammunition, which she can manufacture herself from raw material to finish products. China does not need man power or American soldiers to fight for her. Conscription in China has not even begun to touch the average family, and man power is as inexhaustible as ever. That is why China has refused all peace offers and is prepared to go on fighting until every Japanese soldier leaves Chinese soil.

China needs only airplanes, oil and medicine. The sum of 250 million dollars will give us 1,500 bombers or 750 bombers and 2,250 fighting planes, and we will furnish the pilots. With a rehabilitated air force, China need not fight under the tremendous handicap of enemy control of the air with spotting of army concentrations and bombing of civilians.

China may not even need all those 'planes, progressively delivered in the course of years. What China needs, and Japan fears above all, is the full pledge of American assistance to see China through the war, and the moral effect this will have upon both China and Japan.

Odd Tricks Played By Bombs

Like the tornadoes and hurricanes which periodically hit the United States—uprooting giant trees but leaving saplings untouched, hurling one man to his death but ignoring the child standing at his side—the high explosives falling on Great Britain these days do their work in capricious style. Every Englishman nowadays has a tale to tell, and the stories of narrow escapes from death are legion.

In Hampstead a man brought his car to a stop, turned off the engine, pocketed the key and stepped out. He was about to shut the door when a bomb dropped a short way down the street, blew him back into the driver's seat and slammed the door shut after him. Neither he nor the car was injured by the blast.

In a large town in Southwest England a bomb fell outside a house on the second floor of which was sleeping a nineteen-year-old girl. The explosion sucked off a wall and deposited the bed and the sleeper neatly tucked in her bedclothes, right side up in a pile of rubble.

A motor car was pitched on to the roof of a house. A perambulator also was found on a roof after a recent raid. Some time ago, an explosion propelled the forward end of a yellow bus into the air and against the wall of a house, where it rested like a great dog stretching.

When a bomb landed in a street outside one of London's American bookshops, the explosion tore the front out of the building and scattered current best sellers over a wide area. One of the volumes, the title of which was not revealed, was flung to the top of the Civil Service stores, 100 yards distant.

An explosion in Central London sucked a taxi into the crater without breaking any of its windows. Another taxi was hoisted to the top of a ten-foot fence, where it hung precariously. When the dust cleared away, the driver, who had been asleep in the rear seat, climbed out unhurt.

The effects of a blast of high explosive are incalculable and often inexplicable. Sometimes a bomb bursts in the street without breaking a single pane of glass in the neighborhood. At other times, whole acres of windows are blown into houses or drawn into the street. Once a blast cleared out the glass in its immediate vicinity, left intact store fronts sixty yards down the street and ripped out every window in the building just beyond.

In many cases houses have crumbled, leaving a single wall on which all the pictures remained hanging. On a narrow mantlepiece which clings to the sole remaining face of one stricken London dwelling a clock is still ticking. A dressing table perched on a piece of flooring high above the wreckage of what remains of another house shows an imposing array of perfume bottles, lined up neatly between two unbroken Dresden statuettes.—London writer of the N. Y. Herald Tribune.

Early Signs of Hard of Hearing

It is very gratifying to see the great improvement in hearing aids so that many hard of hearing individuals are now able to take their place in offices, factories, and stores, no longer handicapped by inability to hear ordinary conversation.

While hard of hearing runs in some families, there is no real reason why a youngster whose parent or parents are hard of hearing should be so afflicted. A number of children because their parents are hard of hearing are not given any attention or treatment when they show early signs of hard of hearing. Early treatment for these early signs of deficient hearing might save what hearing is present or even increase or improve it.

Following some children's diseases such as scarlet fever, measles, and others in which the nose and throat are affected, some loss of hearing may be detected if parents and teachers are on the lookout for it. Some of the cases of apparent inattention at home and at school are due to just a slight loss of hearing. I know one boy who received lickings from his parents and schoolteacher for his inattention before the parents and teacher discovered the loss of hearing at about the same time. The child himself doesn't realize that there is any loss of hearing. Should other symptoms be present and investigated, the loss of hearing may thus be discovered.

Symptoms that point to loss of hearing are:

The child (or adult) will ask to have teacher or parent repeat a question or statement that has been made to them.

Head noises such as buzzing or ringing in the ears or in the head.

Dull or heavy feeling in the ears or in the head.

Pain or tenderness in or about the ear. Tired feeling in class or elsewhere from trying to hear the teacher or parent. This causes tenseness of mind and body and child is tired and looks it before the class is over.

Making mistakes in answering questions because words were not heard distinctly.

Should lack of hearing or other ear disturbance be discovered the family physician should be consulted. If the trouble is due to some general condition, he will try to correct it. If due to some definite condition in the ear itself, he will refer the patient to an ear specialist.

HAYLESS SWEDES

GOOD SAMARITANS

The 1940-41 cotton crop for North Brazil has been officially estimated at 716,000,478 - pound bales, 86,000 bales larger than the last crop.

RECALLS THRILL OF FIRST TRIPS IN ENEMY'S AIR

Canadian Pilot in the R. A. F. Tells of Adventures in Bombing of German-Held Centres in Europe

London, Oct. 31—(CP)— Two hundred hours flying over enemy territory in little more than three months is the record of a 21-year-old Canadian pilot officer who has packed so much adventure into that short period—and won the Distinguished Flying Cross—that he finds it difficult to decide which was the most exciting trip.

He joined the Royal Air Force two years ago and one night in June undertook his first operation flight as navigator and second pilot.

"I don't think I shall ever forget that first trip," he said. "Our target was supply trains and railway lines south of Liege.

"As this was to be my baptism of fire the pilot wanted to let me down gently, so he kept the aircraft fairly high. My first impression of the 'ack-ack' was that it was pretty. It didn't strike me then that it was even dangerous and I persuaded the pilot to go down a bit lower. I told him this would give me a better opportunity to aim my bombs properly.

"The bombs hit the target fair and square and large pieces of twisted metal were thrown high into the air. The track for many yards was completely wrecked.

Out of Tail Spin

"This first journey was soon followed by 15 others and on each of these trips I was second pilot and navigator. On one occasion, just before we made our bombings, the pilot turned too quickly and we found ourselves in a spin. At the time we were only 800 feet up and had our bomb doors open ready to make our attack.

"I rushed from my perch in the nose to the centre of the aircaft and unfused the bombs. We were then only a few feet above the tree tops but the pilot managed to regain control in time.

"We then flew back to our target, whilst I fused the bombs again, and I am glad to say that after that almost spiral dive we had the pleasure of seeing some more railway lines blown sky high."

Other operations in which this pilot has taken part were against enemy shipping, oil refineries, aircraft factories, channel ports and objectives in Berlin and Strettin.

Twice he has had to abandon his aircraft over the North Sea, but on both occasions no lives were lost. The second "dip in the sea" occurred during a return flight from Stettin. The bomber came down half a mile from the coast and within 200 yards of a friendly minesweeper which picked up the crew and brought them safetly to port.

"Then we were attacking the Leuna chemical works and we flew so low that we only just missed the chimneys and I noticed there were only 10 of them," he said. "There were certainly 13 before the attack started."

DEMOCRATS BATTLE TO RETAIN WEIGHT IN LOWER HOUSE

Entrenched in Solid South, But Opposition Hopes to Wrest Seats in West From Majority Party

New York, Oct. 31—(CP)—The Democratic party in its battle to retain control in the United States House of Representatives — the equivalent of the Canadian House of Commons—in the Nov. 5 election has the advantage of a bloc of 51 members who face no opposition.

These democrats are spread over 11 states, mostly in the "solid south." The Republicans on the other hand have only seven candidates without opposition.

The Democratic party has controlled the House since 1932 and reached its peak in 1936. But in 1938 a strong reaction set in in several key states and the Republicans made considerable gains.

The standings after the last five elections were:

Year	Total	Rep.	Dem.	Ind.
1930	435	220	214	1
1932	435	117	313	5
1934	435	103	322	10
1936	435	89	333	13
1938	435	169	262	4

The Republican 1938 gains, coming a year after the Supreme Court controversy and in the midst of the "purge" of Democrats unfriendly to President Roosevelt, were made largely in big industrial states such as Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan and New Jersey.

Question of South

Republican leaders have sought through the campaign now drawing to a close to increase this trend away from the administration in these key states which they must sweep to get control of the House.

They concede there is little chance of picking up any seats in the south but they hope to gain at least a few in the west. A swing of 48 seats away from the Democratic ranks would give the Republicans control.

The Democrats on their part express belief that the Republicans reached highwater in 1938 and that the administration will retain just about all of their present seats, perhaps a handful turning over to the opposition.

WEDDINGS

GRANT—WELLER

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at Bathurst Street United Church, Toronto, of Rose Adele Weller, youngest daughter of Mrs. Francis Weller and the late Robert W. Weller, formerly of Trenton, Ont., to Stuart McKinnon Grant of Hamilton, son of Mrs. Margaret Grant and the late William Grant of Owen Sound. Rev. Mr. Domm officiated.

Miss Helen Craig was organist. The aunt of the bride, Miss May White, sang "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life".

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Adam White, and wore queen's blue velvet gown, heart shaped hat to match. She carried Talisman roses. Miss Frances Weller was her sister's only attendant. She wore a frock of crushed rose crepe with violet accessories and carried bronze 'mums.

Clifford McKinnon of Owen Sound, cousin of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Gordon Weller and Cecil (Pete) Christie, formerly of Belleville.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, who received wearing a gown of plum crepe with matching hat and corsage of baby 'mums. The groom's mother, who also received, wore navy blue ensemble with corsage of roses.

The toast to the bride was made by Rev. Mr. Domm and responded to by the groom. The uncle of the bride gave a toast to the bride and groom.

The couple left on a trip to Ottawa and Montreal, the bride travelling in an Indian Earth bunny wool suit with matching hat and black accessories. They will reside at The Aberdeen Apartments, Hamilton, where the groom is on the staff of The Bank of Montreal.

MARTIN—PYEAR

Stirling, (Special)—St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, was the scene of a quiet Autumn wedding on Saturday, October 21st, when Mary Gladys, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Pyear of Sidney Township, became the bride of Mr. Douglas V. Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Martin of Belleville. Rev. A. M. Laverty B.A., B.D., officiated.

The bride given in marriage by her father, was charming in a jacket frock of Airforce blue crepe with matching accessories and her flowers were roses, 'mums and baby's breath. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Robert Neal, who also wore a frock of Airforce blue crepe and carried similar flowers to those worn by the bride. Mr. Franklin Martin of Toronto, brother of the groom, was groomsman and the wedding music was played by Mrs. Arthur Pyear, the bride's aunt.

Directly after the ceremony the bridal couple left by motor on a short wedding trip to Ottawa, Fitzroy Harbour and other eastern points. For travelling the bride selected a black coat with Persian lamb trimming worn over a navy dress with white trimming.

Upon their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Anderson's Island.

If Mirror Tells a Tale—Reverse of Eyes Beautiful

Get eight hours sleep every night.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Do you awaken some morning to find puffy little hammocks under your eyes? You're not one bit pleased with yourself, and no wonder. They're hateful, those pouches.

The tactful friend comes along, exclaims "My! Look at your eyes! Better see the doctor. Maybe you have Bright's disease," which makes the day just one gay and happy song.

There are a number of causes of these swollen tissues. Sometimes they are a family inheritance, mean nothing at all. Fatigue will bring them, as will intestinal disturbances. If possible, find the cause; you will have a chance then to win a war against a facial blemish that makes even the most respectable lady look dissipated.

Try out a mild diet, avoiding foods with roughage. Colitis victims often have eye hammocks. Take small portions of meat, eat plenty of vegetables—avoiding corn and peas—and have a dish of warm cereal for breakfast. Drink plenty of water. Get eight hours sleep every night.

Local treatment consists of applications of hot water, followed by cold and an ice friction. Dry the flesh gently, massage with a light cream, sending the first finger outward over the upper eyelid, coming back under the eye to the starting point.

While the electric needle will remove superfluous hair one can't resort to this method of elimination when the fuzzers are on the legs; too big a job. Each shaft must be treated individually; that takes time and costs money.

A depilatory can be used. Apply to a small area, watch results. Depilatories come in various forms, some yanking the hair out by the roots, other dissolving the shafts where they emerge from the flesh.

Furry legs are nothing to write home about; girls hate 'em. Show up through chiffon stockings, produce a moire effect that can't be regarded as decorative.

COD LIVER OIL

I was greatly relieved and pleased when I learned the other day that we are in no danger of a cod liver oil shortage this winter. There were grounds for fears of a shortage because we have always imported the great bulk of this product from Norway and, of course, since invasion of that country, exports of cod liver oil have dropped away to nothing. Naturally it appeared we would have to get along on the somewhat scant supply of the oil manufactured in the United States and Canada.

Latest information shows however that importers began to prepare for just such an emergency as this and imported large quantities of the product from Norway before the invasion. Also, plants have sprung up in Canada and the United States to produce the oil. That is even better news. I never could understand why it was necessary for us to go all the way to Norway for cod oil. Aren't the majority of the cod caught on the Grand Banks, just a few miles off the shores of Canada? The natives of Newfoundland are terribly poor.

Many of the fishermen who live along the coast never see money. Cod fish is their medium of exchange, and if the catch is poor, or the prices bad, as they usually are, then the poor are in a bad way. It is in order, then for cod oil industry to be encouraged in Newfoundland.

Perhaps persons who haven't been following this column for long will wonder why I am or was, so concerned about a shortage of cod liver oil. Well, the season of colds is rapidly approaching and in my opinion, the "sunshine vitamins" in cod liver oil are about the best preventives of colds there are. What cod liver oil does is supply to our bodies the vitamins that the rays of the sun give us in the summer months but which greatly diminish when the sun's rays begin to wane a bit beginning with September or October.

We have used cod liver oil extensively in the nursery here at Callander ever since the Dionne Quintuplets were born, and I could write reams about what it has done for those children. I'm not advocating it for children only. It is equally desirable for adults.

To the Quintuplets, the daily dose of cod liver oil is as much a matter of routine as brushing their teeth, or washing their hands. We give it to them the year around, as a precaution. In our latitude, even in summer, the sun does not provide enough "sunshine vitamin" for growing children, it seems to me.

Remember, cod liver oil isn't a cure for a cold, it is strictly a preventive. Begin taking it early in the fall. Don't wait until you get a cold, and then take it.

GREAT achievements and opportunities are foreshown by the powerful and lively lunar transits governing this day. Important projects in connection with influential organizations, political, diplomatic, humane, educational or philanthropic seem to start off under splendid impetus for outstanding success, nevertheless there are portents of such fine prospects being undermined by sudden, wild, impulsive and tricky circumstances of most devastating character. With these erratic moves eliminated and strategy used there is every hope of success.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of outstanding openings for definite success and achievements in connection with large groups centered on public objectives or advanced spiritual or humanitarian ends. This may be negated if not wholly vanquished by indulgence in impulsive, untenable, or eccentric behavior, perhaps of a startling or sensational nature. With restraint, sound and workable ideas there may be surprising benefits attended by social and personal gratifications.

A child born on this day may have great depths of character with lofty aspirations and versatile talents, but such may be subject to spurts of whimsical, queer or eccentric actions to frustrate splendid prospects.

U.S. Elections

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT

Democratic Candidate for President of the United States.

(By The Canadian Press)

Franklin Delano Roosevelt ran for re-election as President of the United States this year because he and his advisers believed the war and its threats to the U.S. made it necessary to depart from the tradition against more than two terms in the White House.

He pitted his vast experience in international affairs and his record in social reform against a newcomer to the political arena who made the most of the charge that in trying for three consecutive terms the President sought to set himself up as an indispensable man.

Roosevelt has occupied himself increasingly with the crisis in Europe and Asia since his speech opening Congress January 3, 1938, when he made an attack on aggressor nations, supported the other democratic nations and advocated "adequately strong defence".

For the next two and a half years he sought by every means at his power, "short of war", to stay the hands of the dictators and finally showed the courage of his convictions by two historic acts:

1. He gave Britain fifty overage but highly-valuable destroyers in return for naval base sites, without asking prior approval of congress.
2. He urged on congress with all his might the passage of a peace-time consciption law—something the United States had never had—and obtained the bill with a minimum of delay.

President Since 1932.

The President entered the White House first on March 4, 1933, the first Democrat to be elected to the office since 1916 when Woodrow Wilson was chosen for a second term.

In his inaugural address the President proclaimed a "new deal" for the man in the street. Within 100 days, coming to grips with the depression that then was at its depths, he started a vast scheme of government-controlled agriculture, industry, finance and employment.

Congress conferred upon him extraordinary powers. He closed all banks and reopened them after reorganization and under treasury supervision, altered the content of the dollar and set up codes of business conduct to balance the consuming power against price levels and to spread employment.

Roosevelt was born Jan. 30, 1882, at the family home at Hyde Park, N.Y., son of James Roosevelt and Sarah Delano Roosevelt. In March, 1905, he married Eleanor Roosevelt, a niece of his distant cousin, President Theodore Roosevelt. They have five children.

After serving in the New York State Senate he became assistant secretary of the navy during the First Great War and in 1920 was the vice-presidential nominee in the Cox-Roosevelt Democratic ticket that was badly beaten by President Harding.

The next year he was stricken at his summer home in Campobello, N.B., by infantile paralysis. Years of bitter struggle against physical incapacity followed.

In 1928 he proposed the nomination of Alfred E. Smith as Democratic presidential candidate, and Smith persuaded him to run for Governor of New York. He did so, winning the election although the national slate was defeated.

Between 1928 and 1932 Roosevelt, aided by James Farley and Louis Howe, built up a national following and in the 1932 election he swept into the White House, defeating President Hoover.

His Second Term.

After four years as President, Roosevelt was unanimously nominated for a second term, and in the 1936 election he routed Alf. M. Landon, Republican, capturing a majority in 46 of the 48 states while his party obtained its biggest majority in hisory in the congress.

The first half of his second term was dominated by bitter controversies over the supreme court, which he sought to reorganize, and over reorganization of branches of the government. The President lost the supreme court battle in congress but won it indirectly as through resignations and deaths he was able to appoint a majority of its members, sympathetic to his objectives.

The second half of the term was dominated by international affairs. A high spot in it was his welcoming to his official home at Washington and his personal home at Hyde Park of the King and Queen who visited the United States during their 1939 tour of Canada and Newfoundland.

Roosevelt has always had a lively friendship for Canada and things Canadian. His declarations, first that the United States would defend "its neighborhood", followed up by his Kingston pledge that the United States would not stand idly by were Canada attacked, have developed into a formal arrangement for planning and executing joint defence of North America.

The President has frequently entertained Prime Minister Mackenzie King, was host to Lord Tweedsmuir and just two weeks before the third-term election, entertained the Earl of Athlone.

WENDELL LEWIS WILLKIE

Republican Candidate for President of the United States.

(By The Canadian Press)

Wendell Lewis Willkie burst upon the United States political scene full blown from a major law suit, half a dozen magazine articles and a couple of radio appearances.

Indiana-born lawyer and former public utility executive, he made the climb from a desk in Wall Street to the platform as Republican presidential candidate in about six months.

The feat was unprecedented. He had never held any sort of elected office; never sat in any legislative body; had been a member of the party for only a few years—he voted for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932.

Once he obtained the nomination, at crowded Convention Hall at Philadelphia in June, he set out to show himself to the nation. Willkie made the most strenuous campaign ever attempted, scheduling speech after speech, often three or four a day, as well as making impromptu addresses.

Fought TVA Deal.

Willkie was little known outside his own circle of friends and business acquaintances until he became president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, a large holding company, in 1933.

After cutting electrical rates in depression years, he began to attract attention by his legal battle against the government in the Tennessee Valley Authority case.

In this, he offered strenuous objections to the setting up by T.V.A. of a cheap-power development in the territory embraced by one of his companies. The government offered to buy the company, the Tennessee Electric Company, but they could not agree on a price.

A long legal battle followed and in the end Willkie received a cheque for $78,000,000—or $23,000,000 more than the original T.V.A. bid.

His views upon governmental problems and the effective way he marshalled his thoughts in writing began to attract attention. Magazines began to publish articles by him attacking the New Deal philosophy and methods. He became in great demand as a convention speaker.

Quietly, here a little, there a little, a presidential boom began to grow and it gathered force in the months preceding the Republican convention. The public began to take interest in the 220-pound, six-foot Indianan whose hair was always mussed and who photographed extraordinarily well.

A publicity campaign began. Noted editors volunteered their services to help. "Willkie Clubs" sprang up. By the time the convention came along the "old guard" of the party were alarmed by this newcomer whom they hardly knew.

Convention Sweep.

Packed galleries right from the opening hour chanted at every opportunity: "We want Willkie!" Their enthusiastic demonstrations, and the hundreds upon thousands of messages from all over the nation—aided no doubt by a little judicious managing by Willkie's supporters—carried all before it.

The first ballot showed 360 votes for Thomas E. Dewey, New York's crime-hunting district attorney; 129 for Senator Robert A. Taft, and 105 for Willkie. Then came the deluge that swept the better-known aspirants aside. Willkie had 171 votes on the second ballot; 259 on the third; 306 on the fourth; 429 on the fifth, and 998 on the sixth, when he was nominated and the vote made unanimous.

In his hotel room he received the news quietly and told his admirers: "I am very happy, very appreciative and very humble."

He then resigned from Commonwealth and Southern and began his campaign with formal notification ceremonies at his birthplace, Elwood, Ind., August 17.

Parents Both Lawyers.

Willkie was born Feb. 18, 1892, son of Herman Francis and Henrietta Trisch Willkie, both lawyers of Elwood and both former school teachers. He was a descendant of Germans who fled to the U.S. when the democratic revolutions they supported failed.

A family financial reverse made him leave college temporarily and he spent a period working all over the country, harvesting wheat in Minnesota, working in the Texas oil fields, picking vegetables in California, husking corn in Iowa, running a boom-town tent hotel in Colorado, and cooking in a restaurant.

He later finished his college course and taught school in Coffeyville, Kansas. The day the United States declared war in 1917 he enlisted and saw service overseas, emerging after the armistice as captain in the 325th field artillery. In 1918 he married Edith Wilk of Rushville, Ind., a librarian, going home on furlough for the ceremony.

He was for the next twenty years a lawyer at Fort Wayne, Ind., and Akron, O. He joined Commonwealth and Southern in 1929 as general counsel and became president in 1933—the same year that his opponent in the election campaign, President Roosevelt, entered the White House.

NEW WAR SONGS CANADA'S NEED SAY MUSICIANS

Ballad Critics Point to First Great War as Example of Good Production

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP).—One of today's needs, says Len Hopkins, leader of one of the capital's dance bands, is a couple of good rousing war songs.

"We could do with a couple of dashing warlike pieces expressing more 'grim gaiety', to paraphrase Prime Minister Churchill," says Hopkins.

W. O. Findlay of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation returning from a military training at Petawawa says the soldiers will sing "There'll Always Be An England" when it's played with great enthusiasm but they don't often ask for it. They like "Kiss Me Goodnight, Sergeant-Major" because of the comedy element and they like the rolling out of "Roll Out the Barrel" for a variety of obvious reasons.

It's a different war in more ways than tactically, experts admit, and there was nothing in the last one like small children singing "Roll Out the Barrel" while they were about to die in the middle of the Atlantic. Alfred Noyes, the poet, says no poetry can come out of a war like this.

But what the song and dance people think is that poetry or not, there could be something comparable to the grimly gay songs of yesteryear, a considerable number of which came from Tinpan Alley in New York.

Remember Them?

Then there were: Tipperary, Pack Up Your Troubles, Mademoiselle From Armentieres, Keep the Home Fires Burning, We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall, Just a Baby's Prayer At Twilight, Till We Meet Again, Beautiful Katy, Carry Me Back to Blighty, It Is the Navy, It's a Long, Long Trail, Over There, All the Nice Girls Love a Sailor, When You Wore a Tulip, Joan of Arc, When It's Apple Blossom Time In Normandy, Goodbye, and a dozen others.

A lot of songs from the United States were used with Canadian words. For example, "When You Wore a Tulip" was sung in Calgary to "We Are Canadjuns, the Western Canadjuns," and in Halifax to "Now We Wear the 85th Feather".

Nowadays there are: Till the Lights of London Shine Again, Wish Me Luck As You Wave Me Goodbye, We'll Win the War With Wings, We're Ready Over Here For Over There, We're Coming Over, Wings Over the Navy.

One persistent ditty is to the tune of the "Old Gray Mare". The popular version this time and last is:

"I don't want to march with the infantry,
Ride with the cavalry,
Shoot with artillery,
I don't have to fly over Germany,
I'm in the King's Navy."

One suggestion as to the difference between the number and popularity of songs this time and last is that between 1914 and 1918 there was a lot more family piano playing than at present.

Piano sales are going up, however, and after all, the hopeful experts say, somebody is almost bound to turn out a couple of wows.

UNPOPULAR TEST MAY BE DROPPED ON LABOR QUERY

British Cabinet Considers Urging on House That Unemployment "Inquisition" Cease

By PAT USSHER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—The unpopular household means test used in determining unemployment allowance rates will shortly be abandoned by the government, political circles predict.

Meanwhile new draft unemployment assistance regulations have been drawn up providing larger sums to meet the increased cost of living. An extra two shillings weekly will be given a husband and wife in receipt of unemployment assistance. Persons over sixteen will get an extra shilling weekly and children under that age an additional threepence. The measure must be passed through parliament before it goes into effect.

The household test of means for long-term unemployed has been applied since the unemployment insurance scheme was remodelled in 1934. It was bitterly criticized by the Labor party.

Labor Urging.

The cabinet, under the urging of Labor members of parliament, has had the scheme under review and is expected to decide to drop it. The fall in unemployment figures since the war began has cut the cost of the "dole" and made possible some relaxation of the regulations governing its application.

If this decision is reached, the means test will no longer apply to unemployment assistance, supplementary pensions and payments to blind persons. It will be replaced by a personal means test. The family means test covering payment of public assistance for the poor will likely be retained, however.

The Manchester Guardian editorially welcomed the prospect of "this considerable social reform". It declared "the lumping together of the family's income for the assessment of the assistance due to an unemployed member always in the nature of things involved an unpleasant inquisition leading to many cases of hardship."

BRITAIN RENEWED HIGH CONFIDENCE OF HER FRIENDS

Complete Co-operation of Three Fighting Forces Great Factor in Empire's Power to Battle, Veteran Says

Written for The Canadian Press
By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Oct. 31 (CP)—For about four months now the British Empire virtually single-handed, has been standing up to the combined power of the two great military dictatorships of Europe.

More, indeed, than standing up. It has continued to wage against them an economic offensive. It has launched and sustained the great air offensive against Nazi Germany's power of waging war. It has reinforced its strength in the "Second Front" the Middle East.

Yet when France collapsed, there were many, not only among our enemies, but among our friends in neutral countries who though Britain could not be expected to stand alone against the two combined dictatorships.

But there were in fact reasons enough for anxiety—reasons which became acute when there was a prospect that the French Navy would fall into German hands.

The New World felt itself threatened. It appeared to many there that the British Navy could not retain control of the Atlantic, and Britain herself, with her Air Force outnumbered and her army without equipment, seemed to lie open to invasion.

Confidence Restored

Today the confidence of our friends is restored. It has been demonstrated—and this is perhaps the outstanding feature of this phase of the war—that the British base is safe. The British Isles will not fall.

What has brought about this astonishing change in the situation? In the widest sense it is to the co-operation of the three fighting services that must be attributed the Empire's power to continue the struggle. The Navy has continued to control sea communications and to it is owed not only Britain's food supply but armaments in manufactured form and as raw materials.

It has maintained, at the same time, the strenglehold of the blockade and with the air force, has made attempts at invasion prohibitively dangerous except to fanatics rushing to their doom.

The R.A.F. has contributed largely to making naval operations and movements of shipping possible in waters where they are exposed to air attack.

It has repulsed air attacks which might have destroyed British industry and has greatly reduced the losses that otherwise would have been suffered from air bombardment.

The army has been re-armed and re-organized. The Home Guard has sprung into existence and has been equipped. Ground defences against air attack have also been multiplied.

Powerful Defensive

Britain has, in fact, built up an immensely powerful defensive line—one which depends for its strength as much on human material as on steel and concrete.

Britain must not, however, fall victim to the Maginot complex and become obsessed solely with the problem of defending a base. The actions being carried out by the Royal Air Force and the Navy are healthy signs that the offensive is retained.

But the importance of the Empire's outposts must not be forgotten in determination to defend the base.

Egypt and the Middle East have become almost as important a theatre of operations as Britain itself. Imperial security there is of vital importance, and there also may arise the opportunity not only of frustrating the enemy's intentions but of striking back.

Looking back on these four months, the Empire has made an amazing recovery both in itself and in the world's estimation. Is it surprising that confidence has been restored, and that neutral opinion has been impressed?

The moral and material assistance which the Empire's efforts have won from its friends is perhaps the most reassuring tribute that could be paid to them.

GANGWAY PLEASE IN TUBE REFUGE

Folks Taking Shelter From Nazi Bombs Must Make Way For Traffic

London, Oct. 31—(CP)—Rules to provide shelter facilities in tube stations without interfering unduly with regular passenger traffic are posted at entrances to stations now.

Station users are informed tubes cannot be used as shelters before 4 p.m. Places can't be reserved at any time. Two white lines drawn along the platforms serve as markers to keep a passageway clear for travellers. Between 4 p.m. and 7.30 p.m. those taking shelter must keep within the line closest to the platform's inside wall. After that time they can spread over to the line nearest the platform edge.

The ruels were drawn up by London Transport with the approval of the ministries of home security and transport.

FOLK UNCONQUERABLE

Kidderminster, England—(CP) — Earl Baldwin, speaking here, said a nation in which men and women laid down their lives for their friends such as Britain's public services were doing is unconquerable.

PLASTIC PLANES MADE OF WASTE COAST PROPOSAL

Vancouver Inventor Visions Fleet Made Inexpensively From "Garbage" of British Columbia Industries

Vancouver, Oct. 31 (CP)— Expected to be completed by Dec. 15, the first plastic warplane of a fleet of them, visualized by two men in Vancouver, will be powered by a standard aircraft engine for test purposes.

The schemes provides for the eventual powering of the plastic fighting craft by a new inexpensive engine of radical design, to give a speed of 500 miles an hour. The promoters plan to make the plane available to the Canadian and British governments.

The man behind the new warplane are Harry N. Atwood, veteran flier and scientist of Greenfield, N.H., and Alex Johnson of Vancouver. They are progressing with plans to turn out the planes and motors.

Atwood, who is 55, made newspaper headlines 29 years ago when he flew from St. Louis to New York, blazing the skyways for present commercial flights. He says he "wants only to see a British victory," and is sure that his plane can aid in achieving it. He has been experimenting on plastic planes for 20 years.

According to the inventor, the planes can be built out of waste products of British Columbia wood and plastics industries, without necessity of expensive manufacturing equipment.

Two Vancouver aircraft companies are ready to build the planes for government inspection at their own cost and are awaiting issuance of licences by the inventor to proceed with construction. Meanwhile the test plane is being built here by the inventor himself.

"No one will get an exclusive licence. If Canada wants plastic planes built and sent to England by Christmas, she can have them," says Atwood. "They are truly made from the 'garbage can' of the wood and plastic industries, yet they are as fine as the most expensive types of airplanes. You have everything right here in B. C. for their manufacture."

Hold Like Concrete

According to Atwood the process of construction is similar to concrete construction work by the use of models. Forms are constructed to conform to the outer design of the plane's parts. Against this, on the inside, is bent a "skin" of thin, basket-woven wood, of special material which can be molded when heated. It hardens into a hard, fireproof, strong, unshatterable, smooth material. Between the layers of outer skin is blown a thermo plastic material which becomes a rigid but extremely light filling.

The power plant for the new planes would be supplied by his associate here, Jonhson, who holds the Empire rights to a new engine he claims to be superior to present motors. Construction of the engine will begin here soon, according to Johnson.

On the basis of small test models, he estimates that a 1,259 horse power engine built to his designs would weigh only 1,000 pounds. Instead of cast metal, the new engine would be built of stamped steel of one-eighth inch thickness. Cylinders and crankshafts are constructed from tubular steel under the plans for the engine.

"All materials used in construction of this engine are obtainable in Canada," he says. He claims that the engine, liquid cooled, can be perfectly streamlined into the wings or fuselage of a plane. No bolts or rivets are used, construction being entirely by fusion. Production, he says, is unlimited.

BOMB SUFFERERS APPRECIATE AID

Canada's Help Through Red Cross is Officially Recognized

London, Oct. 31—(CP)—"Very generous assistance" of the Canadian Red Cross in helping relieve distress amongst London's bomb sufferers is acknowledged by the general secretary of the Charity Organization Society in a letter to Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner.

Gifts from the Dominion body, the letter said, "included many thousands of blankets, several tons of food and at least a quarter of a million new garments for women and children."

Distributed to emergency rest centres etsablished by voluntary agencies at key points in London, the supplies made it possible to keep these centres going for 48 hours until they could be taken over by the local authority.

The letter added that the generosity of the Canadian Red Cross enabled the C.O.S. together with social workers "to tide over thousands of London's homeless until the official machine began to work effectively."

It expressed hope the high commissioner would convey to Canadians the thanks of bomb sufferers in the metropolis "for the very timely aid which your Dominion has rendered."

In Statement Read in Court Fred Thain Admitted Killing Arnold Wellman on Jan. 31st

Evidence of Alienists Show Accused to be in Normal Mental Condition

CASE IS CLOSED

"I hollered and shot off the gun. I didn't see him drop as I was all excited, and went out. I expect he did drop—I don't know. I went outside and stood by the stack, where I cried for a long time. Then I went to the house and entered by the back door. I went straight to the door of the bedroom", Frederick Thain, 46-year-old Harold farmer told police officers in a voluntary statement given them a few hours after his arrest for the murder of Arnold and Nancy Wellman, aged Rawdon farm couple on January 31st last.

The above is a part of that portion of the statement referring to the brutal slaying of Arnold Wellman, admitted as evidence by Justice Keiller MacKay at yesterday's hearing of the Thain trial, and read to the jury a few minutes before Deputy Attorney-General C. L. Snyder closed the case for the Crown.

Defence-Counsel R. D. McCulloch, produced two witnesses for the defence, Dr. Ernest Clarke, Ontario Hospital, Kingston, and Dr. George S. Tennant, superintendent of the Brockville General Hospital, prominent alienists, both testified that, in their opinion and from observations made during the trial and previous examinations, "Thain was in a normal mental condition at all times, and thoroughly responsible for his actions". Both alienists had made periodical examination of the accused and found "no symptoms of mental illness".

The defence rested here, and the case closed. Counsel will address the jury as will the bench today, and the case will likely go to the jury some time this afternoon.

"I Done It"

Part of Thain's statement to the police as read to the jury, corroborated evidence given previously to the officers. "Will there be a trial?" he asked Sergt. Harry Thompson. "Most assuredly there will" replied the officer. "I done it—you will do the best you can for me—that's all I want", Thain said.

Thain's Statement in Part

"On Tuesday, January 30th., I went to the Wellman home about 7.30 in the evening with my sleigh. I went to the barn and took the grain off the wagon. Then I went home leaving the sleigh with the grain on it on the sideroad. The next day after dinner, I took the team back again and hitched them to the sleigh. The grain was dumped in the bushes. I went to the store, where I bought the shells, a file and two chocolate bars. Returning to the sideroad, I loaded the grain and tied the horses to the bushes. I had my shotgun with me and started to walk across the field toward the Wellman farm. I saw two woodchoppers in the field to the right. I turned around, but I don't know why I did, and went back to the sideroad. From there I went north, crossed some fields owned by Mr. Pollock and across the Wellman farm to the cow stable".

"As I entered the stable Mr. Wellman was standing near one of the cows looking toward the wall. I hollered and shot off the gun at the same time. I didn't see him drop as I was very excited and went out. I expect he did drop—I don't know. I went to the haystack and stood crying for a long time. Then I went to the house and entered by the back door. I went straight to the door of the bedroom".

This concluded that part of the statement produced by the Crown and admitted as evidence earlier in the day.

"Nothing to Arouse My Suspicions"

Called by Mr. McCulloch as his first witness, Dr. Clarke told the jury he had seen Thain on five different occasions since his arrest.

"Have you been able", Mr. McCulloch asked "from observations taken during this trial to come to a conclusion as to this man's sanity?"

"I have".

At this point an objection was raised by the Crown to the effect that Thain's ability to stand trial was not the point.

"There is no evidence before this court that the accused is not able to stand trial," interjected Justice MacKay, "the time to raise this point is after accused has been asked to plead."

Continuing his examination of Dr. Clarke, Mr. McCulloch was told that "Thain appeared to be entirely clear on everything, and I saw no evidence of anything wrong, in a brief interview on Feb. 8th."

"On Feb. 10th I had a longer interview with the accused," Dr. Clarke told the court. I secured a history of himself from his childhood to the present time. I learned of everything of importance in his life."

"I found nothing to arouse my suspicions" the witness testified. Dr. Clarke saw Thain again on May 7th and July 10th. "I found him in bed on the latter occasion. He told me he had been seriously ill and had been taken to Belleville General Hospital. He did not appear to be ill at this time."

Responsible For All Actions

"Did you notice anything particularly wrong mentally", Mr. McCulloch asked.

"I saw no change from the time I first saw him in February."

Dr. Clarke said he had seen Thain again on September 27th. The accused was still in bed and still had heart complaints. He talked readily, was cheerful and was able to give a clear account of the symptoms of his illness. There was no change in his mental condition.

"You have heard the evidence, question of motive and noticed the accused's demeanor in the box during this trial. What is your opinion of this man's present mental condition?" asked defence counsel.

"My opinion is unchanged," replied Dr. Clarke. "There is no evidence of mental illness and he is responsible for all his actions. I consider he is within a normal realm of intelligence."

A Normal Individual

"Would you say this man was perfectly normal?"

"I feel he is a normal individual, and is quite responsible," concluded Dr. Clarke.

"Never Mentally Ill"

Dr. Tennant had examined Thain on Feb. 7th and 9th and made a physical as well as mental survey. He had observed the accused during the trial and in his opinion had been able to find nothing to warrant the belief that Thain is mentally ill.

"Have you found anything to suggest he might have been mentally ill previously?" asked Mr. McCulloch.

"Many things were suggested to me to the effect that he was or had been mentally ill, but these were all dismissed after examination by me," replied Dr. Tennant.

"In your opinion, Frederick Thain, is not now, nor has been mentally ill?"

"That is right", was the witness' reply.

Cross-examination by the Crown revealed the fact that both alienists are men of long experience, and fully qualified to examine the accused and form opinions as to his mental condition.

TORONTO STOCKS.

Toronto, Oct. 31 (CP). — The stronger tone of the New York market stimulated the Toronto listings from the opening today and all indices were higher at noon on expanding volume. Turnover totalled 181,000 shares for the first three hours.

The second hour was enlivened by a rally in the western oils and this group firmed .85 by noon. Home Oil advanced 30 cents to 2.25 and gains of about 10 cents were netted by Calgary and Edmonton, Okalta and Anglo-Canadian. The cheaper oil issues tightened up also.

Strong spots in the golds included Preston, Upper Canada, Powell Rouyn, San Antonio and Broulan and in the base metals, Steep Rock, Waite-Amulet and Jack Waite ruled higher.

Steel, liquor and most of the interlisted pivotal issues were quoted at better prices. Walkers Common and Distillers-Seagrams added small fractions. Papers and utilities held steady.

NAZI BOMB HITS APARTMENT HOUSE

Undetermined Number of Persons Are Reported Trapped in Basement

London, Oct. 31.— (CP)— An undetermined number of persons were reported trapped in the basement of a large apartment house hit by a Nazi aerial bomb last night.

There were more than 150 persons in the basements of the building when the bomb exploded, but they were spread out in groups, and only those immediately under the damaged block were trapped.

Fire hampered the rescuers for a while, but two women were brought out alive. One body was recovered.

In a tenement district, a mother and three children were reported trapped.

HITLER TO HARANGUE REICHSTAG

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 31 (AP) —A Rome dispatch to Telepress, pro-Fascist News Agency with headquarters in Geneva, said today the German Reichstag probably will be convened soon "to hear Hitler tell of decisions of capital importance" reached in his Florence meeting with Mussolini Monday.

STILL NO TRACE

Ottawa, sank Oct. 22 after collision with a merchant ship in the North Atlantic submarine zone.

Last night, the navy issued a revised list of casualties and survivors of the Margaree disaster. Besides reporting Ab. Millan was not a casualty but safe in England, the list named three additional men as "missing and believed lost" and added three to the number of survivors.

This raised total casualties in the sinking to 142 officers and men, including Cmdr. Roy, and survivors to 34.

The only man in the revised list besides Ab. Millan whose next of kin lives in Canada was Steward E. C. Brown, named as a survivor. His name did not appear in the original list of survivors and casualties issued Sunday night. Steward Brown's mother lives at Halifax.

The other two survivors reported last night were Lieut. H. V. Gordon of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve and leading stoker H. James of the Royal Navy.

The three newly-reported casualties were leading stokers H. Brockway and G. F. Jaines of the Royal Navy, and Signalman W. J. Reading, Royal Canadian Navy, whose next of kin live in England.

The revised list was the first official announcement that any British Navy men were aboard the Margaree when she sank.

No Trace of Bras d'Or.

Last official word on the minesweeper Bras d'Or was a 20-word statement issued at 7 p.m. EDT last night by the navy. It merely said: "There is still no trace of the Bras d'Or. A thorough and widespread search for the missing vessel is continuing."

The revised Margaree casualty list issued last night raised to 215 the total naval casualties reported since the war began, up to and including the Margaree loss. If the Bras d'Or also fails to show up, it will raise Canada's total naval losses in this war to 243.

ITALIANS BLAME

The Communique claimed several Greek planes were shot down during bombing operations from which one Italian plane failed to return.

(The Athens government accused the Italians of bombing and machine-gunning "indiscriminately" at Patras and of attackng "non-military objectives" elsewhere. It said only one Greek plane was lost.)

The Italian communique claimed that objectives bombed included "loaded troopships" at Patras as well as the Lepanto naval base on the gulf of Corinth, barracks at Metzovo Pass in Western Greece and highway junctions in the Kalamas Valley.

(There was no comment on these claims from Greek sources.)

The correspondent of the Rome newspaper Il Messaggero, in explaining why the Italians are making so little progress, claimed that torrential rains over the first forty-eight hours of hostilities created in the area of operations "a vast swamp from which mountain peaks emerge dark and spectral against a background of clouds".

The newspaper Il Popolo di Roma admitted that the Italians themselves thus far have done little fighting, leaving the front line attacking to the Albanian militia.

(An Athens communique noted that "bands of irregulars are collaborating with the Italians.")

Have Not Reached Defences

London, Oct. 31.—(CP)—Authoritative military circles in London said today Italian troops invading Greece had not yet reached the Greeks' main defensive line.

The main Fascist advance since the attack began Monday has been along the left of the Greek line on the southeastern borders of Albania, they added.

Brisk outpost fighting along the entire front was reported in this capital today, but there was no information of British troop landings in Greece.

JAPS' CAMPAIGN

(The Japanese claimed they had withdrawn "voluntarily" from Nanning because the city had lost its strategic importance with the acquisiton of new Japanese bases in French Indo-China.)

Reports from Hong Kong said Chinese troops re-entered Nanning Tuesday and received a jubilant welcome from flag-waving crowds.

Chinese Troops Desert Japanese Army

Hong Kong, Oct. 31 (AP)—Two thousand Chinese troops recruited by the Japanese in Eastern Shantung Province were reported by the Central (Chinese) News Agency today to have surrendered to the forces of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

To demonstrate their new loyalty to Chiang, the Agency said, the troops later participated in an attack on Japanese positions near Kiaochow Bay.

The Agency estimated the Japanese had suffered 2,500 casualties in battle at Shaohsing, famous wine-making centre in Chekiang Province, which the Chinese reported they had recaptured earlier this week.

SAYS OTHER COUNTRIES MAY JOIN TRI-POWER PACT

Rome, Oct. 31—(AP)—The newspaper Il Piccolo said today the entrance of other countries into the tri-power pact linking Italy, Germany and Japan is possible.

Whether the newspaper referred to negotiations to be undertaken by the axis powers with Soviet Russia or to some smaller country such as Bulgaria, was not disclosed.

GRECIAN TROOPS

forces in the Epirus sector on the southern end of the Albanian border had kept the Italians in check all day yesterday after "a slight withdrawal of their advance sections according to a pre-arranged plan".

The Italian offensive in this area was reported taking the form of a two-pronged drive aimed at the industrial city of Ioannina 30 miles from the frontier.

Bands of irregulars, the high command said, were "collaborating" with the Italians. The Nationality of the irregulars was not identified.

Greeks Capture 800 Italians

Little military activity was reported elsewhere, though unofficial sources estimated the Greeks had captured approximately 800 prisoners on the northern end of the front during the last few days.

The High Command accused the Italian Air Force of bombing Patras "indiscriminately" and machine-gunning the population. Air attacks on "non-military targets" at Rio and Navpactos—across the Gulf of Patras from Patras — in which one person was killed and five wounded also were reported.

The loss of one Greek plane which engaged Italian fighters over Albanian territory was announced.

Reinforcements continued to stream out of this city by every available means of conveyance as the Greeks took advantage of the lack of Italian aerial activity in this area to rush men and equipment to the front.

No Raids on Salonika

Thus far Salonika has yet to experience an air raid alarm; except for the blackout, curfew and martial law, life is continuing here much as usual.

Mobilization proceeded at top speed, however. Hundreds of peasants waited to exchange their civilian clothes for military uniforms while others, fully equipped, departed by lorries and taxis gaily singing the national anthem.

The Athens News Agency, meanwhile, estimated at 110 dead and more than 300 wounded, the casualties resulting from the bombing Monday of the Port of Patras by Italian planes which flew Greek colors.

The News Agency said that the time the attack was made the Patras population did not even know their country was at war with Italy and that crowds had gathered in the streets to watch the planes under the impression they were Greek.

About 200 bombs were dropped by the raiders, which passed low over the city, the News Agency declared. Forty-five of the dead were children and many women and children were reported among the wounded.

ITALIAN INVASION OF GREECE TERMED 'AN AXIS PINCER'

Air Marshal Joubert Says Invasion is Movement Toward Middle East

NOT RESENTFUL

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert, speaking on the British Broadcasting Corporation's "Britain Speaks" feature, Wednesday termed the Italian invasion of Greece "an axis pincer movement toward the Middle East".

"Greece, while it offered no threat to the axis, forms a stepping stone to the east," Sir Philip said. "It is an ideal spot for the axis to develop its expansionist policy."

Whether the step was taken on Mussolini's own initiative or under orders from Hitler was not definitely known, he said, but he forecast that German aid would be brought into the struggle.

"Remember that Germany's mechanized forces are backing Italy," he said. "German bombers and land forces probably are on their way east."

Britain, however, was extending every aid to Greece, and the British navy would be particularly effective in this respect since Italian troops would come within their range.

Sir Philip expressed sympathy for the Italian soldiers who were being sent into a war in which they had no great interest.

"There was nothing in Greece to arouse the antagonism of the Italian soldier," he said. "Like machines they have been drilled and regimented, and like machines they must move forward to their appointed ends."

Difficult To Feel Resentment.

Sir Philip found it difficult to feel any resentment towards the Italian soldiers, since he had known them during the first Great War. They were being "led by strutting players who are their northern neighbors."

Speaking of the air war over Britain, he referred to the presence there of Italian fliers, and addressed a message to Mussolini regarding their participation in raids over England.

"Your fliers, Signor Mussolini," he said, "when they are shot down and killed probably will remember the days (during the first great war) when we were comrades. If they are captured, they probably will be happier here than under their German masters."

Sir Philip said that the Germans had changed their tactics in air warfare over Britain. They were sending more planes to the provinces, particularly the industrial midlands, and reducing the number used on London.

"In addition," he said, "the Germans are becoming more cautious, and the effectiveness of their attacks is being greatly reduced."

Troops Maintained In the Middle East

London, Oct. 31 (CP)—Greatest task of the British merchant navy during the last four months has been reinforcement and maintenance of troops in the middle east, the British Broadcasting Corporation said Wednesday, quoting a speech by Ronald Cross, Minister of Shipping.

"In that period," Mr. Cross said, "we shipped hundreds of thousands of tons of stores for the army, navy and air force, and at the same time we were receiving a constant stream of lorries, aircraft and munitions from the Dominions and Colonies."

WILL ASSUME COMMAND

London, Oct. 31 (CP)—Lt.-Gen. A. G. Cunningham has arrived in Kenya to assume command of the East African force, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported Wednesday, quoting an official announcement.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Irrigation! Where rain is insufficient for growing crops, irrigation has been practised from earliest times. In North America, Indians carried on crude irrigation as early as 1000 A.D., it is thought. Now about 20 million acres in the United States and considerable areas in Alberta and British Columbia are under irrigation. Those lands requiring irrigation are in part recompensed by abundant sunshine. The advantages of irrigation are: (1) ability to grow a greater variety of crops in rotation, thus enriching the soil, (2) possibility of growing several crops in a season, and (3) independence of irregular rainfall, even in those areas where it ordinarily is sufficient.

NEW BRITISH CRUISER

A new cruiser, unnamed, is launched at some undisclosed port in England to increase the hitting power of the British navy.

TRAINING PLANE WRECK STUDIED

Leading Aircraftman Armstrong, Who Lost Life Near Dundee, Made Desperate Efforts to Keep Plane in Air

Kitchener, Ont., Oct. 31—(CP)—The scattered wreckage of a training plane was studied by Royal Canadian Air Force officials today as they sought the cause of a forced landing that took the life of leading Aircraftman Roy Armstrong, 23, of Winnipeg.

The United States-built Harvard machine crashed in a turnip field near New Dundee late yesterday after Armstrong, on a training flight from Camp Borden to Windsor, failed in a desperate attempt to keep the plane in the air. New Dundee is 15 miles west of Kitchener.

Farmers who heard and saw the crash told how Armstrong, former Winnipeg Hydro lineman who had no previous experience when he joined the R.C.A.F., shortly after the outbreak of war, tried to keep the machine's motor turning over.

Pilot's Efforts

"All the way across my farm," said Clayton Toman, "the plane was coming lower and lower and the pilot 'gunned' the motor three or four times but couldn't get it to function properly.

"Just before the machine, traveling very fast, crashed into the ground, he roared the motor so hard I thought it would blow up.

"Then it dived into the field nose first with a deafening roar. Large pieces of the machine were hurled 150 feet away by the force of the impact.

"Before I got very close there was another terrible explosion which, I believe, was caused by the gasoline tank exploding as a cloud of black smoke arose," Toman continued, adding there was only a slight blaze.

Harold Shantz, another farmer, said the plane buried itself six to eight feet in the ground and the terrific impact telescoped the plane to an overall length of ten feet. W. Goff, a third farmer, said he heard the crash six miles away.

It was several hours after the crash before Coroner Dr. Ward Woolner of Ayr and police identified the body. The body was brought to Kitchener.

METAXAS LINE GREEKS' MAIN HOPE OF DEFENCE

Supplements Natural Fortresses of the Mountainous Region in Northwest

DETAILS SECRET

By ELMER W. PETERSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Budapest, Hungary, Oct. 31 (AP).—Greece pins her initial hopes of resisting Italian invasion from Albania on natural fortresses of her mountainous northwest augmented by the extensive system of "the Metaxas Line".

The Metaxas Line, named after Premier John Metaxas, runs the length of the Albanian-Greek frontier from the Ionian coast to Lake Ventrok — about 100 miles as the crow flies—and stretches on along the Yugoslav and Bulgarian frontiers to the Turkish border.

The original Metaxas Line was directed chiefly against Bulgaria.

But when Italy seized Albania in April, 1939, the Greek government built new fortifications, at a reported cost of more than $6,000,000, to defend her northwest frontier against the new threat.

Details of the line are secret but it is believed to consist of strategically-placed concrete fortifications, earthworks, pillboxes and barbed wire tank-traps—all designed to supplement the natural defences afforded by the rugged upland country.

Special attention is said to have been devoted to the old fortified town of Ioannina, which commands two of the four principal routes from Southern Albania and which already has emerged as a key Italian objective in the very opening of the invasion.

Mountainous Bottle-necks.

The mountains make northwestern Greece a natural walled fortress and apparently the Greek army's general plan is to force attackers into narrow mountainous bottlenecks.

Invaders pushing into Greece would find these four more or less favorable attacking routes through the mountains:

1. Around Lake Ventrok along the railway line leading to the strategic port of Salonika.
2. From Corizza, Albania, to Kastoria.
3. From Vojusav to Ioannina.
4. Along the coastline to a lower range of mountains to the west of Ioannina.

So, once again, the Greeks are defending their mountain passes, as did Leonidas at Thermopylae where 300 Spartans held the narrow defile against Xerxes' "innumerable" Persians.

Neutral experts call the modern Greek army "happy and willing" but point out that modern warfare is a thing of machines and that holding mountain passes is no longer a matter of hand-to-hand encounters.

These experts say the Greek army badly lacks airplanes and other modern equipment. The air force is reported to have perhaps 150 serviceable planes and the Greek navy is weak.

Greece can muster about 600,000 soldiers, these observers report, but part of the army must watch other frontiers besides that with Albania.

The possibility that Bulgaria might attack has complicated the Greek defence system, since the dominating heights of the Greek-Bulgarian frontier are held by the Bulgars.

The Greeks, who knew about Trojan horses long before the blitzkrieg theory developed, have no fears of fifth columnists. The minority groups in Greece, chiefly Turks and Albanians, are not large.

The minority problem was solved nearly two decades ago by a mass population transfer in which nearly 1,000,000 Greeks were repatriated from Asia Minor and Bulgaria in exchange for Bulgarian and Turkish nationals.

Noted English Writer Is Luncheon Speaker

Barbara Cartland, English authoress and playwright, and in private life, Mrs. Hugh McCorquodale, will be guest speaker for the annual luncheon of the Women's Canadian Club. Mrs. McCorquodale is a novelist of distinction, several of her twenty novels having been selected by the English papers as the Book of the Month.

Mrs. McCorquodale is a direct descendant of the Dukes of Hamilton and of Robert the Bruce, King of Scotland; her mother belonged to one of the oldest Saxon families in existence. Her uncle is in command of the military forces at Malta; her eldest brother, Major Ronald Cartland, M.P., is at present missing after serving in France in command of an anti-tank battery. Mrs. McCorquodale has come to Canada with her three children for the duration of the war. Her youngest child is a godson of the son of Canada's recent Governor-General, Lord Willingdon.

Trenton and District

Local Rental Enquiry Board Will be Set Up in Trenton

Thirty - Five Complaints Heard at Meeting Before Judge W. M. Martin

NO DECISIONS GIVEN

Trenton, Oct. 31—A local Rental Enquiry Board will be set up here to adjust all complaints and disagreements between landlords and tenants according to Mr. Justice W. M. Martin, Rent Controller for the War Time Prices and Trade Board who opened the court here yesterday afternoon.

Thirty-five complaints were placed before the Judge during the sessions in the afternoon and evening. Eleven complaints had been handed to W. Potts, town clerk while 24 other complaints were brought in by Capt. W. J. Province, Padre at the R.C.A.F., Trenton. The latter group of complaints did not have the required information and the Padre was asked to obtain this information.

Mayor O. Alyea in welcoming Mr. Justice Martin to Trenton stated that there only were four or five complaints made to town officials during the past year concerning increased rents by townspeople. All other complaints were made by the Air Force.

"I have a number of letters from people who haven't appeared before the Court," Mr. Justice Martin stated. "I don't intend to do more than acknowledge them. Later I hope to set up a local committee to deal with them. Such a committee could deal with the complaints better than I, as it would know the conditions here."

"The first complaint was made by Luther Free who has lived in the same house for three years. "I paid $15.00 per month but last June the rent was increased to $20.00. It is a frame house, with three rooms on the first floor and four rooms upstairs. There is no toilet in the house."

"What makes you think $20 is unreasonable?" questioned Mr. Justice Martin.

"I read in the papers where rent was not supposed to be raised after January 1, 1940 so I made my complaint," was the only answer the tenant could make.

The landlord, Walter Norris, stated that the tenant had paid $15.00 since 1937. The assessment was $1,000 but in 1939 and 1940 the assessment was raised to $1,100 and the taxes were increased to $56.10.

"I don't think you have grounds for a very serious complaint," stated the Rental Controller. "However, I will consider it."

Mrs. Rush, a tenant of a seven-room apartment, complained that her rent had been increased from $22 to $25 between January and September of this year. The apartment has modern conveniences but is unheated.

Mr. Justice Martin informed Mrs. Josephetta of 48 Bryon Street, that consideration would be given her case. The lady complained that her rent had been increased from $12.00 to $20.00 per month from January to October of this year. It is a brick, five-room house with no basement. The water was put in during 1939 but no increase was made at that time. The landlord is Herbert Riley.

Apples Dumped on Road

Hundreds of apples were ground into apple juice and cider but it wasn't fit to drink as it was made on the pavement of highway 2, just east of the town limits last night. The apples were strewn on the highway when a truck loaded with barrels of apples collided with a cement abutment and passing motor cars and trucks soon ground them into the delicate juice, that is so desirable at times but not this one.

The truck driven by Lucien Bouches of Montreal was badly damaged and number of barrels of apples were destroyed when the vehicle collided with the cement abutment just one mile east of the town. Bouches was arrested on a charge of reckless driving by Traffic Officer D. Wilson.

A second accident occurred when a car driven by John Scea of Trenton, collided with an iron loop, that held the tarpaulin in place. The loop was partly broken from the truck and was sticking out the side of the truck, when the Scea car collided with it.

Another car driven by an airman of the R.C.A.F. air base, narrowly missed colliding with two of the men involved in the accident and had to take to the ditch to avoid the collision.

Hong Kong a Paradise For Unattached Girls

Most of British Women Have Been Evacuated Leaving Only a Few—Some Girls Have Six Escorts

DATED WEEKS AHEAD

Hong Kong, Oct. 31 (CP).—Many a forlorn husband, many a lonely bachelor, is to be seen today among the Britons of this outpost colony, expected to be the first point attacked if Japan wars with Britain.

British menfolk here always outnumbered their womenfolk, so it was a cruel blow when several thousand British women of pure European descent, as official communiques described them, were evacuated from the colony last July. Hong Kong has been dull, but when this happened the colony became duller still.

All who could tried to evade it. Among persons exempt were volunteer nurses prepared to do their bit if Hong Kong were to come under siege. No sooner was the evacuation plan announced than an unprecedented rush to join the nursing detachment was started. Some succeeded, but the majority failed.

Firms used all their influence to keep as many of their women employees as possible, so the colony is still far from denuded of British women. The number, however, has dwindled to such an extent that those remaining are finding Hong Kong a woman's paradise.

Many a girl who had dateless evenings now finds herself booked weeks in advance. Many a man thinks longingly of Shanghai, which becomes gayer than ever with the annual migration of women to seaside resorts.

It is not unusual here to see a solitary girl going to a dinner dance with as many as six male escorts. Showgirls of an American troupe which visited the colony for a fortnight found themselves booked for an endless series of lunches, dinners, motor drives and swimming parties. One of them, a comely blonde, was usually attended by three to six men.

BRITAIN REQUIRES UTMOST HELP U.S. CAN GIVE

Daily Mail Says Kennedy's Address May Turn Tide Decisively to Roosevelt

BRITAIN DEFENDS U.S.

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—The Daily Mail commented approvingly today on the speech of the United States Ambassador, Joseph P. Kennedy, in New York Tuesday night, and said his "intervention at this stage may sway the approaching election decisively in favor of the President."

"What Joseph Kennedy has to say to the American people clearly and accurately represents the British view," said the paper.

"It is this: The armed forces of Britain are America's first line of defence against Nazi invasion. Those forces are fighting not only for the life of the British Empire but for the survival of western democracy.

"In return for that service Britain requires the utmost help the United States can give.

"We want all the equipment America can send. We want more than we are getting and we want it faster.

"Our enemies could not stand against a Britain armed to the teeth, backed by the United States with her vast potential war production at full strength.

Don't Want Men.

"A speedup of her output would be worth more to us, than an expeditionary force of 1,000,000 men. An American declaration of war at this stage would be of no help to us. It would divert vital supplies from our own lines to the home front of the United States.

"America is nominally neutral. In reality she is a non-belligerent ally and her part is not merely to sell us surplus material but to plan production to supply our urgent war needs.

"By intensive rearmament and by aiding Britain the United States hopes to keep out of war. She stands in relation to this country in the same position as Britain stood in relation to Europe three years ago and she has learned from our bitter experience.

"If Britain had rearmed intensively then we, too, might have kept out of war.

"That was Mr. Kennedy's message to the American people, given with all the emphasis of his experience as ambassador to Britain.

"It supports the policy of Mr. Roosevelt and the ambassador's intervention at this stage may sway the approaching election decisively in favor of the President."

RAN THE GAUNTLET

London, Oct. 31 CP).—Two Polish merchant ships which ran the gauntlet of French defences at Dakar have reached Britain safely. The 1,000-ton motor ship Rozewie and the 1,864-ton Kroman dodged steel cables at the harbor mouth.

BETTER THAN EXPECTED

Dudley, England, Oct. 31 (CP).—A 15-year-old domestic who sued police for £50 ($222) for false arrest was granted £80 ($356) when she appeared in court. Four police officers were rebuked for their manner of arresting the girl.

British Communique

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued the following communique Thursday:

"Enemy air attacks during the night were mainly confined to the London area and eastern and southern England, though a few bombs were also dropped in the midlands.

"Most of the attacks were made during the early part of the night and the raids ceased some time before daylight.

The attacks were not on a heavy scale and though houses were hit at several places the damage as a whole was slight and casualties were few.

"It is now known that five of our fighters were lost yesterday. One of the pilots is safe."

Later the Air Ministry announced:

"It is now known that two more enemy aircraft were destroyed yesterday, making nine for the day."

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—The Air Ministry announced Thursday: "In spite of adverse weather conditions our bombers last night carried out attacks on channel ports and on communications in western Germany."

Greek Communique

Athens, Oct. 31 (AP).—Text of a Greek general staff communique on Thursday:

"On the Epirus front our forces, after slight withdrawal of their advance sections according to prearranged plans, kept their positions throughout the whole day of Oct. 30, having halted by their fire the movements of various enemy columns.

"Calm prevailed today on the remaining front.

"Bands of irregulars collaborated with the enemy.

"The enemy air force bombed Patras indiscriminately and machine-gunned the population. A number of houses collapsed.

"Rion and Navpactos were non-military targets bombed. One person is dead and five were wounded. One school was destroyed in Navpactos.

"One of our airplanes which engaged with Italian fighters over Albanian territory failed to return."

Pictures Will Give Complete Record of Canada's Effort in Air

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP).—Pictures are piling up in headquarters offices of the Royal Canadian Air Force and at some future time will form a complete record of Canada's war-time history in the air.

Staff photographers have been taken on strength of the air force from the ranks of news photographers to handle camera reporting for the R.C.A.F. in Canada. Their job is to show in pictures every angle of the dominion's air expansion program and the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

For nearly six months Jack Dalgleish and Bert Johnson, former camera newshawks of the Windsor Star, have been Air Force staff men on assignment.

Not only will their pictures some day take a place in the national archives of Canada but copies of them are going out to photograph agencies which supply the world's publications—carrying Canada's air story to the four corners of the earth.

As each air school is opened one of these photographers is usually on hand to take shots of its buildings, personnel and different aspects of the training. The best are published or go into files at R.C.A.F. headquarters.

These are supplemented by photographs taken by men attached to each school.

From the thousands accumulating, those suitable to tell a connected story will be selected by the official air force historian, Sqdn-Ldr. Kenneth Conn of Ottawa.

ON TRIAL FOR LIFE FREDERICK THAIN IS UNCONCERNED

Always a Smile on His Face and He Nods to Newsmen on Arrival in Dock

NOT CONSULTED

In the prisoner's dock in Hastings County courthouse sits a well-dressed smiling middle-aged man, he is the central figure in one of the greatest criminal dramas ever played in Belleville. On trial for his life, Frederick Thain, 46-year-old Rawdon Township farmer, sits quietly listening with a smile on his face, to a web of evidence being spun by Ontario's cleverest lawyers, in an effort to convict him of one of the most shocking murders perpetrated in this county.

For the past three days, the facts surrounding the brutal slaying of Arnold and Nancy Wellman, aged and highly respected residents of Rawdon township, whose shot-gun blasted bodies were found in their farm buildings by a mail-carrier on Feb. 1st. have been brought to light.

Outwardly, Thain has shown no emotion. Daily as he is led into a courtroom crowded to capacity with his former friends and neighbors, he smiles at acquaintances, and nods his head to newspapermen. He glances quickly about him. The ever-present smile flashes over his face as he takes his seat.

Maintains Outward Appearance

Throughout the three-day trial he has maintained this outward appearance of a debonair, care-free attitude. He listens intently as witness after witness testifies. He glances toward the exits as spectators leave and enter the courtroom. At the end of each sitting, he rises, and accompanies his police guard to his cell with a quick firm step. He enters the same way.

Yesterday when a statement said by police to have been made by him following his arrest, was read to the jury, he leaned slightly forward in his chair. His face was expressionless. He stared directly at an object in front of him. The evidence finished, he leaned back in his seat. Again that smile flashed over his face.

The evidence of expert alienists testifying to his sanity did not cause him to show any emotion. He treated their findings with the same easy manner as he has done the evidence of less important witnesses.

Never Consults Counsel

He has never, during the trial, voluntarily consulted his counsel. He appears satisfied to leave his fate in the hands of others. But throughout the lengthy train of evidence whether it be damning or otherwise, he has shown no visible signs of inward emotion.

Today he may learn his fate. Twelve good men and true have heard the testimony of some twenty-three witnesses. Yesterday the Crown and the defence closed their cases, and in the hands of twelve of his peers rests the future of Frederick Thain.

Today they will listen to the addresses of the prosecution and the defence. The presiding Judge His Lordship Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay, one of Canada's most eminent jurists, will deliver his charge to them. At its conclusion they will retire to their room, weigh the evidence and possibly arrive at a verdict. The fate of Frederick Thain, reposes in the hands of twelve of his fellow county residents.

Intense Interest Shown

Interest in the trial has been intense since its beginning. Residents from the far-flung sections of the county and surrounding, districts have converged on the court-room to hear its various phases. From far and near they have come, some in fact, a large number of them, bring their lunches and munch them during the brief noon-hour recess. Seats in the court-room have been at a premium. Crowds have thronged the corridors, patiently awaiting an opportunity to secure a coveted seat. The inherent curiosity of the human being when the life of a fellow is in the balance is as apparent in Hastings County as in all other parts of the Dominion.

Majority Are Women

The greater majority of the court-room spectators have been women. Youth and old age have been represented in the feminine part of the capacity crowds. A casual glance around the court-room during the proceedings reveals that they are intensely interested in the trial.

Spectators, both men and women arrive early. Hours before the hearing is scheduled to open, crowds throng the corridors leading to the court-room. When the doors open, they file in quietly to their seats.

When the McFarland murder trial opens next week, it will see a repetition of the same keen interest. The young Frankford couple will face a joint charge of the murder of Gordon Archer, 18-months-old son of Mrs. McFarland, whose body was found floating in the Trent River in July.

NAZI DOWNED NAZI

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—German anti-aircraft fighters at Le Havre got their man when a Messerschmitt and a British plane tangled there—but it was their own man. The Messerschmitt plunged, hit by German A.A. fire.

MANY QUALITIES IN ARMY NURSES

Matron-in-Chief of Canada's Blue-Uniformed Sisters Tells of Them

By GLADYS ARNOLD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 31—(CP)— Good health, education and professional background, character, adaptability and ordinary common sense are all part of the business of being a nursing sister in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, said Miss Elizabeth Smellie, matron-in-chief.

If, in addition, the girl in blue is of medium height and build, between 25 and 35 and pleasing to the eye, so much the better, Miss Smellie added.

However, regulations state simply that applicants for enlistment must be: British subject, physically fit for military training, unmarried or widow under 45 without children, graduate of recognized hospital and accredited with provincial nurses' association.

Already Canada has 162 nursing sisters serving in England, each of them enlisted only after a thorough health examination that includes an x-ray of the chest. Thousands of applications have been submitted for overseas service, Miss Smellie said, and right now more than 4,000 names are on the waiting list.

"Letters come each day from highly qualified women in Canada and the United States as well who want to serve Canada and the allied cause," the matron-in-chief added.

Nurses today are highly trained and efficient, but not conspicuously better than those of a generation ago. Present facilities for training in Canada are much greater than during the First Great War, and the general educational level is higher, she said.

A nurse, like a soldier, must know the meaning of self-discipline, and not get rattled or emotional in an emergency. Just as in peacetime work, the army nurse must be quick, cool and efficient, able to work with others and possessing the human touch.

So far as appearances go, taking pride in their appearance as well as pride in their work, is desirable. Nevertheless, nursing sisters are not overwhelmed with minute regulations as to detail of personal behavior.

LIGHTER MATERIAL IN BOMB-BAY DOOR

Baltimore Concern Claims Maximum Strength in Minimum Weight

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 31 (CP). — Lighter but stronger materials—the never ending search in aircraft construction—are reported by the Glenn L. Martin Company here. The company claims an achievement in a "bomb-bay" door, fourteen feet long, weighing but 41 pounds and stressed to bear more than 1½ tons. The material is wood, a special plywood, and a strong plastic.

It should be explained the bomb-bay doors on a bomber plane are part of the underside contour and are thrown open by the plane's "bombardier" just before he is ready to release the lethal eggs over the objective.

MORE BIG PLANES BUT NO SEAT "13"

Six New 14-Passenger Ships Going Into Trans-Canada Commission

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP). — Trans-Canada Air Lines' passenger fleet will be increased by arrival of six sleek new airplanes—but, technically they won't carry that thirteenth passenger.

An Air Lines spokesman said the new plane—the Lockheed Lodestar—would carry fourteen passengers and a crew of three, but the seats will number from one to fifteen because "thirteen" will be omitted.

"I guess you could call it superstition," the spokesman said. "People making their first flight probably would object to sitting in a seat numbered 13."

The planes now in use—the Lockheed Super-Electras—carry ten passengers and a crew of three, and the seats number to 10. The Lodestars, considered faster and more efficient than the present model, will be delivered from the Lockheed factory in Los Angeles, Calif. Arrival of the machines will bring the TCA passenger fleet strength to 21.

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

The man seated at Nevins' right said, "What do you think of Herr. Polk's reigning favorite?"

CHAPTER ONE.

Coins jingled opulently in Mr. Howard Nevin's pocket as he tossed a half-dollar to the expectantly grinning Chinese bell-boy who murmured thanks. After quite uselessly rearranging sundry battered and belabeled bags and rod and gun cases, the boy slipped out, closing the door behind him.

For an instant, Nevins . . . a lean figure with restless eyes and what looked like a silent mouth . . . stood in the centre of his room, peering out at Honolulu's curiously polyglot architecture.

He started a little when the room telephone began to shrill with truly American impatience. A surprised frown creased Nevin's high brown forehead as he caught up the receiver. Who the devil could this be? Surely couldn't be any of the steamer crowd already.

"Hello," he said.

"Is this Mr. Howard Nevins?" It was a woman's voice . . . deep, musical, and yet matter-of-fact.

"Yes. What can I do for you?"

"Nothing for me; but much for yourself," came the cryptic reply. "I do not think you are going to like Hawaii."

Howard Nevins' muscular hand tightened gradually over the receiver. "Are you sure," he inquired, "that I am the Mr. Nevins you want?"

A low, vibrant laugh sounded in his ear. "Oh, beyond any question. I have been informed very authoritatively on the subject."

Slowly, certain muscles drawn across the newcomer's lean cheeks began to tighten, and his gray-blue eyes fixed themselves on the wall before him.

"To whom am I indebted for this interesting bit of soothsaying?"

"I am someone who wishes to avoid unnecessary unpleasantness. Be a wise man, Mr. Nevins. Take my advice and go back aboard the Malolo. I am sure—in fact, I am positive—that you would not enjoy Hawaii."

Nevins' voice copied the semi-bantering tone of the unknown. "On the contrary," he replied, "I am beginning to like it. Mystery appeals to me—and you represent mystery."

"You're wrong, Mr. Nevins," said the voice; a curiously indefinable menace dominated it, "I represent tragedy. You must go."

"I'm afraid not," replied the occupant of Room 1533. "I really must see more of this charming island."

"All that you are likely to see," the unknown woman warned, "is the inside of a chilled room at Tripler General's . . . morgue."

Thus he was somewhat prepared for the shock her next words gave him. "Your friend, Major Cross, ended there, and another friend of yours may also."

"Too bad about Jerry Cross, wasn't it?" he commented calmly. "I never believed that suicide theory, you know."

"Then, monsieur, you are stupider than I have been led to believe Please take my word for it, Mr. Nevins, you have arrived too late. If you persist in interfering with my arrangements, it will simply be a case of 'good-bye', or 'sayo-nara', as the Japanese say."

"Decent of you to translate the word," the traveller murmured, "otherwise it would have worried me."

"Helas!" the voice at the far end of the phone sounded almost mournful. "I had so hoped you would be reasonable."

"I am reasonable—in fact I'm famous for my reasonableness."

"But you are not, which is a pity; for now I shall have to have you killed."

"Ever hear of Mark Twain's receipt for chicken-pot pie?"

"Comment?"

"First you catch the chicken——"

Click went the receiver, and Howard Nevins remained staring at the wall, while his right hand crept towards his pocket and brought out a handkerchief which he passed gently over his face.

"So Cross and the other boy let me down. Well——"

He turned and, with a grim smile, began to unpack.

Chairs grated gently on the tile floor of Abner Polk's big dining room and white-jacketed Filipino footmen rushed forward, ready to pull back the chairs still further.

"Shouldn't wonder but it'd be cooler downstairs, gentlemen," observed the man at the head of the table, a powerfully built, square-jawed individual with a mass of short, iron-gray hair, "so let's give the ladies a few minutes' start and then join them for coffee on the float. What do you say, Mr. Nevins?" he asked the guest on his right.

"Seems like a sound idea," Nevins, in blue serge and white flannels, agreed. "The phosphorus ought to be splendid until the moon rises."

Momentarily Nevins' head turned to gaze out on a purple-black expanse of sea some fifty feet below. He abandoned his inspection when the three ladies of the party arose with their brightly hued evening gowns glowing against the whiteness of the dining-room walls like gay daubs of paint on a new palette.

In a murmur of conversation the ladies prepared to leave.

"Be along in a jiffy," cried a red-cheeked young Coast Artillery officer on whose round face was stamped a look of perpetual wonder. "We've only got the fate of the world to settle."

"Alors, messieurs, promise not to be selfish and talk all night about this silly Tientsin affair?"

With a deceptive casualness the man at the host's right swiftly surveyed the figure of the speaker from head to foot as, in the act of turning, she paused, with one slender and jewelled hand resting lightly on the back of her chair. Something feline—that was what she resembled. Sleek, graceful and strong was Phedre Renoire.

With pale and regular features set in a half-earnest, half-mocking smile, she cast a lingering glance, first, at the imposing figure of the great millionaire who was the host. Then, in a pretty, unspoken appeal, she included the group of sombre-faced men whose white dinner coats made their faces look even more deeply sunburned than they actually were.

"You'll come right down then?" she insisted.

While the rest of the company chorused an assent, the man at Nevins' right, who had eaten heartily and who had ventured barely a dozen words during the course of the elaborate dinner, suddenly leaned close, winked, and, with a gross chuckle, inquired:

"What do you think of Herr Polk's reigning favorite?"

'Mademoiselle Renoire is as beautiful as she is charming," Nevins replied, without taking his eyes from that graceful figure whose black hair served as a superb contrast for a simple and wickedly sophisticated yellow evening gown.

Then, in a subtle rebuke, he added, "And she has all the tact of her race—eh, Baron?"

Von Rentner's lips contracted a little.

"Ja, but like most of her race she worships gold. You Americans are not half so bad as the French when it comes to that."

"Thanks, but I maintain Mademoiselle Renoire doesn't look her role," Nevins repeated sotto voce. "Have you any idea why she came to be associated with that—"

The German's shouders interrupted with a curt shrug. "As I haff said, money is the reason. It takes much money to buy clothes like that." He laughed knowingly. "How well I know it."

"I wonder . . ." the American continued as he pulled a panetela from his case. "Somehow, she interests me and well, she looks too well-bred—. How long have she and Mr. Polk been—er—friends?"

"For a big game hunter you are a remarkable psychologist." The German's small blue eyes flickered sidewise as though in sudden suspicion but, as the American was idly twirling his newly lit cigar, he continued. "I think they haff known each other about three months. She stays always here on Oahu and keeps Kalua—this house—ready for him. Ja, my friend Polk, he travels much between Oahu and the mainland."

The big game hunter nodded to himself. "Oh, I see—I was wondering why she wasn't on the Malolo with us."

CHAPTER TWO.

Young Lieutenant Clark's deep voice broke in on the conversation, saying: "Don't be afraid, Miss Renoire. Honest, we'll be down in a minute. A man in his right senses can't stay away from you."

"An idiot!" grunted Baron von Rentner, fixing the speaker with a baleful stare. "In the Reich army such remarks would not be made in mix-ed company."

Polk aroused himself from a low-pitched conversation with a slender, always smiling Japanese who had sat at his left during dinner. Nevins heard him say distinctly:

"Well, Mr. Kanamura, I'm afraid you're too pessimistic. I'm quite sure there will be no war." A special emphasis lay heavily on that last sentence.

Von Rentner and the Japanese both looked up so quickly that they attracted the calm scrutiny of the sportsman's restless gray-blue eyes.

"What makes you so sure, mein freund?" Baron von Rentner demanded with a heavy geniality belying the sudden flush that rose above his stiff white collar.

Abner Polk looked grimly away. "We in the iron and steel business have ways of knowing. Besides, I think the peoples of the world are at last getting fed up with war."

Apparently the word "war" was a torch to a hitherto sealed verbal magazine, for the girl whom all Honolulu knew as the fabulously wealthy Abner Polk's favorite halted in the doorway, and with her also stopped a tawny young woman, and a vivacious maiden of uncertain age.

"Oh," gushed the latter, "I've been dying to talk of it all night." And she led the almost eager return of the ladies to the silver-and-crystal-littered table, where the napkins lay like tiny collapsed tents at each place.

Only Phedre Renoire's dark eyes stared uneasily about. Then she paused just beyond the sportsman's chair and said a little breathlessly to the Japanese, "Oh, I am sure it is simply hysteria, this war talk. Don't you think so too, Mr. Kanamura?"

Evidently Mr. Kanamura was a little disconcerted by the directness of this query, for he blinked two or three times behind his gold-rimmed spectacles before he said: "I am sure the affair will be amicably settled. Is that not so, Mr. Nevins?"

"Please say it is just ugly talk," Phedre Renoire pleaded, while her large black eyes seemed to find strong elements of interest in Nevins.

"Why," demanded the big game hunter plaintively, "do rows like this always have to happen when I want a bit of sport? I come all the way to Hawaii to enjoy some deep sea fishing and, just because of it, Japan and America start calling each other names."

"You have not answered me," Phedre Renoire pointed out. "I really must insist on it, in spite of your delightful evasion."

"Look here, Mademoiselle Renoire," protested the Coast Artillery officer, "let's not get that started again. You know how strongly we all feel about it — the murder of American citizens—"

"Murder?" From across the table where a silver bowl of hibiscus glowed like living fire, the Japanese had straightened a little, and though his thin lips were still drawn into a smile, the look he bent on the white clad artillery officer was of a sort that prompted Nevins to pour water on fast-kindling sparks.

"I say, let's go down, the coffee might be getting cold."

Catherine Lloyd, the lithe American girl who had sat facing the host, refused to take the hint.

"No," she cried. "I was at Joyce Carmen's this morning and I heard all kinds of talk about what would happen when the Jap fleet arrives."

"Mercy!" Miss Sutherland, the Englishwoman, clasped bony hands in elaborate alarm. "What did they say?"

"They say that the Japs have secret orders"—she cast a challenging look at Kanamura—"to shell Honolulu! And if—"

Quite abruptly the speaker fell silent; the company became rigid at the sound of a scream outside. It was unmistakably the cry of some human in extreme terror or fearful pain.

"Du lieber Gott!" cried von Rentner hoarsely and thrust his blunt head far out of the window.

"Why — why, what was that?" stammered Catherine Lloyd.

"It was maybe a sea bird?" suggested Kanamura with a sudden uneasiness that made his eyes waver behind their golden spectacles. "What do you think, Mr. Nevins? You are familiar with wild life, no?"

"It might have been," Nevins said briefly. His eyes wandered over the startled faces of the company until they came to rest upon the normally facile features of Phedre Renoire. Now they were quite stiff and pale.

"Mais oui—it must have been a bird," she murmured quickly. "I see no boat out there."

"There must be a boat," insisted the owner of Kalua, who had also become strangely subdued. "And it didn't sound like any bird I ever heard."

"Well, there's surely no light out there, nor any boat— and I've good eyes," Clark agreed after studying the sea. "Guess it was just a freak echo. There's usually a bunch of beach boys and their girl friends foolin' 'round yonder." He jerked his head to the left.

"That's probably it," Abner Polk hurriedly agreed and turned to select a cigar from an elaborate mahogany humidor.

Just then the Filipino butler, excited, hurried in with a newspaper across the front page of which ran a black scarehead three inches high: "JAPAN SENDS U. S. ULTIMATUM!" And in a slightly smaller type: "Shells Kill More Americans Guarding Transpacific Property! War Demanded!"

The reactions of the various guests to this second shock were characteristic. Kanamura drew in his breath with a little hissing sound.

"They've done it," cried Lieutenant Clark excitedly. "Do you see? They've killed more Americans! That will mean war!"

"By heavens, von Rentner, this is outrageous," stormed Abner Polk. "I told you—I—"

"Herr Polk!" The Prussian stiffened and his mouth set itself in a hard cruel line.

"Doubtlessly," broke in the Japanese calmly, "the newspapers in my country are saying things equally ridiculous."

"Wilson!" Desperately Catherine Lloyd caught at Lieutenant Clark's white-clad arm. "Please remember—"

The Coast Artillery officer turned a flushed face. "But did you hear what he said?" he growled. "Such news is not ridiculous!"

CALGARY BRONKS ENDORSE PLAN

Suggestion Made That One of the Games be Played Under Western Rules

Calgary, Oct. 31 (CP)—Alf Williams, President of the Calgary Bronks Football Club, said here last night he is "all for" the east-west football game proposed in Toronto for Dec. 7, under auspices of the Sports Service League.

Williams endorsed a suggestion by John Bannerman, President of the Canadian Rugby Union, that two games be played, one under western rules.

"Bronks will be willing to go east if they win the western championship," said Williams, "but as we expect to lose the services of several players who are members of the Canadian Active Service Force I would suggest that if we win an all-star western be picked to represent the west. That would give the east the best possible brand of football whether played under eastern or western rules."

Mr. Williams said the east would pass up a chance to make the event "outstanding" if no opportunity is given the western team to show its "modern, wide-open, thrilling type of play as compared with the antiquated eastern rules."

Montreal Coach Believes Few Changes Will Bring Victory Against Ottawa on Saturday

Doug Stewart in R.C.A.F. and Former O.A.C. Star Will Quarterback Team

TIGERS PLAY ARGOS

A Win for Toronto Club Will Clinch a Playoff Berth

One of the curious things about Coach Bill Hughes of Montreal's Big Four football team is that he still has a hope that his club will defeat Ottawa Rough Riders this Saturday, despite the fact the Montreal team has won only one game in four and the Riders have won three of their contests.

Hughes doesn't exactly go around telling everyone that the Montreal team is going to win, for it would be pretty hard to discover a football fan in the East who thinks this will happen. But he isn't ready yet to concede victory to the Riders.

The Montreal coach plans to make a few changes in the line-up for the game Saturday but so far has kept mum on his proposed shifts. From the way the Montrealers have been working out, however, it seems apparent that Doug Stewart, a member of the Ontario Agricultural College team last year, may get the call to go in at quarterback.

Stewart, stationed with the Royal Canadian Air Force here, is small but shifty and has impressed in drills. Another newcomer is likely to be 230-pound Tom Glenn, who started out drilling this season with Riders but obtained employment in Montreal.

Another recent addition to the Montreal team, Norm Bertrand, is likely to see plenty of action in the backfield. Bertrand has only been working out with the team for a short while. He was used sparingly in the game against Hamilton Tigers last week, showing up well.

In the other Big Four contest this Saturday Tigers play Toronto Argonauts. Like the Montrealers, the Tigers are faced with the problem of winning both their remaining games, and must count on a Montreal victory over either Riders or Argonauts, to gain a place in the two-team league play-offs.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

Apparently the Kingston pre-season hockey league isn't meeting with any too much success this year, only two teams signified intentions of entering the junior section of the league when they met recently. The Van Horne entries haven't been called as yet, but rumors are out to indicate the senior section will not have as many entries as usual either. War conditions are doubtless the answer. The junior section of the league is in charge of Lorne Cook, formerly of the old Intelligencer staff, and Star Reid. We received communication from Mr. Cook yesterday seeking a Belleville entry into the junior section of the Kingston pre-season loop. The letter was immediately turned over to the management of the Quintes for consideration. It is understood that Wally Elmer's strong Kingston Lions junior "B" squad will be entered in the Kingston loop, which is no great inducement to the smaller centres to compete and get continually slapped around so Coach Elmer and his pucksters can obtain early season practice at the expense of others.

It's all over insofar as the competition in the Bay of Quinte Senior Interscholastic football group is concerned. Coach Merley Baker's 'scarlet scourge' from the Belleville Collegiate journeyed to Cobourg yesterday and came home on the long end of a 19 to 2 score. This gives the 'Collegians' three wins as against no losses and first place without a struggle. It rained throughout the entire game and fumbles were aplenty. However, the B.C.I. line held splendidly yesterday. On three occasions the courageous Cobourg squad had the Baker-led team inside of their own five-yard line, but no score resulted of a serious nature. In their three games to date the Belleville squad has scored 55 points, as against three scored against them. Belleville beat Cobourg 22-0 here, 19 to 2 yesterday and trounced Albert College 14 to 1 last week. While the locals were in Cobourg Coach Pete Beach had his Alberts to Kingston, where they lost 11 to 1 in an exhibition game versus Regiopolis College. Albert and the B. C. I. conclude the group schedule next week.

Bowmanville High School won the Lake Shore C.O.S.S.A. Senior Interscholastic group by beating Peterboro C. I. 7-0 right in the Liftlock City last Saturday. From the outstart the former "rubber town" gridders were considered tops in their loop and had little difficulty in disposing of Oshawa and Peterboro and they now await the Belleville "scarlet scourge" in the Interscholastic playdowns. Bill Brown, ace Bowmanville backfielder, was the big noise versus Peterboro', but according to Peterboro Fred Craig, the suburb of Oshawa boasts of a strong sturdy front line, that is heavy and hits hard, a factor that goes far in the formation of a good football squad. The Bowmanville team tricked the Petes for the only major score of their game. It seems McIlveen is the regular forward pitcher for Bowmanville, but late in the third stanza Saturday a lad named Slemin, who usually was on the receiving end of forwards all season, dropped back and rifled a pass to Brown. This is just one of the many smart plays the Bowmanville squad possess.

Did you know that—Twin sons born to Catcher Harry Danning of the Giants, died 30 minutes after birth last week?......Preparations to put the Hume Arena in readiness for hockey will commence on Nov. 1st this year?.... The Wellington Arena may be used for military training purposes this winter......If so, don't be at all surprised if a new corrigated iron-top rink is erected in Picton as a community effort ......The Trenton Softball League is to hold a social evening to honor their champions, the R. C. A. F. "Flyers" on Friday night? ......And for those locally interested, the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association will hold its annual meeting in Toronto on Saturday. Any delegates interested?

Do you remember when Mike Sullivan, who held the world welterweight boxing championship for three years after his 1907 win from Honey Melody, then went up to fight in the middleweight class, died three years ago today after 24 years in retirement. Sullivan fought in 41 bouts and was defeated only twice in 12 years of boxing.

Now they're getting some place in the matter of mutual feelings in Canadian football circles. The heads of the C.R.U. approved of Controller Fred Hamilton's idea of an east-west game to be played in Toronto and even went so far as to propose two such games, one under the eastern and the other under western playing rules. By introducing the playing regulations of the western conference before eastern officials and fans, perhaps a mutual compromise to uniform the rugby football rules of the C.R.U. may yet be realized, thanks to the energetic red Hamilton, whose far-seeing ability was always accepted.

SPORTS GRIDDLE — Vince DiMaggio's U. S. draft number was fortieth on call in his district for military training, the younger DiMaggio is with the Pirates.... Louis Stringer, for whom the Cubs paid $50,000 recently, was 49th in his draft at Los Angeles also...... Brantford has a junior "C" team in the O.H.A., which they call the "Cees"......Stumping for Wendle Willkie, Champion Joe Louis drew draft No. 2,611 and says he's ready and willing to serve his country where needed the greatest.......Doug Runnions is out with the Port Colborne "Sailors" again...... Understand the local girls' softball heads will fete the entire league soon.

REDS SEE 1941 ANOTHER YEAR

Not Resting on Laurels, World Ball Champs Look to Their Farm System

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 31—(CP)—The Cincinnati Reds have won the World Series this year and the National League pennant for two straight years — but they're not standing pat!

Frank C. Lane, director of the Reds' nine-club farm system, has a flock of youngsters coming up for trials next spring. Some of them probably will be regulars with the Reds next season. Others will be available for call at any time.

Frank would like nothing better than to discover a better pitcher than Paul Derringer or Bucky Walters, a better first baseman than Frank McCormick or a better catcher than Ernie Lombardi.

Not that he wants to put these able gentlemen out of jobs, but they know as well as Frank that some day old man Time will put the clutch on them.

Frank is pretty proud of the farm teams this year. Bassett, Va., won the Bi-State pennant, Tuscon, the team in the Arizona-Texas that the Reds picked up for $500, won the second half down, Ogden in the Pioneer league, Durham in the Piedmont and Lenoir, N.C., in the Tar Heel, all went into final playoff series in their respective loops.

George Murphy and charming Brenda Joyce in a romantic mood in Elsa Maxwell's "Public Deb. No. 1" hilarious new comedy hit, now on the Belle screen.

N. H. L. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

Charlie Conacher is going great guns for New York Americans in the pre-season training games. Conacher, once known as the Big Bomber in his days with the Toronto Maple Leafs, scored two goals last night although his team lost 5-3 to New York Rangers. Conacher duplicated this feat in another of the exhibition games between the two clubs. The six-game series between the two teams ended with each side getting three victories.

Montreal Canadiens had an easy time winning 5-0 over the amateur Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League last night. Right winger Tony Demers, rated with Charlie Conacher as having one of the hardest shots in the League, tallied two of the goals for the National Hockey League club. It was goalie Bert Gardiner's second shutout in six exhibition games. Gardiner and the Canadiens hold a 1-0 decision over New Haven Eagles of the American League.

Last night was quite a night for "doubles" among National Hockey League players. of besides Demers and Conacher, little Clint Smith of New York Rangers also turned in a two-goal effort. Smith scored both his goals in the second period of the game, one unassisted and the other on a pass from Kilby MacDonald.

Chicago Black Hawks had the day off yesterday. Manager Paul Thompson gave them respite from practice and said there would be no further exercise for the team until tonight when an exhibition game is played at St. Paul, Minn., against the St. Paul Saints of the American Association. The Hawks already hold a 7-2 decision over the Saints in a best-of-three series. The third game will be played Sunday night.

REV. L. HARDING BECOMESMINISTER STIRLING CHURCH

Induction Service at St. John's Anglican Church Taken by Bishop Lyons

MANY ATTEND

Stirling, Oct. 31 (Special)—The auditorium of St. John's Church of England at Stirling was filled to the doors on Tuesday evening, Oct. 29th., as members of the Stirling and Frankford congregations of the Parish along with friends from all parts of the district joined to witness the impressive induction service of the Rev Leslie Harding as Rector of the parish of Stirling and Frankford. The Rt. Rev. John Lyons M.A., D.D., the Lord Bishop of Ontario conducted the inspiring service assisted by the Rev. A. B. Caldwell, Rural Dean of Hastings and the clergy of the Deaneries of Hastings and Prince Edward. Evening prayers were read by Canon T. Austin Smith of Trenton and the lesson was read by Canon Swayne L.Th. of Bonarlaw. The scriptural portions of admonition were read by the following members of the visiting clergy; at the font, Rev. A. B. Caldwell, Rural Dean of Hastings; At the prayer desk, Rev. G. G. Wright of Belleville; At the lectern, Rev. H. Pringle, Rural Dean of Lennox and Addington; At the pulpit, Rev. A. E. Pepper of Tweed and Charlie Chan helps Robert Lowery win the girl, Marjorie Weaver, in "Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise," new mystery thriller at the Belle. Sidney Toler has the title role in the film.

At the altar, the Rt. Rev. John Lyons M.A., D.D., Lord Bishop of Ontario. Other members of the clergy present included Rev. F. C. Beazer, Roslin; R. H. Braman, Lombardy; Rev. J. L. Hutchinson of Trenton was Bishop's Chaplain; Rev. A. Reading of Bannockburn; Rev. W. J. Robinson of Trenton. The induction sermon delivered by Rev. J. G. Sparling L. Th., Rector of St. Peter's Church, Brockville.

Splendid Music

The combined choirs of St. John's and Trinity Churches under the capable guidance of Mrs. H. A. Morrow who presided at the organ throughout the service offered an inspiring and appropriate musical selection from the new hymnary set to an ancient Irish air.

Basing his thoughts on the text "Follow Me and I will make you fishers of men." Rev. Sparling delivered an impressive sermon in which he charged the new Rector with his responsibility to the church, its people and his God. He also charged the congregation with their responsibility of support to the Rector in the days to come, God had seen fit to send them. Rev. Harding as their Rector, with them was the responsibility of undivided support, that his work may be unhampered by trivial matters from which he should be entirely relieved by those appointed to various assisting offices within the church.

Rev. Leslie Harding

The new Rector of St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, and Trinity Church, Frankford, has been in the district sufficiently long to already enjoy the warm friendship of many. An accomplished musican, he is choirmaster of St. John's Church and under his leadership, the organization is moving rapidly forward Since the age of fourteen he has studied piano and organ; he studied theory at the Kitchener Conservatory of Music under Prof. Zeigler; upon entering a ministerial career he studied theology at Wycliffe College, Toronto. While there he was appointed organist in the college chapel; previously he was organist at his home church at Waterloo, Ont., and at Trinity Church, King St., Toronto.

While attending university played in the C.O.T.C. band under Capt. John Slatter. Keenly interested in sports he played left wing on the college soccer football team.

He was born in London, England, came to Canada at an early age with his parents, who settled and still reside at Waterloo, Ontario.

On June 1st 1930 Mr. Harding was ordained a Deacon, and the following year was ordained a priest. His first parish was a mission in Pittsburgh, Ontario, and comes to Stirling after eight years of successful ministry at Kitley, Ont., succeeding Rev. A. S. McConnell.

Reception Held

Directly after the induction service a reception was held in the Memorial Hall, where Rev. and Mrs. Harding, and all the visiting and assisting clergy along with the Lord Bishop received greetings from members and officials of both churches. Other friends of the district present for both functions included Rev. W. H. V. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and Mrs. Walker. The formal duty performed at such functions by the Wardens was capably executed by Mr. J. B. Belshaw and Mr. A. E. Caskey, Rector's Wardens; E. A. Carleton M.D., K. Arnott, People's Wardens.

Get-Together Club Formed

Nearly 350 persons of all ages gathered at St. Andrew's Church on Monday evening for the purpose of organizing a "Congregational Get-together Club" which will meet twice a month and include within its membership all members old and young. Present last evening were the members of the Kirk Session, Board of Managers, officers and members of the W.M.S. and the Ladies Aid, while the program for the evening was prepared and given by the members of the Sunday School under the direction of Mr. Harper Rollins, S. S. Supt. During the discussion period which followed the program, it was decided that the new organization should be established, and should be called "St. Andrew's Congregational Get-Together Club." The church official board of managers was appointed as a nominating committee to bring in a slate of officers to direct its functioning. As a result of the work of this committee Art Duncan was appointed president, Mrs. Harper Rollins, vice president and Miss Gena Spry secretary-treasurer. The executive committee will include one representative from each organization of the church, such as W.M.S., Ladies Aid, Board of Managers, Kirk Session and the choir with each of these groups being responsible in turn for the provision of suitable programs. The Young People's Guild will continue to function as a unit within this larger club which will meet every second Monday.

Fine Program by S. S.

Accepting the responsibility for the first program under this new arrangement the student body and teaching staff of the S.S. under Mr. Harper Rollins did an excellent job. The meeting opened with a brief devotional period conducted by the minister with Miss Mae Johnston reading the scripture lesson and Miss Shirley Ormiston presiding at the piano. For the program of entertainment Mr. Rollins acted as chairman. The first number was a patriotic sketch and chorus by the school children with leading parts taken by Mary Agnes and Doreen Fox, Dora Rodgers, Bob Tulloch and Rowan Walker. Mrs. C. Tummon presided at the piano. Other fine numbers included readings by Mrs. A. Hammond, Mary Agnes Fox, Carolyn Rollins; a vocal duet by Marilyn Eggleton and Arlene Tummon; musical selection by Wm. Jones and vocal trios by Miss G. Poynter, Mr. W. Jones and Art Duncan.

The speaker of the evening was A. Duncan, who delivered an interesting talk on the subject "Fables, rhymes and their relations to present day life." Following the program a discussion period was held followed by the appointment of officers to continue the work. Mr. Earl Ormiston, treasurer of the Board of Managers, expressed the gratitude of the gathering to those responsible for the fine program. Following the singing of the National Anthem luncheon was served by the ladies and a social period enjoyed.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Stage to Chino"

The top western of the year, "Stage to Chino" starring George O'Brien, ace action star of the screen is now showing at the McCarthy theatre.

The plot resolves about a brand-new theme for such films — the adventures of the postal inspectors who supervised mail-carrying on the stage coach routes which traversed the Western deserts and mountains, bringing passengers, supplies and news to the remote communities.

The noted outdoor star plays the role of such an inspector who discovers crooked work going on a stage line owned by a young girl. As it is part of his duty to investigate anything pertaining to the U.S. mails he gets a job as a driver on the line in question and soon finds himself involved in a complicated plot aimed at wrecking the company,

How he unmasks the criminals behind the scheme saves the line and the mail contract for its owner and brings the crooks to justice after a colorful struggle makes up the basis of this action-crammed western. Excellently played by the principal characters and maintaining its interest and suspense at a high peak as the story progresses, "Stage to Chino" ranks at the top of the western productions from R.K.O. Radio studios this year.

"Black Diamonds"

Starring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in a screen play which combines perilous action with adventure and comedy the new Universal feature production "Black Diamonds" is also now showing at the McCarthy theatre. This latest Arlen-Devine hit surpasses by far their most recent production "Mutiny On the Blackhawk" and patrons to the McCarthy theatre this weekend are assured of enjoying two excellent screen presentations in the showing of George O'Brien in "Stage to Chino" and Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in "Black Diamonds."

AT THE BELLE

"Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise

Charlie Chan on board a luxury liner hunting the most cold-blooded strangler he ever trailed!

That's the fare in "Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise", the 20th Century-Fox film, which is now on the Belle Theatre screen with Sidney Toler again in the title role.

Suspense, action and thrills keynote this gripping tale of Chan's perilous hunt for his deadly adversary. Chan has his most baffling case to date when his friend, Inspector Duff of Scotland Yard, asks him to aid in the capture of a maniacal strangler—and the Inspector is murdered before he can tell what he knows!

Charlie stalks the killer with revenge in his heart. Cleverly giving him all the rope he wants, Chan tricks the unidentified strangler into admitting his guilt in a way that will leave audiences breathless.

Toler is tops as usual in his role of Charlie, while Marjorie Weaver, Lionel Atwill, Sen Yung and Robert Lowery turn in grand supporting roles, as do Don Beddoe, Leo Carroll, Cora Witherspoon, Kay Linaker and Harlan Briggs.

Laugh-Jammed Comedy

All the laughter you've been asking for is promised in Elsa Maxwell's "Public Deb. No. 1" the 20th Century-Fox film which is the added comedy feature. Produced by Darryl F. Zanuck, the new comedy boasts a sparkling cast headed by George Murphy and Brenda Joyce.

It's funny right from the start when Brenda, a spoiled but beautiful heiress turns "Leftist" under the influence of her "Rooshian" butler (from Brooklyn), played by Misha Auer. Things go from bad to worse, when Brenda's penniless boy friend, George Murphy spanks her in public in an effort to bring her to her senses and the fun gets hilarious when she tries to get even.

Others in the strong cast of "Public Deb. No. 1" are Elsa Maxwell, Mischa Auer, Charlie Ruggles, Ralph Bellamy, Maxie Rosenbloom, Berton Churchill and Franklin Pangborn.

"Vacation Time in Florida", a beautiful Traveltalk in Technicolor will be exhibited on the same program.

Complaints Relative to Increase Of Rentals in Belleville Are Few

City Has Not Been Placed in War Board Area in Respect to Rentals, Says Justice W. M. Martin

MEET AT TRENTON

Complaints relative to increase of rentals in Belleville have been at the minimum, as a matter of fact so few complaints have been registered with the Dominion Rental Enquiry Board, that Belleville has not been placed under the jurisdiction of the Board nor has a meeting to discuss such measures been necessary as yet, was revealed by Judge W. M. Martin, Judge of the Supreme Court of Saskatchewan and mediator at the sitting of the Rental Administration Acting Wartime Prices and Trades Board, held in the town hall at Trenton yesterday.

The situation in Belleville pertaining to protests of tenants regarding increased rentals came during the Trenton session when Rev. W. J. Province, Padre at the R.C.A.F., presented a collective list of 26 protests, two of which were said to be from members of the R.C.A.F. now residing in Belleville. "We haven't Belleville under our control at the present time. As a matter of fact there have been relatively few protests of cases received from that city and we will not convene there at this time," admitted His Lordship, Mister Justice Martin, as he heard 32 cases in Trenton yesterday.

26 Complaints Heard

Speaking for the 26 signed complaints, Padre Province said, "We have 200 married families residing in Trenton and Belleville for the R.C.A.F. and we have concrete cases where the landlords gave notice to vacate to tenants when the latter refused to accept increased rental fees," explained the Padre.

"Have any of these changes of rentals been since Jan. 1st, 1940? And I might explain here, landlords cannot raise rents as of Jan. 1st, 1940 and tenants do not have to vacate where rents are raised, without the permission of the Board. I might add, however, that landlords can apply to the Board to raise the rents of their properties, where improvements or increased taxes have been made.

"I see the press is with us today and I wish these gentlemen would make it clear to the public, that landlords cannot eject tennants for refusing to pay increased rentals, nor can they be evicted. We have found cases where some landlords take steps to 'skate around' this order, but their cases will be dealt with by the Board. However, I repeat, landlords may seek permission of the Board to raise rents and such will be granted, when it is proven the increase is justifiable," further explained His Lordship as he stressed the fact that under no circumstance may a landlord eject a tenant for refusing to pay increased rentals.

"What if the tenant is in arrears with his rent, can I put him out then?" asked a voice from the body of the court tribunal. "That is another matter to be dealt with otherwise," explained the Bench.

Direct Violation is Claim

Returning to the question of raising rents on the part of landlords, His Lordship pointed out that such practice was in direct violation of the law, if the increase was suggested or made without permission of the Wartime Prices Board.

"There may be cases where local improvements and increased assessment might make increased rentals necessary, I am told," stated Col. E. J. Smith, solicitor for the Town of Trenton in the form of a question and the Bench added that under such circumstances the Board would naturally look with favor.

In the matter where a house is sub-let, Judge Martin stated where additional tenants were in a house under such circumstances there would "naturally be more wear and tear on the premises," but any proposed increase would be directly to the owner, thereof. His Honor scrutinized several written complaints, but did not deal with any specific case yesterday afternoon. The tribunal continues today.

CANADIANS' CLUB IS WELCOME HOME TO MANY NATIONS

Beaver Leave Centre in London Entertains Britain's Fighting Friends of Several Tongues

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—The Beaver Club, sumptuous London leave centre for Canadian troops, has become in less than a year one of the busiest, most cosmopolitan spots in this great Empire capital.

When the club was opened last February only Canadian soldiers availed themselves of the facilities provided for their entertainment and relaxation, and they numbered a scant 200 or 300 a week. Then the welcome sign was hung out for Newfoundlanders and attendance increased gradually as Canadians and Newfoundlanders made new friends among fellow fighters from other nations whom they invited to share the comforts of their club.

Now, nine months after the inauguration, the number of Canadians catered to each week has risen to more than 10,000, and they play host to 2,000 to 3,000 British, Imperial, Free French, Dutch, Polish and Czech soldiers and sailors.

The weekly attendance figure reached 3,000 at the beginning of June. It reached 5,000 by the end of the month and 10,000 about the middle of July. Since mid-August the average weekly attendance has been around 13,000. The week ending Aug. 24 was the busiest yet. The club was used by 14,666 Canadians and Newfoundlanders and 2,063 soldiers from other parts of the world.

Big Business.

It's been a rushing business in all departments of the club. The canteen has had more than 110,000 customers since the club opened. Sales totalling 102,000 were registered by the snack bar and the tuck shop sold more than 60,000 articles.

The club barbers and valets will agree there are no-snappier soliders on the streets of London than the stalwart Canadians. The barbers have given nearly 9,000 haircuts and the valets have pressed about 3,000 uniforms. And some of the men have done their own pressing.

Eight thousand free tickets to cinemas have been distributed and 4,000 men have been sent around London and some county homes for hospitality. Sightseeing tours around London have been arranged for 6,500 soldiers and sailors—and these Canadian fighting men over here are the most avid of tourists.

HITCH-HIKERS "AT OWN RISK"

Sign on Side of Car Helps British Motorists be Generous

London, Oct. 31 (CP).—Pedestrians caught on London's streets during night air raids wondered why so many motorists ignored their endeavors to "thumb" rides. Some indignantly charged the drivers with selfishness.

Then a spokesman for the motorists gave their side of the case. Many drivers, he said, hesitated to offer strangers a lift because their insurance policies did not cover them against injury to passengers.

Lt.-Col. J. Moore-Brabazon, minister of transport, offers this suggestion. Drivers should put a notice on the sides of their cars saying "free lifts at your own risk", he declares. This would absolve them from liability for any injuries suffered by passengers.

The Union United Church held their annual chicken supper on Friday evening and due to the fine evening, a large crowd was in attendance. It is thought the attendance was the largest it has been yet. Those in charge of the tables which were laid in the school rooms, were kept busy handing out the chicken and good things of which there were abundance. The tables were beautifully decorated for the occasion. The program took the form of a two act play, "The Winning Widow", staged by the local young people of the church under the leadership of Mrs. Bert McCarey. This play was much enjoyed by all. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $106.00.

The local Red Cross of Madoc Township held their monthly meeting at the town hall, Eldorado, on Monday evening. A good crowd was in attendance to dispose of the business at hand.

Mrs. Charles D. McCann, Mrs. Harold Pigden, Mrs. Clayton Blackburn and Miss Bernice Hannah attended a pot luck dinner and quilting held at the home of Mrs. Ed Post at Malone on Thursday.

CANADA'S ROLE IS INCREASING

Canadian - Born Minister of War Cabinet Points to Nation's Part in War

St. Petersburg, Fla., Oct. 31 (CP).—Lord Beaverbrooke, Britain's minister of aircraft production, believes Canada will take a role of increasing importance in the struggle against Germany and Italy.

In a letter to W. R. Givens, former president of the Kingston, Ont., Whig-Standard and an old friend of the minister, who is living here, Lord Beaverbrooke wrote recently:

"The key position which Canada holds in the present struggle will not have escaped your notice. It seems likely, too, that the strategic importance of the dominion will become more marked as the war goes on. Everything points that way. We are witnessing another long advance in the development of the country."

Praising the leadership of Prime Minister Churchill as "equal to the hour", and assuring that "we shall not be beaten by any crack in the national morale," Lord Beaverbrooke wrote: "Canada will be proud of the stock from which her people spring."

He said the Battle of Britain rages "with violence", and added: "But the people are sustained by the fighting power of the air force and by the knowledge that the British communities over the seas watch the course of the struggle with sympathy and send us help of the most valuable kindd."

SINEWS OF WAR FROM STURGEON

Caviar-Producing Fish Doing Their Bit in Canada's War Effort

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP).—Even the sturgeon in Canada's lakes and rivers has a place in the war effort and this year they will be responsible for purchase of at least a piece of a warplane. In other words, and according to fisheries department experts, Canada has a good market for caviar in the United States.

If Ontario production is up as production is reported to be in Manitoba, the Dominion will get at least $7,000 in United States money to use for war purposes. Caviar usually sells for $1 a pound and this year prices are rising.

Two factors enter into this tasty situation. First there are the prospects of a shortage for caviar eaters in the U.S. because the war has interfered with importations from Russia. Second, Manitoba expects to ship to the United States this year more than 2,400 pounds of the delectable little fish eggs, 900 pounds more than last year. Last year Manitoba shipped 1,512 pounds and Ontario sent 4,870 pounds to the United States. These two provinces are the big Canadian producers.

Chamber of Commerce Makes Good Will Tour to Frankford

About 100 Members Make Inspection of Bata Plant and Attend Banquet in Evening

MANY ADDRESSES

Frankford, Ont., Oct. 31—(Staff)—This picturesque village of Frankford, nestled among the rugged "Murray hills" and situated on the banks of the majestic Trent River provided an ideal setting on Wednesday afternoon as members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, about one hundred strong, visited this thriving village on a motor cavalcade, good will and better-acquaintance tour to later be guests of the Frankford Chamber of Commerce at a banquet staged in the Community Hall.

Highlighting the program of the afternoon and evening and in which every member of the party showed intense interest, was the personally conducted tour of the Bata Shoe Company's modern manufacturing plant situated just to the south of the village. Members of the party showed considerable surprise at the progress made by this company since their arrival in Canada as has been exemplified by their accomplishment of turning a vacant pasture land into a modern industrial site where over six hundred workers find steady employment and where approximately three thousand pairs of shoes are manufactured daily.

The visitors saw the workers engaged at their various tasks of cutting soles, bottoms, uppers, vamps, etc., all of which go into the manufacture of shoes. From the time they passed through the cutting department until they saw the complete shoe all buffed and polished, placed with its mate in cartons for shipment, the tour was one of utmost interest for all taking part. They viewed the remarkable operations of dozens of intricate machines which turned out a heel or some other part of the shoe with amazing precision and walked along the actual assembly lines where the shoes could be seen taking shape as they passed from one operator to the next along the production line. From the whirring stitching machines to the giant vulcanisers for setting the soles of rubber-soled shoes, the visitors were given a comprehensive insight into the art of shoe-making.

Many expressed surprise at the modernistic facilities noted in the immense five-storey building. With its high ceilings, modern ventilation and heating equipment, wash and rest rooms on every floor, the building provides the ultimate in working comfort.

Convening at the Community Hall following their tour of the Bata plant, the members of the Belleville party, together with an almost equal number from the Frankford Chamber of Commerce, sat down to a sumptuous repast during which a program of community singing, led by Sandy Burrows, toasts and other musical selections was enjoyed.

The first toast of the evening was to "His Gracious Majesty," following which Mr. G. W. Dickson, President of the Frankford Chamber of Commerce, favoured those present with a few short introductory remarks. Mr. Dickson extended a hearty welcome to the visitors, asserting his pleasure at being present at such an enthusiastic gathering. The speaker said that in forming their Chamber of Commerce, which was now only six months old, men from all walks of life had been represented. He outlined the work already accomplished and asked for suggestions as to future activity.

Tour for Friendship

"We have come to Frankford with the sole purpose of cultivating better friendship," stated Mr. Irvine G. Hefkey, President of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, as he opened his chairman's address, saying that he looked upon Frankford as one of the most beautiful villages in the county, surrounded as it is with rugged hills and picturesque valleys. "Frankford has become prosperous and we are proud that the Bata Shoe Company which is responsible for this prosperity, has chosen this district in which to locate. They are, indeed, an asset to the community," stated Mr. Hefkey, and he, for one, was amazed at the progress made, and at the efficiency of their workers and machines as was exemplified by the afternoon's tour of the plant. Bata products are exported to many foreign countries, aiding considerably in Canada's foreign exchange. In conclusion he wished the Bata company continued success in this great Dominion of Canada.

The toast to "The Village of Frankford" was proposed by Mr. Chas. Dolan in a most capable and witty manner and was responded to by Rev. J. F. Lane of Frankford, who stated "that the value of a place is measured by the type of people living there". He paid tribute to the men who carried on in Frankford during the depression days, thus making it possible for others to enjoy its present prosperity. In more serious vein he declared that Frankford, the same as any other community, would not continue to prosper if its inhabitants forego the one essential of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

In proposing the toast to "The City of Belleville", Mr. Thomas Bata, president of the Bata Shoe Company of Canada Ltd., expressed his pleasure at the opportunity of welcoming such a large group of business men to Frankford and asked Mr. Hefkey to accept on behalf of the visitors, his deep appreciation of the good wishes extended to him and his company. "What the Bata Company has accomplished at Frankford is the result of co-operation on the part of its workers and officials", stated Mr. Bata, saying that the company was in need of open criticism to adjust it to Canadian working conditions and to Canadian customs. Faced with the task of getting a roof over their heads and instructing local workers, his company has had a hard year, he said, but he was hoping that another year would see the company placed on a basis of economy and self-sustainment. He hoped that their enterprize would stand as a monument of good will throughout this country, he said.

Canada Looked Good

Mr. Bata told his listeners that while he was resident in England many of his countrymen had not relished the idea of living in close proximity to Hitler and the company had decided to locate in Canada. They wished to locate in a country which would be in the forefront of a war effort which it was evident would soon be waged against a common foe; they wanted to be able to lend a humble hand in an effort to bring back to freedom a country which today lives under terrible oppression.

In response to the above toast, Alderman H. J. Clarke told the gathering that Belleville pre-eminently was a city of fine homes. "With our unexcelled educational facilities, there is no finer place to bring up children", stated Mr. Clarke. Continuing, Mr. Clarke gave a comprehensive outline of Belleville's municipal organization and in conclusion extended the good wishes of the Belleville community to Frankford for continued prosperity.

Mr. Erle Denyes, Clerk of Hastings County, proposed the toast to "The County of Hastings" related bits of early county history as well as mentioning many old names connected with the first county council. "Belleville at one time was named "Meyer's Creek", he stated, "and then it was known as "The Village of Thurlow". It was during this time that Governor Gore and his wife, Bella, stayed overnight in the village and it was the result of the visit by the distinguished couple and out of respect to the Governor's wife, that the name Belleville originated.

"Hastings is rich in agricultural resources, it will be prolific in mineral production and is renowned for its fishing grounds, while the best cheese in the world is produced in Hastings", concluded Mr. Denyes.

In response Warden John L. Churcher declared he deemed it a pleasure to attend Chamber of Commerce banquets and stated he welcomed the opportunity to inspect the Bata plant. He congratulated the Bata Company for their contribution to the industrial life of the county, augmenting as it did, the agricultural, mining, lumbering and manufacturing wealth of the county.

In commenting on the county of which he is warden, Mr. Churcher declared that, like the Chamber of Commerce, the County Council prefers to be known as a builder of community welfare, and, in the case of the county, the first requisite for prosperity is good roads. Mr. Churcher outlined the county's intended program for road construction, stating that the laying of a certain amount of pavement each year had been planned.

North Hastings Proud of Her Men

He paid fine tribute to the many fine homesteads for which Hastings County is noted, but stated he was more proud to say that no section of the county, than his own, the north, had sent more men to the colors. Men who had not enlisted were aiding in defence of their country engaged in construction work while old men and boys were taking out timber for military purposes. He also paid tribute to the ladies who he said were doing great work through their various organizations.

"As long as the people of the Empire possess the morale and character of the people of Hastings County we'll always be able to sing "There'll Always Be An England," concluded Mr. Churcher.

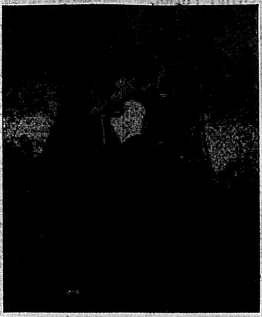
The toast to the Frankford Chamber of Commerce was proposed by Mr. J. O. Herity who stated that the location of the Bata plant near Frankford was a demonstration of the evolution of the world that "the day of the great city is past." "Recent developments show that industries are moving to small villages and it is not difficult to analyse the reason. The workers are closer to their jobs, they live in more congenial surroundings and will live happier lives," said Mr. Herity.

Referring to the fact that the Frankford Chamber of Commerce had been in existence only six months, Mr. Herity stated that its founding would give the citizens of Frankford an opportunity of self-expression. "It is a cross section of the community and its existence is proof that organization gets results," concluded Mr. Herity.

The above toast was responded to by Mr. Ross Turley.

The final toast of the evening was to "The Belleville Chamber of Commerce" and was proposed by Mr. Geo. Dickson while the response was made by Mr. R. J. S. Dewar, Registrar of Deeds for County of Hastings.

In his concluding remarks Mr. Hefkey expressed the appreciation of the members to the ladies of the Frankford Red Cross who prepared the fine repast, and also thanked the members of the Belleville Male Quartette who provided entertainment at various times during the evening, also to Mr. James Bankier and to Mr. Fletcher who rendered accordian solos, as well as Mr. Leo Riggs who acted as accompanist. The evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem and "Auld Lang Syne."



George O'Brien, ace of western action hit, "Stage to Chino," new in addition to Richard Arlen and stars, in a scene from his newest playing at the McCarthy Theatre Andy Devine in "Black Diamonds."

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By PAT USSHER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 31 (CP). — Bombs dropped by a lone raider over a south-east coast town fell on a bed of onions in a market garden. One "victim", tears streaming down his face, tersely described the odor of the onions mingled with the fumes of the exploded bombs as "unique".

Admiral Sir Edward Evans, London's shelter "dictator", sleeps under his kitchen table every night. He told newspapermen this while on an inspection tour of London shelters.

James Martin, 18, was badly cut by a bomb blast which threw him off his bicycle and through a shop window. When an ambulance arrived to take him to hospital, he finally agreed to go in it only if the bicycle came too. "I don't mind the bombing," he said, "but I don't want to lose my bike. I bought it only two days ago."

A bomb destroyed a house in London which Albert Hepworth, 67, had just bought. He and his wife escaped unhurt and went to stay in Hove. While walking there a low-flying plane appeared. Hepworth collapsed and died of a heart attack. The plane was British.

The Vicar of St. Cuthberts Church at Sprowston, Norfolk, noted for its stained glass windows, enlisted the aid of Boy Scouts to copy the windows in detail on the cardboard blackout screens which cover them.

"The higher they climb,
The further they fall,
And down will come Adolf,
His paint pot and all."

So runs a rhyme appearing in a statement issued by the Department of Native Affairs at Johannesburg for information of natives in the Union of South Africa.

A party of newspapermen on a tour of heavily raided sections of London's east end made a collection for a small boy beside whose home was a large bomb crater. They asked what he would do with money. "Buy some savings certificates," said the youngster.

A retired railway official, looking at his wrecked home in south-west London, said: "I had been working for years to get that lot together and now my life savings have vanished with one throw of Hitler's devilish dice."

Store windows in Brighton, popular peace-time seaside resort, bear "stay put" slogans telling people of the south coast town they are as safe there as anything else in Great Britain.

Centered Attention

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

When I was a lad on the farm we had a pear tree behind the house. Several feet away, on one side of the tree was a hive of bees.

When the pears ripened and fell my sister and I used to run the gauntlet of the bees to pick the luscious fruit. We were told that if we bit our tongue hard as we charged, the bees would not harm us. We believed it and acted accordingly. I can't recall ever having been stung while getting a pear but I can remember that my tongue often pained from the pinching my teeth gave it.

No doubt the scheme did keep the bees from bothering us. As we bit our tongues we centered our attention on the tongue and the pears and therefore ignored the bees. With perfect faith in our plan we had no fears; hence no jerky, fighting movements to excite the bees or invite their attack. Then, too, the mere concentration of attention on the tongue and getting the pears also helped reduce random movements by us. You know how still a little tyke can be while in some alluring mischief.

Faith Necessary

You and I have seen a person scoop up a pile of live bees in his cupped hands or go unmolested among a swarm of bees. Always this person is very serene, making slow, smooth movements and very few of them. His faith that all will work out well aids him to this end. Please don't imagine I would ever do this; my faith is too weak—except with pears. I still bite my tongue when suddenly a bee buzzes near me, but the biting is already done before I know about it.

A certain retired school teacher told me that until he was about sixteen he stuttered severely. At the suggestion of his father, a farmer, he said he cured himself in this way: "When I tried to speak, especially at school, I kept wriggling my big toe. It worked." This man showed no sign of stuttering at all.

Yes, the cure was psychologically possible. The lad believed his father. Believed that the big toe wriggling would work, this lad faithfully applied the cure. His faith removed his feeling that he never could escape from stuttering; and in the process he centered his attention on the toe-movement, and therfore away from his fear of stuttering. He might have got the same results if he had wriggled his right little finger. I'm not recommending his cure to others, though it might work with anybody who could get all the emotional accompaniments this lad got.

Neither the tongue-biting nor the big toe wriggling, had any curative value in themselves. They merely became tools that attracted the attention and created the emotions and attitudes which did the trick. Often the results we get in guiding children or adults don't work out the way we suppose they might happen.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Having assigned the tot to sit in a chair doing nothing for exactly 30 minutes, what should I say to him when the time is up.

A. Say, "The time is up." No more. No sense in asking him to promise not to repeat the offense, lest you practice him in lying. Nor to remind him of why he was punished. Better not punish a child at all if it is not very clear to him why.

Q. Would you recommend "expression" lessons and dancing lessons for the timid, non-social child?

A. Not as a rule; often they do more harm to him than good, unless they put the emphasis on group activities. Saying pieces and solo dancing, while they afford means of exploiting the young child and showing him off before adults, usually renders him less acceptable to other children his age. Let him learn to excel at having fun with them.

Q. Suppose the child of one or two is slow at learning to chew?

A. Gradually encourage him to chew crust or toast. Let the mother of the teething baby provide him with hard, safe, objects to chew on such as ivory ring, arrow root.

HUSBAND CHARGED WITH MURDER

Aircraftman Alexander Newall is Accused of 'Silk-Stocking' Slaying of Wife

Toronto, Oct. 31 (CP)—Aircraftman Alexander Newall, 27, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, was charged with murder today in the "silk stocking" slaying of his pretty wife, 22-year-old Anne Newall.

Mrs. Newall's body was found in some bushes on Toronto Island October 5th, one of her stockings knotted around her neck. Death was due to strangulation.

The courtroom was cleared today when Crown Attorney James W. McFadden and William McAllister, Sergeant of Detectives, laid the charge of murder against Newall. He had been held as a material witness along with his friend, Elna Lehto, 24, who was released last week.

Missing More Than a Week

Newall, 27, was attached to the St. Thomas station of the R.C.A.F. when he was taken into custody after his wife's body was found by a City Parks' Department employee. Mrs. Newall had been missing more than a week.

Residents of the Island told police they had heard screams on the night of September 29th and detectives, at the time the body was found, said the woman had been dead for a week. After a post-mortem examination, Dr. I. H. Erb, Provincial pathologist, told police there were marks on her body indicating she had been struck a stunning blow before the stocking was drawn around her neck.

Newall was dressed in civilian clothes when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Prentice. He was remanded until November 8th.

Miss Lehto was one of the two persons allowed to remain in the courtroom when the murder charge was read to Newall.

Protests Removal of Uniform

Newall's counsel, G. C. Elgie, protested again to the court against the police having taken Newall's air force uniform away from him. Elgie said the uniform was "very necessary in my defence....to show very clearly that this man did not and could not commit the crime."

Just before he was led back to his cell, Newall, who went to Finland early this year to fight for his wife's homeland against Russia, addressed the magistrate.

"They took my uniform, cut it up, and decided to hold it as material evidence," Newall said. "Why didn't they take it in the first place and not damage government property?"

The magistrate did not reply.

HARVEY PULFORD DIES IN OTTAWA

Termed the Greatest All-Round Athlete Ever Produced in Ottawa Valley

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP). — Harvey Pulford, native of Toronto, who came to Ottawa as a small boy and became one of Canada's all-time athletic greats, died today. He was 65.

Death came to the one-time defence star of Ottawa's famous Silver Seven hockey team and winner of championships in virtually every field of sport as a result of a weakened heart condition. He suffered from heart trouble for some years past.

He was termed the greatest all-round athlete ever produced in the Ottawa valley.

Pulford started at the age of 13 in the championship field when he became all-round champion of the Ottawa Model School. He stopped only when he was nearly fifty and had won the Ottawa City squash championships in 1923-24.

A giant in stature, he was a giant at all the sports he attempted. Added to that he was every man's friend, a quiet spoken, modest and kindly person.

Pulford was an active business man in the capital for many years representing an importing firm and later worked in the insurance field.

Pulford's fame as an oarsman rivalled his hockey play. Rowing was his favorite sport and his greatest thrill came at the English Henley in 1911 when he stroked the Ottawa Rowing Club to victory over the Thames and Belgian crews.

Pulford is survived by his second wife and one son, Harvey, Jr., of Quebec City.

Canada, Britain Spend $5,000,000 Daily in U. S.

(By C. R. Blackburn)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 31. — (CP) — Canada and Great Britain are spending about $5,000,000 a day in the United States for war materials to aid in their death-struggle with Hitlerism and its Allies.

They would spend more if the needed airplanes and other equipment were available in greater quantity—as they soon will be, an official of the British purchasing commission here told The Canadian Press today.

Since the war started the contracts entered into with United States producers for munitions and French contracts taken over by the British when France capitulated exceed $2,000,000,000, he said.

This huge spending program is administered by a staff of more than 1,500 made up of members of the commission, experts, technicians, inspectors, accountants and office workers.

Main body of this organization is in New York where the head of the organization, Arthur B. Purvis of Montreal, has his office as director general of British purchases in the United States.

It is through this body that Canadian orders for war materials which must be obtained in the United States are handled.

But while the head office is in New York, important and growing section is located in Washington. More than 100 high officials of the commission and staff occupy the entire ninth floor of the Willard Hotel, and overflow into two nearby office buildings.

Purvis Often Visits Washington

Mr. Purvis comes over from New York at frequent intervals, as does Morris Wilson, President of the Royal Bank of Canada, who is head of the aircraft section as personal representative in the United States of Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production.

Naturally only a comparatively small portion of the gigantic expenditure here is on Canada's account. But it represents an important contribution so far as Canada is concerned and Supply Minister Howe, who is here this week, seldom lets more than a month pass without conferring with the commission here.

In a few weeks Dr. Wilson's entire aircraft section will move here from New York to take up quarters in the old Mellon mansion on Massachusetts Avenue, close by the Canadian Legation.

New York is the heart of financial America and head office of many great industrial producers, but in Washington the commission can get close to the bureaus of standards, government technical branches and the administration itself.

Much interest was aroused in Washington when what appeared to be iron grills were placed in all the windows of the Willard hotel offices of the commission.

But the bars are only wood and they are burglar alarms. No one could enter without breaking the bars and the break would set off an automatic alarm. The corridors are patrolled night and day and the floor is barricaded from stairways leading to other parts of the hotel by strong steel mesh partitions.

Secret plans, specifications and other documents are in these offices and the commission is taking no chances.

C. T. Ballantine of Montreal heads the Washington division of the commission and many on his staff are Canadians.

BERLIN RESIDENTS SICK OF WAR STATES REFUGEE

Do Not Care Who Wins So Long as War Will End Soon He Says

BRITISH RAIDS HURT

Vancouver, Oct. 31 (CP)—A story of British air raids on Berlin that have made the people of the German capital "sick of war" was told here last night by a young German-Jewish refugee who arrived aboard the Japanese liner Heian Maru.

He was one of 214 passengers, many of them refugees from Nazi Germany en route to relatives in the United States.

The young refugee told of the amazement of Berliners at the first British bombing raid on the city after Nazi Air Marshal Georing had boasted no British plane ever would reach Berlin.

"The bombers (British) first came over once or twice a week, doing much damage," he related. "The people were amazed and began to criticize the German air force. When I left the British were coming over almost every night. The people of Berlin are sick of war. They dod not care who wins so long as the war will end soon."

When he left Berlin, he added, people were spending nights in what air raid shelters were available. During the day they were tired and could not work well. A lot have lost their homes in the bombings.

Another refugee told of five months he spent in a concentration camp, surrounded by electrically-charged barbed wire fences and six watch towers mounting machine guns.

When a Jewish prisoner escaped he said all other Jews in the camp were not allowed to sleep until the escaped Jew was recaptured.

Many of the refugees, who left Germany by way of Russia, refused to talk and all asked that their names not be used because of possible reprisals against relatives remaining in the Reich.

Escapes Death at Sea For Third Time

Winnipeg, Oct. 31 (CP).—For a third time, Francis Millan, 23-year-old Winnipeg seaman with the Royal Navy, has escaped death at sea.

He was listed as missing after the sinking of the Canadian destroyer Margaree Oct. 22, but it was learned yesterday he did not sail aboard the warship. He is still in the United Kingdom.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Millan, received word of his safety last night.

Millan was a survivor of the Canadian destroyer Fraser, and previously had escaped death during the Spanish civil war when his ship was torpedoed. He has been with the Royal Navy since 1934.

His parents last heard from him early this month when he said he was taking a special course at a naval station in Scotland. At that time, he said he would not rejoin his ship until Oct. 24.

"We still hoped there was some mistake when the news of the Margaree came through," said Mr. Millan.

His wife, Mrs. Mary R. Millan, lives at Victoria.

BRITAIN ORDERS LARGE NUMBER OF VESSELS IN U. S.

Will Standardize on One Type of Vessel Says Morgenthau

NO DETAILS OUTLINED

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP).—Henry Morgenthau, United States Secretary of the Treasury, disclosed today that the British government has ordered "a large number" of freight ships in the United States.

He said he did not know whether the orders involved construction of a new shipyard in the United States for exclusive British use, but he added:

"They have ordered a large number of one standardised type of freight ship."

Morgenthau declined other details, explaining that his only part in the negotiations had been to refer the British Purchasing Commission, when the Commission brought the subject to him.

"The negotiations have been going so well, that I have had no occasion to do anything further," he said.

'LIQUID' COAL NOW IN SIGHT

Manhattan, Kas., Oct. 31 (AP).—"Liquid" coal is just around the laboratory corner.

For three years Dr. J. E. Hedrick, of the Kansas State College Chemical Engineering Department, and his graduate students have been working on methods of mixing finely ground coal and oil so the fuel might be piped to industrial furnaces and mobile motors.

Now Dr. Hendrick thinks he just about has it.

Advantages envisaged for this new fuel, known technically as "colloidal fuel", include lower transportation costs, lower factory costs, more efficient heat and, finally, longer cruising ranges for battleships and destroyers.

Colloidal fuel in more or less finished state now may be seen in the laboratory. Some mixed last December still is stable—the coal hasn't settled.

Although encouraged by his success Dr. Hedrick said the experiments are far from complete and that it might be two or three years before the fuel is placed in commercial use.

EXTRA POLICE TO PATROL CITY

Precautions Taken to Safeguard Private and Public Property on Hallowe'en

Additional precautions to safeguard private and public property in Belleville was today announced by Chief Alex Kidd when it was learned that the Belleville Police Department would be augmented by several plainclothes special deputies in an effort to keep wanton destruction at the minimum on this Hallowe'en.

"For the past few years there has not been any large degree of wilful destruction of property on Hallowe'en in Belleville, but we are not losing sight of the fact that private property must be protected, so there will be two radio-equipped police cruisers patrolling the city streets all evening, as well as Traffic Officer Ellis on the motorcycle, which is also equipped with a police radio receiving set. Through Belleville police radio station CJR. we'll be in direct communication from the police station to our fleet of cruiser cars and immediately complaints are received they will be broadcast, thus assuring the public of modern up-to-date police service," explained Chief Kidd as he reminded citizens through the Ontario Intelligencer, that the police telephone number is 77.

Although many hundreds of costumed children wend their way to the Y.M.C.A. each Hallowe'en to enjoy the annual Hallowe'en party as provided the children of the community by the Y's Men's Club, some more mature youths deem it their bounding duty each Hallowe'en to cause property destruction. It is of the latter category that Belleville police must seek to keep to the minimum tonight.

"Good clean fun is always appreciated and we always make concessions for additional pent up feelings, but severe punishment awaits those who wilfully destroy property if they are apprehended," promised Chief Kidd; he further added that the police would be supplemented by several plainclothesmen, who would patrol city streets at the outskirts. The conventional hiding of doormats, ringing of door bells and tapping upon window panes is of course expected and tolerated, but otherwise "be careful boys."

JURY RETIRES

Justice MacKay Charges

The theft of the grain and its discovery in part in the Thain barn was stressed by His Lordship in his address.

"Is there any evidence of the fantastic theory of fox hunting before you? It is not for me to say", he said.

The illuminating evidence of Dr. E. R. Frankish regarding the shells found in the Wellman's stable, the spot of blood on Thain's overalls, finding of the grain bags, one bearing Arnold Wellman's name, were pointed out by His Lordship.

"Did this man visit the Wellman home and conceive the idea he should have this property and then commit murder to cover his theft? That is for you to say," he said.

Who is "Him"? Asks Judge

Referring to Lingham Martin's evidence, "I made a good job. I gave him both barrels', said to have been related by accused to him.

"Who is 'him', is there any doubt, that it was Wellman?" asked Justice MacKay. "Is there any other interpretation that it was not?"

Then there is the statement by the man at the barn, that he stole grain, for some diabolical reason, then went to his barn and blew out his brains.

Referring to the statement made by the accused to the police, Justice MacKay told the jury, that if given voluntarily, and without inducement, threat or promise of reward, it became admissible as evidence.

Judge Reads Statement

Justice MacKay at this point read the statement given to Sergt. Thompson, relating to the theft of the grain and the subsequent shooting of Arnold Wellman, as told by the accused. Other verbal statements were given by prisoners in the jail in conversation with the accused.

"The Crown contends this is wilful murder. Have witnesses called in this formidable array of evidence given this explanation. That is for you to decide."

The defence called two witnesses, men of outstanding ability and experience, who stated Thain is sane. But, even if I am criticized, I am going to present this evidence to you.

Points Out Grounds.

To establish defence on the ground of insanity, it must be proved that the party must be suffering from such disease of the mind as to not know what he was doing at the time of the commission of the crime. To be sane, accused must know the nature of the crime committed, and to know the act was wrong, Justice MacKay pointed out.

He quoted the finding of the two alienists, defence witnesses, as to the normalcy of Thain at all times.

"I say to you, you are expected by court, country and God to deal with this case by the evidence given you, and not by whim or caprice."

The Bench expressed appreciation of the manner in which the case had been presented to the court. He complimented both the Crown and Defence counsel for their efforts.

He closed with the definitions of various verdicts.

"The very abomination of this horrible crime is enough that you should exercise the greatest care in your verdict.

Mr. McCulloch, defence counsel, in his address to the jury congratulated the Crown on the presentation of a murder case in record time.

"It is not easy for us to judge a fellowman, yet it is a duty which must be performed.

"You are here to judge Fred Thain, charged with the murder of Arnold Wellman. You have heard the evidence, you are the judges. You will render your decision with the feeling that you will be able to hold your head high and say 'I did right.' "

He outlined the evidence produced by the Crown, detailing briefly, that given by each witness.

Theft Only Motive Says Counsel

He described evidence given regarding the alleged theft of the grain. It is the only motive suggested by the Crown for the crime. The grain was valued at $14.30, he said.

"Do people go around murdering people for $14.30? It is incredible. I submit the issue of the grain is very slim. I find it difficult and I suggest you will find it difficult to bring into the picture the case of the stolen grain as a motive," Mr. McCulloch said.

The Crown produced shells, the defence counsel told the jury, which after tortuous windings found their way into the hands of Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert. It also produced a gun, but there is no evidence that Thain fired the gun that killed Wellman.

Blood Could Have Come From Cut Finger

The spot of blood on the Thain overalls produced by the Crown could have come from a cut finger. It was as big as a pea, yet witnesses spoke of great masses of blood being evident where the slain man was found.

The evidence of Charles Dunham, Wellman neighbor, was one of the most peculiar pieces of testimony offered, Mr. McCulloch said. He drew a word picture of the man crossing the field as adduced by this witness and Constable Smith.

If what Constable Smith said was true, it would have been impossible for Dunham to have seen the man crossing the field.

Must Be Intent is Claim

"Murder is not just the killing of a man. There must be the intent. If this is not apparent then it is not murder," said Mr. McCulloch, illustrating his point with a recent case in which a jury not satisfied with the evidence, brought in a verdict of manslaughter.

"We know Wellman is dead. We know how he was killed. The question is, why was Arnold Wellman killed? Did Fred Thain fire the weapon with murderous intent? The Crown will try to prove that the theft of grain was the motive. Was this the motive?

"The grain was taken the day before. Why would he come back the next day with a shotgun?

"There is no reason for convicting Fred Thain for the murder of Wellman on the evidence of the alleged motive.

"Was the theft of the grain the motive for the killing of Arnold Wellman. That is the question you must find the answer to."

No Photos Offered

The Thain murder trial was the first case of its kind in which he had not offered photographic evidence, Assistant Attorney-General C. L. Snyder said in his address. "I have had jurymen faint in court, and I deemed it not fair or just to present these pictures in court.

"Two old people were horribly murdered. Two old people who lived an honest, upright life, happy in the realization that their sons and daughter were successful, were cut off at the height of their happiness.

"It was clearly a case of murder," Mr. Snyder told the jury.

Counsel Asks Question

"Someone committed that murder. Did the accused do it?"

He pointed out the fact that in 23 murder trials in his experience, only one had been committed in the presence of witnesses. "Murder to the extent of 99 per cent. is committed in secret," he said.

"Gentlemen, I suggest you do your duty. An old gentleman, Arnold Wellman, was ruthlessly and horribly murdered. I suggest to you the evidence points without doubt to the accused Fred Thain."

Crown Closes Case

"What does the accused say about this murder?"

The Crown closed its case yesterday. The defence sought to establish insanity. A thousand witnesses could have been called, but only two were produced. Two eminent doctors each in charge of thousands of mental cases swore this man is not mentally ill. He was their closest western neighbor. I never knew a man to confess to a murder he did not commit.

He had an open door to the Wellman home. He had a lot of stock. The neighbor stole his neighbor's feed. The neighbor was afraid of being found out and being tried in a courtroom. He did his best to get rid of witnesses. There were 1,100 pounds of grist in the Wellman barn. What did the accused have? No grist, but plenty of stock to feed.

The whole theme of the case is this—a man committed a crime of theft, and to get rid of the accusers, he murdered.

FELLER'S NUMBER IS DRAWN

Cleveland, Oct. 31 (CP)—Cleveland Indians did not worry today over the fact that their ace pitcher, Bob Feller, had drawn a number in the United States great conscription lottery.

Bob's serial number, 3,585, came out 7,486th in a total of 9,000 drawn, far enough back to make it problematical if he ever will reach the army.

Willkie Must Win Several Key States To be President

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Oct. 31 (CP).—Wendell Willkie's chances of becoming President of the United States rested today, it was generally agreed, upon the support the Republican nominee has attracted in the densely-populated states such as Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, California, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New York.

These states, and a few others such as New Jersey, Indiana and Maryland, are considered the ones most likely to turn over if Tuesday's election shows that a substantial part of President Roosevelt's following, that won the 1936 election in overwhelming fashion, has deserted him.

Roosevelt carried 46 states in 1936, losing only Maine and Vermont, for a record electoral-college total of 523 to eight for Alf M. Landon, Republican. In the popular vote table Roosevelt had 27,476,673 votes to 16,679,583.

But that does not mean a turnover of more than 5,000,000 votes is necessary to defeat the President. Many states gave him enormous majorities, particularly in the so-called solid south, while in others his margins were much less and could be upset by a comparative small turnover.

Argument By Republicans.

Republican strategists argue something like this:

In 1936 Landon, it developed, was an unpopular candidate, yet he polled 16,000,000 votes. Few, if any, of these votes can be expected to switch to the President—those who opposed him in his most popular year will surely oppose him, they claim.

So on that base of 16,000,000 Republicans they expect to build a substantial addition made up of (1) Democrats who oppose a third term; (2) Congress of Industrial Organizations members attracted to Willkie by John L. Lewis' break with the President (it was noted that many C.I.O. leaders have come out for the President, but any following Lewis takes with him would be net gain for the Republicans who believe few of these men voted for Landon); (3) voters who for various reasons are alarmed over the President's foreign policy which Willkie himself does not oppose, and (4) Democrats who broke with the President two years ago over such issues as the Supreme Court reorganization and the "purge" of insurgent Democrat members of congress.

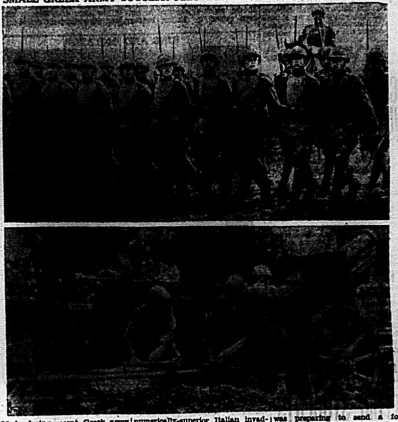
SMALL GREEK ARMY SUCCESSFULLY DEFYING IL DUCE'S MIGHT



Made during recent Greek army manoeuvres, these pictures give an idea of the types of modern soldiers making up the small army of Greece which is battling the numerically-superior Italian invaders. Experts in mountain fighting, the Greek soldiers are reported to be successfully holding up the advance of the Italian forces from Albania. Reports that Germany was preparing to send a force through Bulgaria against Greece led to grave doubts as to how long the Greeks could hold out against the combined forces of Italy and Germany.

PROSECUTION OF EVADERS SHORTLY

Full Particulars of Those Who Defied Orders to Proceed to Camp Oct. 9 Now in Hands of Registrars

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP)—Just how many men evaded the first call for military training which started last Oct. 9 has not come to the attention of Ottawa authorities yet but at the Department of National War Services it was said today that prosecutions of those who dodged the call illegally may be expected shortly.

It was explained that any follow-up action on these persons is a matter for the administrative boards and divisional registrars in the 13 administrative divisions into which Canada was divided for registration.

Full particulars of those who defied the orders to proceed to military training centres for Oct. 9 are in the hands of the divisional registrars.

Any legal action taken will be under the National War Services Regulations, which calls for a penalty, on conviction of imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months with or without hard labor, or to a fine not exceeding $200 and not less than $50 or to both imprisonment and such fine."

CAR STRIKES, INJURES CRIPPLE

Police Say Summons Being Issued Against J.L. Glass, M.P.P., Charging Failure to Report Accident

Toronto, Oct. 31.— (CP)—Police said today that they were issuing a summons against John L. Glass, Liberal M.L.A., for Toronto St. Andrew, charging him with failing to report an accident.

A car driven by Mr. Glass struck Nick Chychuk, 50, Toronto cripple, on the street last night and Chychuk was taken to the hospital with a fractured leg and head injuries. His condition is not serious.

Police said the accident occurred as Chychuk was crossing the street on crutches. Glass told police, who interviewed him at his home, that he helped assist the injured man to the curb and left after he was told an ambulance was at the scene, and after he had given his licence number to a trolley operator.

LAUNCHES CAUSE BEFORE STUDENTS

Lindbergh Declares Intervention in Europe by U.S. Would be Disaster

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 31 (AP).—A nationwide United States student organization espousing the cause of non-intervention in the war was launched today by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who said that United States involvement "would be a disaster for our own country and for Europe".

Brought here by a group of Yale undergraduates, first student chapter of the America First Committee, the flier said the United States' participation "would be a disaster for America because it would confuse and aggravate our internal problems which are critical enough without war."

"I say that it would be a disaster for Europe," he continued, "because I am convinced that the relationships of European countries cannot be solved through American interference in their affairs. I say that it would be disaster for all of us because from a purely material standpoint we are not in a position to enter this war successfully."

Stating that "we are in a better position for defence than any other nation in the world," Lindbergh declared an air attack on the United States was virtually unfeasible and that aviation has strengthened American defence, not weakened it.

"This talk of invasion over Arctic air routes and South American jungles has arisen from a combination of propaganda, hysteria, and party politics," he said.

CITY ENGINEER SEEKS CO-OPERATION OF YOUTH

Owing to the large number of excavations, that have been necessary for repairs of city streets in Belleville, City Engineer Charles Mott today issued a strong plea to the youth of the city relative to Hallowe'en pranks.

"I would urge that no Hallowe'en pranks be directed towards the numerous excavations around the city. Any molesting of barricades or the removal of lights there affixed, might result in fatal accidents, so to assure the safety of life and limb I sincerely urge that city barricades surrounding the numerous excavations in the city not be disturbed," pleaded City Engineer Mott.

Canada's Aircraft Supply Situation More Satisfactory

Air Minister Power Tells Press There is Little Likelihood of Any 'Consistent Shortage'

NEED RADIO MEN

Ottawa, Oct. 31 (CP)—Air Minister Power today described Canada's aircraft supply situation as somewhat more satisfactory than it was recently.

"We will probably never have all we want," he said, speaking particularly of planes for training in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan schools. "But we are getting along. We may be pinched at certain times owing to a shortage of deliveries but we will not have any consistent shortage."

The Minister told a press conference attended by a dozen newspaper reporters that the spare parts situation in the air force was distinctly better than it was and is steadily improving. At first, he said, the manufacturers tended to concentrate on turning out complete aircraft rather than the spare parts needed to keep aircraft in operation.

Maj. Power said he had no knowledge of the United States bomb sight or whether any steps were being taken to make it available to the Empire forces.

Canada had not enough fighter aircraft for air-tight defence of the two coasts but the squadrons on duty there would be strengthened with additional planes as they became available, subject always to the prior claims of the forces taking part in the battle of Britain.

Funds Needed For Research

The minister said he could not elaborate on the nature of the war scientific research being carried on because it was essentially secret. At a previous conference he invited voluntary contributions for scientific research, said some $2,000,000 had already been received and $10,000,000 could be used.

"We have set up a committee and commandeered the services of some of the best scientists in Canada in a search for superior weapons and developments of existing weapons," he said.

While much of the scientific development in the war so far related to air operations, both offensive and defensive, the war technical and scientific committee which handled research did work for the army and navy as well and included representatives of several government departments.

Maj. Power said Canada's policy of concentrating on the manufacture of aircraft of United States type did not involve abandonment of the manufacture of British type planes now being made in the Dominion. The Anson advanced trainer, used in Canadian air schools was a British type plane, the frame for which was produced in Canada.

In embarking on the production of new types, however, the tendency would be to make United States types rather than British types.

Apparently there are not as many amateur radio men in Canada as the government thought. Maj. Power said the response to an appeal for such men to offer their services to the air force was not satisfactory. He had been informed, he said, that since factory-made radios had become so cheap the number of young men who made their own sets and experimented with sending and receiving sets had fallen off.

The air force wants men who can repair, operate and maintain sending and receiving sets. As some skilled radio men may already be serving in the forces an effort will be made to locate them in the army, the navy and the air force and arrange for transfers where possible.

Many requests had been received for establishment of units of the air cadet corps for teen-aged boys the Minister said. Local organizations had been set up in Westmount, Que., Vancouver, and other centres but as yet they had not been coordinated on a nation-wide basis.

Maj. Power sad he had no information as to whether Great Britain was gaining air supremacy in relation to the enemy. He did not know how many aircraft Great Britain was manufacturing nor how many pilots were being turned out of British training schools.

"I think that is quite reasonable", he said when asked to comment on President Roosevelt's statement last night that the Royal Air force was stronger now than when German air attacks on Great Britain started.

Apparently, he said, the British had not lost a great number of planes and they were getting quite a number of new planes.

Some graduates of the British Commonwealth Air training schools had left for overseas, Maj. Power said but he declined to elaborate.

(Classes of air observers and air gunners recently completed their training under the plan.)

MITIASOFF FACES FIRING SQUAD

Former Director of Black Metallurgy Sentenced as Leader of 'Slander Ring'

Moscow, Oct. 31—(AP)—A. D. Mitiasoff, former director of the south and central department of Black Metallurgy (coal industry), was sentenced today to death by a firing squad as leader of a "slander ring" which he government said conducted a campaign of denunciation against Communists.

Convicted with him were A. I. Karpushin, engineer of the Leningrad Mechanical Institute, sentenced to 12 years' imprisonment and T. P. Pervushin, engineer of the Ukraine Geological Department, given five years.

The prosecution charged that the NKVD (state police) had received since 1935 a stream of letters accusing Communist party members and others of "subversive activities" and "helping the enemy." All such charges were false, it was said. The ring was said to have had units in many cities with members known by such names as "Grandmother Revolution."

KIDDIES INVITED TO "Y" FROLIC

Upwards of 500 children are expected to attend the annual Y's Men's Club Hallowe'en frolic at the Y.M.C.A. this evening. Besides an impromptu program, during which the guests will supply the entertainment, apples and candy will be given to all children attending the frolic in costume. Prizes for the best dressed, most original and other such costumes will be presented to winners of the frolic following a grand parade in the "Y" gymnasium. All children are cordially invited.

Police Blotter

Ambulances rushed to the intersection of Victoria Ave. and Pinnacle St. last evening when reports were received that a man was lying alongside of the sidewalk in apparent dire need of medical assistance. Ambulance attendants arrived and found a man in an apparent injured condition. He was rushed to the hospital.

Later police officials were called in on the matter where it was found the man was merely intoxicated and had fallen down resulting in a minor cut on the face. Police revealed today the man was an old offender and had only been released on a charge of intoxication late last week. He was placed in jail pending trial.

Abraham Dunlop, Stouffville, complained to police yesterday that a motorist had damaged the fender of his automobile on Front St. Mr. Dunlop had parked his motor car on the west side of the street and during his absence the motor car parked adjacent to the Dunlop car had been backed out, striking the Dunlop car and damaging the fenders in so doing. A pedestrian supplied Mr. Dunlop with the license plate number of the hit and drive vehicle and in turn police were given the number for investigation.

A bicycle, left parked at the upper end of Front St., yesterday, was reported stolen by Barbara Lewis, owner, 196 East Bridge St.

Two inebriates and nine transients shared the cell block at the police station last night.

'Wheels of Skoda Do Not Move As Quickly'

London, Oct. 31—(CP)—Jan Masaryk, Foreign Minister of the Czech Government in Britain, declared today that the Czechs are not carrying out organized sabotage against Germany "for the simple reason that we would be massacred."

"But," he told a meeting of the new Europe circle, "the wheels of Skoda (the great armament works) do not revolve quite as quickly as they did two years ago and things do not come out as beautifully finished as they did."

CAROL SOLICITS INTERVIEW

Ramon Serrano Suner Sends No Reply to Appeal

Seville, Spain, Oct. 31—(AP)—Former King Carol of Rumania personally solicited an interview today with Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish Foreign Minister, to seek permission to proceed to Portugal. No reply has been received.

Carol and his companions, Mme. Magda Lupescu and Ernest Urdareanu, one-time Minister of the Palace in Bucharest, have been under a polite form of arrest here for more than a week while Spain has debated their fate.

The former king also protested to the local governor against the police preventing him from leaving his hotel quarters. Members of his entourage say he spends most of his time pacing his room, smoking, while Madame Lupescu knits.

Another problem faced Carol when the servants who accompanied him from Rumania received notification they must return home or lose their citizenship.

Food, Sleeping Accommodations In London Tubes During Raids

London, Oct. 31 (CP Cable)—New measures to provide food and sleeping accommodations in London's underground railway tubes for persons taking shelter from air raid hazards were announced today by T. E. Thomas, General Manager of the London Transport Board.

When the scheme is in full swing it is expected that food trains will supply approximately 80 tube stations which are night homes for thousands of Londoners. Three-tier bunks will be built for sleeping purposes.

Manitoba Liberals Decline Comment On Coalition Gov't

Winnipeg, Oct. 31 (CP)—Members of the executive of the Manitoba Liberal Association refuse comment on the plans of Premier John Bracken for the formation of a Union Government in Manitoba.

A statement issued by W. J. Lindal, President of the Association, said that no one responsible for the Liberal party, either at Ottawa or in Manitoba, was consulted in regard to coalition plans.

It added that responsibility for the union proposals is that of Mr. Bracken and his associates.

The statement was issued following a meeting of the executive officers here last night.

Mr. Bracken announced plans for a non-partisan government early this week, confirming reports that his Liberal-Progressive administration would have the support of the Conservatives and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation groups in a non-partisan war-time government.

Since then, four of the five Social Credit members have announced their support of the Bracken Union. The fifth member, Miss Salome Halldorson, member for St. George, has not made final decision.

The statement issued by Mr. Lindal said that Mr. Bracken and those with whom he conferred undoubtedly are actuated by the highest motives and a desire to be of assistance in Canada's war effort.

SOUTH AFRICAN FORCE ATTACKS ITALIANS

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, Oct. 31—(AP)—The British command issued this communique Thursday:

"Aircraft of the South African Air Force attacked a military camp at Lugh Ferrandi, in Italian Somaliland, on Oct. 29. Bombs were dropped among buildings in the target area. Other units of the South African Air Force carried out reconnaissance flights. All of our aircraft returned safely."

The War Today

By Guy Rhoades Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Greek forces defending the mountainous terrain in front of the Metaxas line were reported today to be aided by torrential rains and to be holding fast while British troops were sent to their country's assistance.

British forces presumably from mid-east establishments, were said to have been landed on Greek islands which authorities declined for military reasons to identity.

Greek confidence remained high and semi-official Turkish sources at Ankara said Greek authorities had informed them the little kingdom could take care of the Italians and needed no military assistance from Turkey.

Italians Blame Weather

In these circumstances, the Turks said, the republic would go to war only if Bulgaria attacked Greece or if Turkish National interests became involved in the conflict.

The Italians apparently were finding the going extremely hard and war correspondents for Rome newspapers sought excuses in the weather for their army's lack of progress. The correspondent of Il Messagero wrote that rains had transformed the battlefield into a vast swamp from which the mountain peaks emerge dark and spectral."

Draw Italians Into Deep Valleys

Italian troops were reported to have lost 800 prisoners to the Greeks and to be falling for Greek strategy which herds them into deep valleys where they became targets for marksmen on the hillsides.

Apparently seeking to spare themselves as much as possible, the Italians were reported using Albanian irregulars as the spearhead of their effort to break through the Greek defences. The Greek line gave slightly in accordance with a prearranged plan and then stiffened far in front of the Metaxas fortifications.

Mussolini's men were regarded as unfortunate in their choice of an invasion springboard. Operating from Albania they were handicapped by scarcity of highways and the ruggedness of the country.

Hand-to-Hand Fighting.

Deprived by the nature of the country of the opportunity of making extensive use of mechanised equipment they were faced with the necessity of hand-to-hand fighting with the tough Greek mountain soldiers, something the Italian army as a whole appears not to relish.

The Greeks said they had an additional advantage in the islands with which the deeply-indented coast of their country is dotted. These islands, they said, made certain that ports would always be available for landing allied troops and war materials.

Elsewhere the war appeared slowed down. Bad weather handicapped air pilots, although the Royal Air Force flew through heavy snow to bomb selected objectives in Germany and some German craft appeared over Britain. The latter did comparatively minor damage.

Italy Bogged Down.

With Italy bogged down in its African campaign and facing difficulties in the Italo-Greek war, some observers expected to see German troops employed in the Mediterranean theatre. Italian sources threw out hints today that a new country would join the axis soon. It was suggested this might refer to Bulgarian cooperation against Greece.

However, it was considered doubtful if the Sofia government would be anxious to court a war with Turkey—an almost certain consequence of its involvement.

WAS TOO ZEALOUS

Toronto, Oct. 31 — A Greek restaurant manager and his chef, a compatriot, were marched at gun point from their North Toronto cafe early today and were being covered by a man who said he thought they were Germans when police arrived. Police arrested the zealot, John R. Croft of Toronto, and said he had been drinking. They also said Croft, who told police he was a member of the Legion of Frontiersmen, had a permit to have a gun in his possession. The cafe manager was Nick Barcotes and the chef was, Samuel Pappas.

Carry on Canada

The best service we can render our country and ourselves in the present emergency is to carry on our normal ways of living both at home and in business. Hoarding money is as unpatriotic as hoarding food. Unnecessary restrictions in our buying and selling could deprive thousands of a livelihood and weaken our country for war. Let us be NORMAL in our thinking and actions—in our buying and selling, and in our advertising.

"Pretty Dress you have, Miss!"

"I'm glad you like it! I saw it advertised!"

MEN and women of the world—whose taste and sangfroid are equal to any emergency—keep posted on what is new and fashionable by reading advertising. They know that advertised goods are the best to buy, for only reliable products can stand up under the constant glare of publicity. The manufacturer who makes a public claim in advertising, must be able to prove it—only questionable products are kept in the dark. That's why so many buyers prefer the advertised products.

ADVERTISED GOODS are GUARANTEED GOODS

BOMBED HOSPITALS MEET EMERGENCIES

Most Upper Floors Are Left Vacant But Raid Patients And Others Treated

London, Oct. 31 (CP)—London's hospitals carry on though more than a score of them have been damaged by bombs.

An emergency scheme, known as the "sector system," put in operation as soon as the Luftwaffe launched its heavy attacks on the Empire's capital has enabled the hospitals to handle all the raid casualties and also to continue treatment of other patients.

The sector system established a "pool" of thousands of beds in scores of institutions within a radius of 40 or 50 miles from the heart of London. In addition there are vast reserves of beds in areas further away from the metropolis.

Many of the capital's hospitals act partly as clearing centres. Few of them in inner London use upper floors.

CLASS IN MECHANICS

Besides the thousands of pilots to be turned out under the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, even greater numbers of other experts are being trained to make the Empire's air forces the world's most powerful. A class in aero-mechanics is shown here at study in one of the many schools spread across the Dominion.
